Reveal Threats to Principals.

Officials of the association of owners of small stores in the vicinity of high schools were questioned last night in the offices of Chief of Detectives Shoemaker. After statements were taken the men were ordered to return this morning for further questioning in the investigation into the bombing of Supt. William J. Bogan's home at 741 Gordon terrace early Saturday morning.

The group was summoned on the orders of Assistant State's Attorney Harry Ditchburne after Lieut. William V. Blaul found a circular sent out by the School Store Dealers' association on July 6. "We are in this fight to win," the message read. "We must win. But to win we must go beyond the purely legal."

Martin J. Wolf, president of the Associated Retailers of Chicago at 605 West Washington boulevard, declared that the circular was sent out to show the store dealers' association that they needed to enlarge their activities. As a result the dealers became a part of the Associated Retailers' organization.

Tells of Visiting Principals.

Maurice J. Hayes, secretary of the Associated Retailers, told the police that the organization has 51 members, who pay dues of $5 a month. Acting as business agent, Hayes said, he had talked to the principals of several high schools "in a courteous fashion," trying to show them that the operation of school lunchrooms and cafeterias was ruinous to the business of stores nearby.

Two of the men questioned were Peter Tatooles, who filed a taxpayer's suit to restrain the school board from operating the lunchrooms, and Gus Psalidas, 2924 New England avenue. Tatooles asserted that Psalidas, owner of a store near the Harper Junior High school, had prevailed upon him to start the court action.

"I wish I'd never got into this," Tatooles said. He admitted that he was not a taxpayer or owner of property. Tatooles said he was a waiter in a restaurant and was studying law on the side.

Herman Kallis, who organized the School Store Dealers' association, and who is active in the Associated Retailers of Chicago, also was questioned.

Attacks Secretary's Story.

The statement of Secretary Hayes of the retailers' group that he had been "courteous" to school principals was denied by Charles E. Lange, principal of the Kelvyn Park Junior High school. Lange said that Hayes and another man, who came to him recently, trod on his toes as they talked to him. Lange terminated the interview by walking away from the pair.

According to Albert W. Evans, principal of the Tilden Technical High school, the owner of one store in the neighborhood offered him $10 a month to keep quiet about the operation of slot machines in his establishment. Evans had caused the store to be raided twice a month.

Reveal Threats to Principals.

Earlier in the day it was disclosed that many principals of the sixty senior and junior high schools had received anonymous threats over the telephone and by warning notes. The school heads told their stories at a conference called by Mr. Bogan.

Roland O. Witcraft, 2141 Greenleaf avenue, principal of the Parker Junior High school, said that some one had thrown a piece of concrete with a note tied to it through the window of his home on the night of Oct. 7. Mr. Witcraft was told in the note that he was "not right with the business people" and to watch his step. On the next morning Supt. Bogan found a similar note on his porch.

Other principals said that representatives of the small store owners had appeared before them and demanded that they stop operating lunchrooms and cafeterias in their schools. Miss Emma Lou Lewis, assistant principal of the Stockton Junior High school, declared that the windows in her garage and apartment were smashed after she made an investigation of small stores in the neighborhood and reported that they were operating gambling machines and selling gin.

Other Principals Listed.

Other principals who said they had experienced trouble with the store owners are: John W. Bell, Amundsen Junior High school; Sophia Theilgard, Foreman Junior; Frank L. Morse, Harrison Technical High; Henry H. Hagen, Crane Technical High; J. Edward Huber, Stockton Junior High; Gustavus P. Drueck, Curtis Junior; William T. McCoy, Bowen High; Peter Ritzma, Farragut Junior, and Chauncey C. Willard, Phillips High.

Robins Missing 7 Weeks; His Death Feared

Alarm over the fate of Raymond Robins, nationally known social worker and dry advocate who has been missing since Sept. 3—more than seven weeks—was expressed yesterday by Salmon O. Levinson, Chicago attorney and friend of Robins. Mr. Levinson, who is noted for his efforts in behalf of international peace, said Robins' friends and relatives are beginning to fear he was slain and not kidnaped as at first believed.

An incessant search has been kept up for the missing man without success and there is little hope left, Mr. Levinson said. The aid of the United States government was obtained through President Hoover, a friend of Robins, but not a clew has been developed.

In Maine on Eclipse Day.

"Mr. Robins was sound of mind and body when I saw him last," Mr. Levinson said. "He was at my home at Kennebunk Beach, Me., on Aug. 31, the day of the eclipse. He left that evening for New York. My 10 year old granddaughter, Helen Ann Furnas, accompanied him and he delivered her to the home of her aunt.

"We had a matter under discussion on which I was to report to him as soon as I got certain information. I called him on Sept. 2 at the City club in New York and was told he had left for Washington where he would be at the Dodge hotel. When I couldn't reach him during the week-end I concluded he was visiting a brother-in-law on Long Island.

"I knew he was to see President Hoover on Sept. 6, so I called the White House and found he hadn't kept his appointment. Next day I called Mrs. Robins, who was at Southwest Harbor, Me. She told me she hadn't heard from him since Sept. 3. She said Sept. 6 was her birthday and that wherever he was he had never before missed calling her on her birthday.

His Baggage in Order.

"The only trace we got was that he had left his baggage at the desk of the City club, saying he would call for it later. He left the club with a package under his arm. After President Hoover put the secret service on the case Mr. Robins' baggage was brought to my place in Maine. On opening it we found that everything was in order, which showed that his mind, too, was in order.

"The extra pair of shoes he usually carried with him was all that was missing. We supposed the package he carried contained the shoes which he probably was about to take to a repair shop.

"President Hoover and Senator Borah of Idaho, Mr. Robins' good friends, are aghast that such a thing could happen to a man of his prominence. They regard his disappearance as a challenge to civilization. To think that a man who has lived in the tenements to help his fellow man and devoted his life to uplifting humanity can disappear in the height of his vigor and power is a shock to the nation.

Robins Called Unafraid.

"Mr. Robins was impervious to fear. He risked his life fifty times in Russia. Like myself he was in favor of this country's recognizing the Russian government.

"Contrary to general belief, Mr. Robins was not in favor of the 18th amendment and the Volstead law. But when prohibition became the law he was in favor of giving it a fair test. He went around the country speaking for it and spoke in every state in the Union. He had prepared a statement in favor of the reelection of President Hoover.

"He did have some trouble with the bootleggers in Florida. He had a home in Brooksville, Fla., and spent some time there, constantly trying to stop the flow of liquor through the county and promote decent government. That's the only reason any of his friends can give for any harm being done to him, and now we are beginning to fear the worst."

Fox Bites London Bobby; "Tallyho" and Hunt Is On

LONDON, England, Oct. 24.—(AP)—Out of the fog and rain which made London's suburbs especially uncomfortable today there darted a fox. It dashed up to a policeman, bit him sharply on the ankle and darted away. Two hundred excited citizens of Dulwich village, shouting, "Tallyho!" seized their umbrellas and sticks and joined the hunt. The bobby caught reynard first and put him out of the running with his club.

9 Cent Milk Is Predicted for Chicago

BY PAUL POTTER.

Milk will be retailing for 9 cents a quart in Chicago and the suburbs in the near future, according to predictions made last night by several observers who are close to the situation. Milk has not sold at that price on a large scale in Chicago since 1917.

Negotiations pointing toward a reduction of 2 cents a quart from the present price of 11 cents are now pending between the large dairy companies and the milk drivers' union. Their result hinges largely on the outcome of a massmeeting of 7,000 drivers which will be held at union headquarters in Ashland boulevard Thursday evening.

Companies Promise Trims.

Nine cent milk, it is said, will mean a $10 weekly cut in the wages of drivers. They now get $45 a week as the result of a $5 reduction accepted last May. The drivers were formally notified yesterday by the dairy companies of the proposed $35 weekly scale.

Union officials were told that this scale is necessary if the dairies are to supply 9 cent milk to compete with independent concerns who have been underselling the large companies in recent months. Dairy officials promised the drivers that the companies and the farmers will lower their own costs, too, in an effort to meet the new competition.

These points will be discussed at Thursday's meeting, following which negotiations will probably be resumed with the dairy companies. These concerns have appointed a committee of seven men with Frank H. Kullman of the Bowman Dairy company as spokesman.

Competition Growing Fast.

Dairy officials have emphasized the competitive conditions which have been developing rapidly in the milk industry in recent weeks. There are at least six companies now underselling the larger concerns. In addition, many farmers are selling directly to consumers for as low as 5 cents a quart. Some farmers declare that even if they gave away their milk it would still be sold by the dairy companies at 8 cents a quart because of distributive costs.

The argument of the drivers is that while their pay is now $45 a week, deductions for union dues, assessments for the support of unemployed drivers, and heavy losses because of bad accounts and robberies reduce their average weekly income to $35.

In August, 1917, when milk last retailed here for 9 cents a quart, drivers received $21 a week. As the price of milk mounted their wages rose until they reached $50 a week.

ASSAILS PLANK ON RUM; CALLS IT HYPOCRISY

Newark, N. J., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—Speaking before an audience of thousands here in wet New Jersey, former Gov. Alfred E. Smith assailed the Republican party tonight for broken promises, bigotry, deception and hypocrisy and called President Hoover the leader of the dry forces of America. It was his first direct appeal for support to Franklin Roosevelt.

His speech was delivered before an immediate audience of 17,000 in the 113th Infantry armory from a platform on which sat the leaders of the Democratic party in New Jersey.

Smith's words were carried, by means of loud speakers, to thousands swarming the streets within a radius of half a mile. The radio carried it from coast to coast and especially to those wet centers of the east which Mr. Smith sought to win to Gov. Roosevelt's cause. He told his audience that the Republican party was the "party of bigotry" four years ago when he ran for President. He said it was the party of "deception and hypocrisy today."

Mr. Smith at the outset of his speech said he regretted he could not speak in several states—particularly Illinois, where he appealed to all his friends to vote for Horner for governor and Courtney for state's attorney.

Raps Willebrandt, Donovan.

Much of his fire was concentrated on Mabel Willebrandt, "politically minded Methodists," and unkept Republican promises. He saved some of his ammunition for Col. William Donovan, Republican nominee for governor of New York. It was no other than this same "Wild Bill," he reminded his audience, who helped outline the anti-Catholic campaign against him four years ago.

Not until the last few words of his speech did Mr. Smith get around to indorsing Gov. Roosevelt and Speaker Garner. When he did it he did so in these words:

"When you go home tonight search your conscience, search your memory and see if you can think of one great big public question that has been settled by the present Republican administration. See if you can find one great big public question that they made a reasonably good attempt to settle. Instead of that we received a program of threat that if the Republican party is defeated the return of prosperity will be retarded. I deny that, and I deny it emphatically, and I state from this platform to my nationwide audience that the election of the Democratic ticket is the best way to solve these problems and the best way to bring back prosperity—the election of Roosevelt and Garner."

Author of Repeal Plank.

Mr. Smith was in fine fettle. He lambasted prohibition and its works, attacked what he called Republican shortcomings and claimed credit for authorship of the Democratic platform plank, promising ultimate repeal of the 18th amendment and immediate modification of the Volstead act. It was his plank, accepted by the Roosevelt leaders in Chicago, he disclosed.

The "happy warrior's" speech was just the sort of campaign address Democratic national headquarters had been hoping he would deliver—a speech designed to hold wet voters in line and keep the Catholics of New Jersey and New England from straying from the reservation in pique at the Democratic party for passing him by at the Chicago convention.

Recalls Plea to Preachers.

Mr. Smith's attack upon Mrs. Willebrandt, one of the principal Republican orators against him in 1928, was full of fire and invective. He reminded his vast audience that Mrs. Willebrandt went into Ohio and speaking before the Methodist ministers, urged them to use their influence and votes of their 500,000 members to swing Ohio for Hoover. After the campaign he said Mrs. Willebrandt was "put on the shelf," but since that time she has written a book and disclosed that she made her Ohio speech "at the request of the Republican national committee." He charged it was edited by the committee before she delivered it.

"All the bigotry and intolerance that arose throughout the country because

President Hoover's advisers announce as a certainty another invasion of the middle west. Following the President's speech in New York next Monday, he plans addresses in Indiana and Illinois. Indianapolis and Chicago are picked as likely stages for speeches.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Republican national headquarters declared last night that the "ground swell is now for Hoover." Reports from midwest states, upon which the campaign is now being concentrated, led the party leaders to claim that Hoover's series of addresses, from the opening Des Moines speech to the Detroit address of Saturday, have had a cumulative effect all in the direction of the Republican ticket.

Party scouts kept the wires to the Palmer house hot with messages, the general burden of which was that among the farm vote a "tremendous swing" towards Hoover is in progress.

Republican managers in nearby states sent in word that Iowa, a Republican stronghold for three-quarters of a century, is headed towards Hoover. They claimed Kansas is even more likely to go Republican than Iowa.

Claim Swing in Indiana.

In Indiana the G. O. P. reports spoke of "rapidly changing sentiment" in agricultural regions which have been setting up anti-Hoover shouts. Another two weeks, the Hoosier Republican managers at Indianapolis declared, and Indiana will be in the bag for Hoover.

As to Illinois, which a week ago some of the Republican officials were conceding to Roosevelt by a minimum of 200,000 and which the Democrats are figuring on getting by pluralities ranging anywhere from half a million to a million, Republican cheer leaders sent in word that the situation is changing rapidly. While the Republicans still keep Illinois in the doubtful column, they maintain that if the "ground swell" keeps up during the next two weeks Illinois may fall into Hoover's lap.

In all the forecasting, however, most of the dopesters frankly admitted that they have no gauge on the probable size of the "agin the ins" vote Nov. 8, and it is still the great unknown factor.

Call for Springfield Speech.

Renewed calls were made yesterday for speeches by President Hoover in the middle west. A delegation from Sangamon county, headed by State Senator Earl Searcy and accompanied by Committeeman Frank L. Smith, called at national headquarters to ask that the President speak at Springfield on his proposed western trip.

An Illinois address given at the state capital, they argued, would be even more effective than one delivered in Chicago. They theorized it would reach the same number of listeners, over the air, anyhow, and that a rally downstate would serve to bring together Republicans from all the counties.

Chairman Everett Sanders explained to the callers that it has not been definitely decided whether the President will speak in Illinois.

A Champaign delegation headed by Ben M. Price also asked for a Hoover speech in that city.

Weeks ago it was reported that the White House had Springfield under consideration for a speech. In Indiana reports were that Indianapolis has almost been definitely selected for an address by the President.

Bingham Speaks Here Tonight.

Meanwhile, on the liquor issue, preparations were made for a rally tonight at the Coliseum, where Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut, who led the fight for the wet repeal plank which was rejected by the Republican national convention, is billed to rip into the Democratic dripping wet

HORNER BRANDS SMALL A FAKE WET ADVOCATE

Judge Launches His City Campaign.

Judge Henry Horner, Democratic candidate for governor, opened his Chicago campaign last night by assailing the "hypocritical pretenses" of Len Small, his Republican opponent, and the latter's campaign manager, a former Republican mayor of Chicago. They have adopted the chameleon quality of changing coats at will, he charged. Judge Horner opened his home campaign in a speech at the Logan Square Masonic temple, 2451 North Kedzie avenue.

"The last two weeks of the campaign see some lightning change acts on the part of our opponents," the judge told a packed hall. "After months spent in warning the voters of the 101 downstate counties that Chicagoans were their natural enemies and that anything that was done to aid Chicago was to harm the rest of Illinois, Len Small is in the city telling every one who will listen what friends he and a former mayor are of Chicago.

Recalls Prohibition Straddle.

"This right about face on the part of both should be a surprise to no one, particularly to those who know about their change of attitude on one of the main issues of the campaign—that of prohibition.

"As I was on my way to this hall tonight I was handed a card which was headed in big letters, 'If you are a wet,' and recommended that the reader attend a meeting at the Coliseum. I was surprised because I knew that the only party which was genuinely and truly opposed to prohibition in the present campaign was the Democratic party, and I had not heard of any Democratic meeting that was to be held this week in the Coliseum. I took another glance at the card and I was still more surprised to find it bore a facsimile signature of the former mayor.

Two Pledges Recalled.

"I remembered his record on prohibition. You will recall that when he was first elected mayor of Chicago it was because he signed two pledges—one of the Anti-Saloon league and one of the United Societies for Self-Government. The one pledge bound him to close the saloons on Sunday; the other bound him to keep them open. But he didn't hesitate. He signed them both just as he would sign any other diametrically opposed pledges if he thought he could gain votes for them. You will remember that he hesitated for a few months and then kept his pledge to the Anti-Saloon league and for the first time in its history the people of Chicago were obliged to abandon their customs and habits of a lifetime and personal liberty ceased to exist in the second largest American city.

"The action of the former mayor was hailed by the Anti-Saloon league and he became one of its champions.

Small and the Dry League.

"It was shortly after this that he decided to run Len Small as a candidate for governor. He knew ahead of time that downstate Republicans could not be depended upon to support a candidate indorsed by himself. He knew that he could give Small plenty of votes in Cook county, but he needed votes downstate. He and Small then thought of the powerful Anti-Saloon league which existed downstate and which had dictated the election of members of the legislature in many districts.

"An alliance was formed and Small received the support of the Anti-Saloon league in the ensuing campaign. The league was able to give him a few votes downstate and after finding out how many were needed to nominate him the former mayor released the returns on the Chicago votes, which had been kept secret.

"Backed by Dry League."

"In the campaign that followed and again four years later the Anti-Saloon league was one of the most influential organizations that supported Small. In the two campaigns he was opposed by Democrats of the highest standing—Norman L. Jones, now a justice of the Supreme court, and Floyd E. Thompson, former chief justice of the Supreme court. Every civic organization in the state supported these candidates and they were given the indorsement of thousands of independent Republicans, but the Anti-Saloon league never hesitated an instant.

"It knew its men and it knew that as long as it remained powerful, Len Small and the former mayor could be depended upon to do its bidding and they did. Through their satellites in the legislature, the Illinois prohibition act was passed. Under its provisions spies and snoopers were permitted to enter the homes of citizens of the state to search for contraband beverages and to seize them when they were found. Len Small as governor signed that act and he gave it his support.

Cites Sudden Switch.

"When the tide mounted against prohibition the former mayor began to talk wet and a little later Small fell into line and today—in Chicago particularly—they would have you believe that they were champions of repeal of the 18th amendment and the Volstead act.

"What hypocrisy! We who have been steadfastly opposed to prohibition have some respect for those who really believed in it. There are thousands of conscientious men and women who are sincere in their faith, but for the men who drink wet and vote dry, who were for prohibition when they thought it popular and who are against it now that it is unpopular, we can have nothing but contempt."

"Who would believe that they were sincere on any question? Who would believe a single promise that they made?

"And when they add to their hypocrisy on prohibition the hypocrisy of being foes of Chicago downstate and pretended friends of Chicago in Chicago, they sink even lower in popular estimation.

"Record Won't Bear Light."

"If there were no other issues in the present campaign; if, in every other respect, the Republican candidate and his aids were men who had admirable records, who had served the state and the city well, and had behaved with credit to their party, they still should be rejected because of their mendacity and their hypocrisy.

"But you people know that neither the candidate nor his sponsor have records which will bear the light. You know the story of the looting of the city treasury under the former mayor, the waste of millions, the scandal of the enormous payments to the experts and to paving contractors, the diversion of the $65,000,000 in the traction fund and the financial mismanagement which left the city without adequate funds."

As a final blow, Judge Horner told of the increasing costs of state government which he said Illinois witnessed under Small and of the $1,300,000 judgment entered against the former governor by the Illinois Supreme court in the interest suit, which Small compromised by paying the state $650,000.

MAYOR STICKS TO HIS BAN ON SHOWBOAT PLAYS

The statement of Edwin Wapler, manager of the Great Lakes Show Boat corporation, that he will pay the regular amusement license fee that is charged other theaters failed yesterday to shake Mayor Cermak's determination to prevent the presentation of melodrama in the show boat "Dixiana" at a location in the Chicago river.

The mayor reiterated his opinion that the show boat would compete with theaters, despite the declaration of Mr. Wapler that his troupe will give only old fashioned melodramas unlike the entertainment that the established theaters would provide.

"I have no bias in the matter," said the mayor, "but I believe that the show boat would offer our established theaters that help to maintain the local governments through the payment of real estate taxes, unfair competition. There are seventeen legitimate theaters in Chicago, and twelve of them are closed. Why cannot the Show Boat corporation give its melodramas in one of these tax-paying houses?"

Mr. Wapler replied that the novel show boat staging would attract visitors and stimulate business. He pointed out that the men behind the "Dixiana" are Chicago taxpayers, and that $53,000 of Chicago money was spent in the boat's construction.

JURY HOLDS FATE OF PASTOR TRIED AS WIFE SLAYER

Muskogee, Okla., Oct. 24.—(AP)—A jury instructed to vote for acquital, the electric chair, or life imprisonment late today was given the case of the Rev. S. A. Berrie, charged with the poison murder of his first wife, Mrs. Fannie Berrie.

In final arguments the minister was pictured as a "representative of the devil" and again as an innocent man hounded by "cunning" prosecutors.

The preacher's pretty bride of last May sat by his side throughout the day. They were married less than two months after the first Mrs. Berrie collapsed at a church meeting and died in convulsions last March 21.

Unfrocked by his presbytery for alleged heretical teachings even before he was arrested, Berrie lost his appeal to the state synod only last Saturday.

After about two hours the jury filed back into the courtroom to report that it had reached no verdict, but Judge W. J. Crump directed that if no verdict was reached by 11 p. m. the jurors should retire for the night.

REVIEW DENIED TO CONVICTED REALTY BROKER

The United States Supreme court yesterday refused to review the case of Hugo L. Goetz, former real estate broker, who was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary last November by Federal Judge John P. Barnes for concealing assets in bankruptcy.

Goetz formerly had a real estate company at 134 North La Salle street. He filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in 1928, stating that his liabilities were $564,240 and his assets only $1,002.

At his trial before Judge Barnes it was shown that Goetz received $247,000 from a real estate syndicate in which he was interested after he had filed the bankruptcy petition and endeavored to withhold the money from his creditors.

Alleged Crook Is Returned to City from St. Louis

Archie Goldstein, 47 years old, who told the police that he was once a Rogers Park physician but lost his standing when he became a dope addict, was brought to Chicago from St. Louis last night by Sergt. Thomas Alcock of the detective bureau to face two charges of operating a confidence game and one of larceny. On July 7, representing himself as a visiting physician, it is alleged, he entered a locker room in Passavant hospital and stole a wallet containing $40 belonging to Dr. Carl F. Bookwalter, 104 South Michigan avenue. The other charges are for passing bad checks.

GEORGIANS HEAR ROOSEVELT PLAN FOR PROSPERITY

Insists Hoover Farm Board Squanders 500 Million.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—Pressing hard in these last days of the campaign to hold the support of the American farmer, Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt tonight addressed himself again to farm issues.

Climaxing two thrill packed days in Georgia, which has wildly acclaimed Mr. Roosevelt as an adopted son, the Democratic presidential nominee told the thousands who packed the Atlanta auditorium that the object of his administration in restoring general prosperity to the United States "must be the rebuilding of the rural civilization of America."

Swings at Hoover and Hyde.

Mr. Roosevelt declared President Hoover was advocating a "doctrine of despair." He also criticized Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde. A great part of his address dealt with the possibilities of reforestation as a double aid to agriculture and to unemployment.

Secretary Hyde has ridiculed the Roosevelt reforestation plan, and the governor, replying, said a child in kindergarten would have known his subject better than did Mr. Hyde.

Mr. Roosevelt summed up the agricultural issues of the campaign, as he sees them, in the following excerpts from his speech:

"Now, my friends, let me make clear, in as emphatic words as I can find, the fundamental issue in this campaign.

No One Knows Miracle Formula.

"Mr. Hoover believes that farmers and workers must wait for general recovery until some miracle occurs by which the factory wheels revolve again. No one knows the formula of this miracle.

"I, on the other hand, am saying that I believe we can restore prosperity by reestablishing the purchasing power of half of the people of the country; that when this gigantic market of 50,000,000 people [the rural population] is able to purchase goods industry will start to turn, and the millions of men and women now walking the streets will be employed.

"I am, moreover, enough of an American to believe that such a restoration of prosperity in this country will do more to effectuate world recovery than all of the promotional schemes of lending money to backward and crippled countries could do in generations. In this respect I am for America first.

Resume March to Better Days.

"When we stop listening to the apology that 'things might have been worse' and give our whole-hearted support to those who preach the gospel that through action they are going to make things better, then and then only will America resume her march to a better day."

Mr. Roosevelt referred with pleasure to the fact that a dozen members of the United States senate were present with him on the platform, and he pledged a closer cooperation to exist between himself and congress if he is elected. He said there "will be a new deal in the relationships between the White House and Capitol hill."

Then the governor praised the administration of Richard Russell as governor of Georgia. Gov. Russell had balanced the state budget and had done it by cutting expenditures instead of by raising taxes.

"I want to say that loud enough to be heard in Washington, too," the governor added, "and I want to say also, loud enough to be heard in that section of Washington in which the White House and the treasury are located, that Gov. Russell did not wait for a political campaign to start considering how to get within his income."

Turns to Farm Question.

Going then to the farm question, Mr. Roosevelt reiterated that his first and basic principle as President would be to use his influence with local taxing bodies, and his direction over federal economies, to lift "from the back of the farmer some of his load of taxation."

"I wish that the government at Washington had followed this policy," the governor went on, "because while it has spent millions to gather information it has been so confused by the mass of this information that it has had no opportunity to know what it all means. I believe that we ought to have in Washington a little less research and a little more thinking; fewer figures and more ideas; fewer commissions and more leadership. We ought to have less vacillation and more action.

"The time has come to eliminate political secretaries of agriculture and to substitute for them a secretary whom the farmers and the foresters will recognize as one of their own. We are certainly paying enough for the department of agriculture to get something more useful than we are now getting. I have already proposed its reorganization. I am going to insist that we get more service for the farmers for less money."

Refers to Easing Mortgages.

Declaring that he would relieve the plight of the farmer faced with loss of his home by mortgage foreclosure, Mr. Roosevelt interpreted the Des Moines speech of President Hoover to have the President saying that most farmers who had lost their homes in this manner were willing to accept foreclosures.

"If the President is sincerely of the opinion that these farmers are willing to be driven from their homes we cannot hope for any enthusiastic action upon his part to stop the foreclosures," Mr. Roosevelt declared, as he said he was unable to conceive that farmers were "willing and anxious to lose their homes in which their fathers and mothers lived and died, and in which their children were born."

The governor explained his plan for levying a domestic tariff on farm crops, sufficient to give the farmer a price for his products to enable him to live comfortably. He condemned the "experiment of Mr. Hoover" in establishing speculation in farm products whereby "$500,000,000 of the money of the taxpayers was squandered," and he pointed out that under his plan the increase of the farmers' prices does not come out of the public treasury.

Quoting the Democratic platform declaration against the farm board's activities, Mr. Roosevelt declared:

"This has had the splendid effect of causing an awakening in the White House and forced the President for political expediency, in the closing days of a campaign, to confess this abject failure of his experiments, and to promise that after the election he will see what can be done to put an end to these false stabilization operations of which the nation complains and by which the farmers have been destroyed."

Referring to reforestation, he said that was of more concern in the older states east of the Mississippi because in the early days millions of acres which should have been left to forestry were cleared for agricultural purposes.

"Everyone knows that we are using up our American timber supply much faster than the annual growth of new timber."

Calls It Common Sense.

The governor said it was common sense and not fantasy to invest money in tree crops just as much as to grow annual agricultural crops, and he declared the investment return was just as certain.

"I am convinced," he said, "that herein lies a fertile field not only for the legitimate investment of capital, but also for the employment of labor."

Then indulging in some indictments of Secretary Hyde, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"There are, of course, a few childish minds who think of reforestation or the growing of tree crops as a process of setting out little seedling trees which have been grown in nurseries. Anybody who has advanced beyond the kindergarten stage knows better. Almost all practical commercial reforestation is in its origin an act of nature and not of man.

Winds Carry Seeds.

"The winds of Heaven carry the seeds from trees that have already come to maturity, scatter them over the ground, and the warm earth and the rain and the sun do the rest.

The use of the labor of man enters into the picture when it becomes necessary to eliminate the less valuable types of trees among the young growth, to cull out the crooked trees—the decayed trees or the undergrowing trees and to prevent ravages of fire in the growing forests.

"These are things which any beginner in agriculture or in forestry should know, and I may add, are things which my secretary of agriculture will know.

"Is there any good reason, financial, common sense, or otherwise, why the federal government should not undertake the proper care of its own property? Here again is another field for the employment of great numbers of our citizens."

The Roosevelt special train left Atlanta tonight for Raleigh, N. C., where he will stop for fifteen minutes and in the afternoon at Richmond, Va., for another quarter hour, with a dozen or more shorter stops in between.

Tomorrow night he will deliver another major address at Baltimore. On Wednesday morning the party will reach New York City and Gov. Roosevelt plans to go the same day to Albany, to plunge afresh into his gubernatorial duties.

NORRIS ILL; PLACE IS TAKEN BY LA FOLLETTE AT SPRINGFIELD

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—Gov. Philip La Follette of Wisconsin, pinch hitting for United States Senator George W. Norris, spoke in behalf of Gov. Roosevelt at Springfield tonight. He addressed an audience at the state arsenal, where Senator Norris had been scheduled to speak on the public utilities issue. Senator Norris, meantime, was ill at St. John's hospital, where he had been ordered to bed by Dr. Franklin Maurer.

The Nebraskan picked up his cold while motoring in a heavy fog from Des Moines to Springfield with Yale B. Hoffman. Mr. Hoffman is similarly affected. It is probable Senator Norris will not resume his campaign before Wednesday. He is scheduled for addresses in Kansas City, Laramie, Denver, and Salt Lake City. The Kansas City speech is out.

Newton Jenkins, unsuccessful Chicago candidate for the Republican nomination for United States senator in April, presided at the arsenal meeting. Although it had been announced Norris would not speak, there was an audience of 2,000 on hand.

As a curtain raiser the reply of Senator Otis F. Glenn to the utterances of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt on the liquor question was sent out in printed form yesterday by national headquarters. Senator Glenn set forth that the Democrats in house and senate, after the national convention, defeated immediate modification of the Volstead act.

Hits Democrats' Action.

Mr. Glenn decried the action in Washington after the Democrats got back to congress from the national convention where the party came out as an advocate of repeal of the 18th amendment and for immediate modification of the Volstead act to permit beer.

"When it was apparent that the Democrats did not intend to take any steps for 'immediate modification,'" said Senator Glenn, "then Senator Bingham, Republican, began a persistent fight for immediate modification and for 'legal beer' in line with the Democratic platform promise.

"On the floor of the senate Republican senators openly and repeatedly pleaded with the Democrats to stand for immediate modification, and assured them of enough Republican votes to pass an act to immediately modify the Volstead act if they, the Democrats, would support with their votes their party declaration. This the Democrats refused to do. Of twenty-one Democratic senators who participated in the Democratic national convention only four voted for immediate modification."

Hastings Repeats Charges.

Accusations that Gov. Roosevelt in 1928 was a director of the Consolidated Automatic Merchandising corporation were repeated by United States Senator Daniel O. Hastings of Delaware yesterday at national headquarters. Mr. Hastings made them in a speech last week in Maryland.

"I called attention to the promises held out by the promoters of this corporation of profits reaching more than $18,000,000 the fifth year," said Mr. Hastings in a statement issued by headquarters. "I then showed that the company had a loss of more than half a million the first year, more than $800,000 in the second, and a larger amount in the third year, and that the stock which was sold to the public for $55 was now selling for less than 50 cents.

"Henry Morgenthau, a friend of Gov. Roosevelt, stated what I said was untrue and misleading, and positively denied Gov. Roosevelt was ever a director of this corporation. He calls attention to the fact that Moody's Manual, which I quoted as my authority, does not show Mr. Roosevelt as a director. That is correct. I made a mistake in quoting Moody, but in Poor's Manual for 1928 Mr. Roosevelt's name is given as a director. The records in the Boston Stock exchange and the New York Curb exchange show him as a director.

"The corporation was one of the typical high powered stock promotions which the governor is now inveighing against in his campaign speeches and which he is declaring will not be permitted to bloom if he is elected."

NOTES OF THE CAMPAIGN

Isaac Van Grove, conductor of the Chicago Civic opera and of the Cincinnati opera, has been appointed Illinois chairman of the Hoover-Curtis musicians' committee.

Marvin B. Pool, general manager of Butler Brothers, in a statement issued last night at Republican headquarters said: "If the Republican party fails to continue in power and Messrs. Roosevelt and Garner assume leadership with the Democratic party free to continue tactics so obvious in the present congress, we will probably be in for at least two years and perhaps more of experimental remedies and changes that may bring about a more disastrous situation than we have yet faced."

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Conkey, director in Illinois for the Shareholders of America, an organization supporting Roosevelt and Garner, announced yesterday that bronze medallions showing the profiles of the two candidates will be sold today by women throughout Chicago. The medallions, replicas of a piece done by Gutzon Borglum, sculptor, are designed to fit in coat lapels.

Congressman William H. Dieterich of Beardstown, Senator Otis F. Glenn's opponent in the race for the United States senate, declared in an address last night that the treasury, under the direction of Andrew Mellon, former secretary, "gave away in ten years more than four billion dollars as refunds, rebates and credits on income tax schedules. This," he declared, "is disposing of the revenues at the rate of one and one-quarter millions of dollars a day."

State's Attorney Swanson declared last night in an address before a Republican massmeeting in the 39th ward that "crime reduction in Chicago can be furthered by surety and quickness of punishment rather than by severity of punishment."

C. Wayland Brooks, Republican candidate for state treasurer, has been indorsed in resolutions adopted by the Illinois Republican Service Men's league and by the Service club of Park Ridge.

R. I. Randolph, head of the Secret Six and former president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, issued a statement yesterday indorsing the candidacy of State Senator Tom Courtney for state's attorney.

Headquarters of the Roosevelt Business and Professional league were given in THE TRIBUNE as 70 West Washington street. They have been changed to B floor of the Congress hotel, the organization announces.

President Hoover has a slight advantage over Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt on the floor of the Chicago Mercantile exchange, a poll yesterday revealed. Mr. Hoover received 53 per cent of the votes cast. Judge Horner led Len Small by a large majority and Senator Courtney topped State's Attorney Swanson.

Alleged St. Louis Slayer Held in $20,000 Bail Here

William Brueley, alias C. F. Bradshaw, 673 Roscoe street, who is wanted on charges of murdering a man and his wife in St. Louis, was held to the grand jury in bond of $20,000 yesterday by Judge Frank M. Padden on a charge of robbery. The high bond was set, Judge Padden said, to keep Brueley in custody while the St. Louis authorities complete extradition proceedings. Brueley was arrested here on the charge of robbing George S. Stefnberg, 425 Roscoe street, of his automobile.

CO-DEFENDANT OF BAIN SAYS HE HAS NO DEFENSE CASH

Edward C. Barry, a vice president of the closed West Englewood Trust and Savings bank, a Bain institution, pleaded yesterday that he is penniless and unable to employ an attorney to defend him on charges of accepting deposits while the bank was insolvent. Barry was arraigned before Chief Justice John Prystalski of the Criminal court as co-defendant with John Bain, his son, John H. Bain, and his son-in-law, W. Merle Fisher.

Judge Prystalski continued the case until tomorrow and urged Barry to continue his efforts to raise funds for a defense. If he fails the judge indicated that the public defender might be assigned to the case.

"You've been in the banking business," the judge said. "You should know many people."

"Yes," said Barry, "I do know many people, including lawyers, but they don't know me now."

PLACE FOR FINAL CAMPAIGN PLEA, HOOVER PROBLEM

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—President Hoover's final drive for reelection may be staged in the wabbling states of the middle west, rather than at Palo Alto, the President's California home.

At the close of a day during which the President worked on his speaking program for the final weeks of the campaign officials close to the White House said Mr. Hoover certainly would invade the west again, and might possibly deliver a series of speeches in Illinois, Minnesota, Indiana, and other western states. It seemed certain that he would deliver speeches in Indiana and Illinois following the campaign address he is to make at Madison Square Garden in New York next Monday.

Officials said the program had not reached the stage where places and dates could be definitely stated. Indianapolis is a certainty. One speech is to be made in Illinois, probably in Chicago, although some other Illinois city may be selected.

Final Decision Waits.

The number of addresses which the President will make in the middle west depends upon the ability of the Republican leaders to persuade the candidate to end his personal part of the campaign by staging a speaking tour across the continent which would take him to Palo Alto in time to vote Nov. 8. Many Republican leaders, including influential members of the cabinet, advised the President today that his prospects for reëlection would be greatly enhanced if he extended his speaking campaign to the Pacific coast.

Should the President decide to pass up the Pacific coast trip, however, on the basis of the arrival recently of more cheerful reports from California, it is highly possible that Mr. Hoover will choose one of the central states cities for his final out of town plea for support at the polls. Whether the President considers a radio appeal for votes from the White House on election eve has not been made known.

Puts Time on New York Speech.

White House officials said today that it was extremely unlikely President Hoover would have time to make another outside speech prior to the New York address next Monday. The President desires to spend as much time as possible perfecting the New York address, in order for it to be the high spot of his campaigning for the electoral votes in the east.

Reports that President Hoover might go to Indianapolis Thursday for a speech Friday were discounted, although not completely thrown down.

Secretary of the Treasury Mills, after several hours at the White House today, said that he hoped Mr. Hoover would spend a major part of the time between now and election out in the field working for votes. The secretary was highly optimistic of Republican chances—in fact, confident President Hoover would be reëlected. "The letters and reports reaching the White House and my office confirm earlier indications that the tide actually has turned and is now running strongly in favor of the President," the secretary said.

During the next few days Secretary Mills will deliver speeches in Cincinnati, Toledo, Utica, N. Y., and Worcester, Mass. In November he will speak in Brooklyn and Newark. Secretary Stimson will speak in Ohio next week.

Federal Dole Demanded.

A demand for a federal dole was taken to the White House today by a delegation representing the Marine Workers' Industrial union and the water front unemployed councils of New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore. George Mink, national chairman of the union, arrived at the executive offices at 10 o'clock, prepared to deliver personally to the President a demand for a $1 a day dole for the unemployed and immediate recognition of soviet Russia.

When a presidential appointment was found impossible he left a letter outlining the marine workers' demands with Theodore Joslin, secretary to the President. Mr. Mink asserted that a call for a jobless seamen's march on Washington would be broadcast in March when congress convenes. He estimated that 40,000 jobless could be mobilized for a drive on Washington to get relief.

TWO PHOTOGRAPH RACKETEERS GET 60 DAYS IN CELLS

Two men charged with obtaining orders for photographs of babies by telling their parents that the pictures would appear in THE TRIBUNE were sentenced to sixty days in the Bridewell and fined $1 each yesterday by Judge Harold P. O'Connell. The defendants are Samuel Durschlag, alias Edward J. Davis, 28 years old, 421 South Homan avenue, and John Conren, formerly of Jersey City, N. J.

"You are the lowest of racketeers," Judge O'Connell told the men in imposing sentence. "You capitalized on the love of mothers for their children. You are cheap and despicable to prey upon women who would like to see their babies' pictures where all might admire them."

Durschlag was seized by police cooperating with TRIBUNE investigators at the home of Mrs. Sophie Petlak, 1502 West Erie street, after she had telephoned to THE TRIBUNE and found that Durschlag was not a representative of this newspaper. He led the police to Conren.

A Brother Strikes a Blow Against Synthetic Red Hair

Edward Achman, 8243 Colfax avenue, was arraigned before Municipal Judge Jay A. Schiller yesterday on a charge of disorderly conduct made by his sister, Mrs. Irene Adams, 9351 Manistee avenue. "I had my hair dyed several days ago," testified Mrs. Adams, "and when I met my brother he said, 'Hello, you redhead,' and hit me in the eye. But I like my hair this way and so does my husband." Achman, who admitted he had been drinking, was placed on probation for six months.

BINGHAM URGES BEER AS BOOST TO PROSPERITY

Assails the Democratic Liquor Stand.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—Good wholesome beer was defined by United States Senator Hiram Bingham as the 4 per cent variety made in Milwaukee under a number of names, all good.

Senator Bingham was the chief speaker at a Republican rally at the Eagles club and his speech was devoted almost exclusively to favoring the immediate modification of the Volstead law, which he said he urged for three principal reasons, to promote temperance and sobriety, to provide a market for jobs and workmen, and to provide revenue for the government to help take the tax load off the backs of the people.

"In Milwaukee there is no question but that you are interested in obtaining prompt modification of the Volstead act so as to permit the manufacture and sale of good wholesome beer," Senator Bingham said.

The declaration against prohibition of the Democratic platform was described as a device to catch votes, contrary to the political beliefs of many of the Democratic leaders and Democratic voters, Senator Bingham said.

"Roosevelt's Attitude."

"The Democratic nominee for the presidency apparently has just discovered the importance of legalizing beer to the taxpayer," he declared. "It has taken him a long while to discover this. Until a few days ago the only thing he has said about beer was to newspaper men last July when I was trying to get the Volstead act modified, and they asked him what was his attitude. He dodged the question and refused to take any steps toward recommending action to members of his party, stating it was a question purely for congress to decide.

"When the Democratic convention in Chicago adopted a plank favoring the immediate modification of the Volstead act to permit the manufacture of beer, I thought they meant what they said. I thought they really had come to believe that there were these great advantages to be gained from it, namely, promoting temperance, helping business and increasing the revenue of the government. As soon as they came back from Chicago I gave them a chance to put their new belief into action.

"If they really had this faith they should show it by action. Faith without works is dead. What did they do? They dodged the issue.

Recalls Beer Vote.

"Only four of the 22 Democratic senators who were in Chicago voted that 'immediate' meant now. Only four were willing to go along with the Republicans who favored beer in voting for the immediate modification of the Volstead act. Had the Democrats meant what they said in their platform, had their nominee for the presidency urged immediate action, we might have had relief today.

"In the debate on July 15, Senator Harrison made it crystal clear that the plank was inserted in the Democratic platform to help win the election. Since Senator Harrison long has been known as one of the leading exponents of Democratic party doctrine and principles, his words carried exceptional weight. This is what he said: 'That plank was not adopted for the guidance of congress at this session at all. That platform was adopted for candidates for the senate and the presidential and vice presidential candidates to run on.'

Quotes Harrison.

"The Mississippi member did not propose that there should be any misconception in the minds of his hearers, so he proceeded to clinch the repudiation of his party's 'immediate modification' plank in the following language:

"'Does the senator think we are so foolish, that we know so little about politics, as to pass a beer proposition here at this session of congress? Does the senator think that if there is any advantage to come from modification of the Volstead law within constitutional limitations, in the coming election, we are going to give it all away by voting for modification at this time?'

"Senator Glass called the Chicago convention a frenzied political assemblage and declared that he did not favor their plank on prohibition and that he was opposed to it. Senator Harrison said that they adopted the plank with a view to winning the next election and not with the view of any immediate action. Immediate did not mean now. It meant some time next year, maybe, perhaps.

"Every time a vote on beer has come up in either house or senate there were found to be more Republicans voting in favor of it than Democrats. The truth is Democratic promises are not worth a good glass of beer."

TAXI DRIVER TELLS OPINION OF HOOVER AND GETS ARRESTED

New York, Oct. 24.—[Special.]—A taxicab driver's opinion of President Hoover almost cost him ten days in the workhouse today. As it was, he was let off by Magistrate Renaud in Jefferson Market court with a reprimand and a warning that whether or not he agreed with the President's views he must respect him so long as he is President.

The driver, Archie Davis, 29 years old, was sitting in his cab when A. Ivan Brickner got in. During the ride Davis brought up the subject of the depression and said what he thought of President Hoover. Brickner had him arrested.

LIBRARY MEETS PAY ROLLS AS THEY FALL DUE

The board of directors of the Chicago Public library ordered yesterday that pay checks be issued to its employes for the first half of October. The library is one of the few public agencies in the city that is paying current salaries.

Andrew J. Kolar, president of the board, declared that the pay rolls could be met because the library has followed a strict policy of keeping its issues of tax anticipation warrants well within the expected tax payments. "We have not flooded the market with warrants which there is no immediate prospect of redeeming," he said.

All of the library's 1929 warrants have been retired, according to Harry Wilson, secretary of the board. Of the 1930 warrants, 83 per cent of those issued have been retired. Of the 1931 warrants, $1,165,000 have been issued, about 60 per cent of the expected levy, and of 1932 warrants $445,000 have been issued.

MOTHER-TO-BE DIES; OPERATION SAVES HER BABY

Mrs. Pauline Fitzharris, 32 years old, of 6907 Ellwood street, an expectant mother, died suddenly of heart disease last night while in the office of Dr. Chester W. Trowbridge at 840 South Oak Park avenue, Oak Park.

Dr. Trowbridge telephoned to Mrs. Fitzharris' husband and asked permission to perform a Cesarian operation to save the unborn baby. The permission was given.

The operation was successful and the baby, a girl, was taken by police to the West Suburban hospital and placed in an incubator. The child weighed three pounds and two ounces. Early this morning hospital atachés said the baby was getting along splendidly and would live.

DRY LAW STAND OF 4 CONGRESS CANDIDATES TOLD

Three Favor Repeal; Yates Opposed.

Three of the four candidates for congressman at large from Illinois have declared for repeal of the national prohibition laws. The fourth, Richard Yates of Springfield, the Republican incumbent and a former governor, has a long record as a dry.

Yates' running partner is Julius Klein, editor of a German language newspaper in Chicago. The Democrats chose two downstaters at the primaries: Martin A. Brennan, Bloomington attorney, and Walter Nesbit of Belleville, secretary treasurer of District 12 [the state of Illinois] for United Mine Workers of America. Nesbit was nominated two years ago, but lost in the election.

Yates' Political History.

Mr. Yates was born in Jacksonville on Dec. 12, 1860. He was graduated at Illinois college there in 1880. He obtained his law degree at the University of Michigan. His political history includes six years as city attorney of Jacksonville and three years as county judge of Morgan county.

Klein was born in Chicago, is married, and lives at 445 Barry avenue. He is editor of the Illinois Staats-Herold and a member of the American Legion. He has held no elective office.

Mr. Brennan was born in Bloomington, 53 years ago, and has practiced law there for 30 years. He has been in politics almost that long. Soon after his graduation from law school he became affiliated with the Democratic party in McLean county and was for many years a member of the Democratic state central committee. In 1914 former Gov. Dunne appointed him judge of the state Court of Claims, where he served four years. He served two years in the lower house of the legislature.

Mine Worker for 20 Years.

Mr. Nesbit is 54 years old and was born in Belleville. Entering the coal mines as a boy, he worked in the pits for almost 20 years. In 1917 he was elected to his present post in the miners' union. He is campaigning on a platform calling for prohibition repeal, a shorter workday and work week in industry, old age pension, and unemployment insurance.

Ward Leader Provides Sign to Save Children

Richard Frohlich, Democratic committeeman of the 15th ward, provided a warning sign which was posted yesterday in an alley behind 6915 South Troy street for the protection of children using a neighborhood play lot. Deputy Coroner James J. Sveda, who established the playground behind his home, posted the sign, assisted by Dr. E. A. Schlageter of the health department. A child was killed by a truck while playing in the alley recently.

LOS ANGELES HIT BY 50 MILE GALE; BUILDINGS DAMAGED

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—High winds, which in the harbor region and foothill portions of the city reached a velocity estimated at 50 miles an hour, tore through the Los Angeles section in a whirl of minor destruction today.

Windows were blown in in the La Crescenta section, small boats were kept from sea, and trees in all portions of the city and adjacent territory were uprooted. Many of the scheduled outgoing planes from Los Angeles airports were held on the ground or their departure delayed.

Four frame buildings were smashed by the wind in Glendale, where doors were blown off others and hurled through air. Window panes were smashed. Dust clouds halted highway traffic there.

Quake in San Francisco.

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 24.—(AP)—A sharp earthquake was felt here late today. No damage was reported.

SON OF WEALTHY RANCHER IS HELD FOR BIG RANSOM

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Oct. 24.—Santiago Hueyo, 25 year old son of Finance Minister Alberto Hueyo, tonight bore to police a demand for 120,000 pesos ($31,000) ransom from kidnapers who are holding Abel Ayerza, son of a wealthy rancher.

Young Hueyo and Ayerza were seized last night by a gang of gunmen who halted their car on a lonely road in Cordoba province. Hueyo was released this morning and reached Buenos Aires this afternoon. Late tonight he disappeared and it was rumored that he carried ransom money. Police, however, denied knowledge of that.

This was the second prominent kidnaping within a month. Two weeks ago Dr. Jaime Faveluke, Jewish millionaire hospital director, was released after being held four days. It was presumed that his family had paid $25,000 ransom. It is widely believed that the kidnaping activities are the work of immigrant Sicilian Mafia members, who came here in large numbers during Premier Mussolini's cleanup of Sicily.

CIVIC GROUPS IN CAMPAIGN FOR 'GATEWAY' PLAN

Seek Votes for Proposal of 3 Amendments.

Civic organizations are campaigning for the "gateway" amendment, which will be submitted to the voters on one of the smaller ballots at the election of Nov. 8. Indifference rather than opposition is the chief danger to this proposal which would permit amendment of three articles of the state constitution instead of one at a session of the legislature.

This amendment has been defeated at previous elections because of failure to vote on the proposition rather than because of actual votes against it. The "gateway" amendment like any other constitutional amendment requires a majority of all votes cast in the general election for adoption. Vote on assemblymen is the measure of the total vote.

First Proposed in 1892.

The proposal first was made in 1892, twenty-two years after the adoption of the present constitution. At that time proponents sought to amend the constitution to permit the amendment of two articles at a legislative session. Only 178,065 of 871,503 voters who went to the polls marked the proposition ballot. The proposal needed 435,754 votes and received 84,645 with 93,420 voting against it.

Four years later, in 1896, a proposal to submit three amendments at a time carried more than two to one in the actual vote on the proposition, but fell short of a majority of all votes cast. The total vote was 1,090,389 with the necessary majority of 545,435 to carry the proposition. It received 163,057 votes with 66,519 votes against it.

In 1919 the "gateway" proposal was submitted to the people merely as an advisory measure and it was carried, but the vote had no legal effect. When an effort was made to modernize the state constitution with the submission of a new constitution, the proposal was in the new document, which failed at the polls.

Resubmitted in 1924.

Again in 1924 the "gateway" amendment was submitted at a general election. Though it secured support by a vote of 704,665 to 397,335 it did not receive a majority of the total vote. It was defeated by voters who threw aside the small ballot.

It has been the history of constitutional amendments that two or more proposals carried to the legislature at one time work against each other, as only one actually may be submitted. Advocates of one will not defer to advocates of another. In the resulting deadlock nothing is done. The "gateway" amendment is designed to facilitate modernization of the constitution.

Women's Republican Club Hears Talk by Candidates

Dr. Irene Behnke, president of the Illinois Women's Republican club, presided yesterday at a luncheon at the Hamilton club at which various Republican candidates addressed the members on issues of the campaign, preliminary to a lecture on "America in Transition," by Dr. S. H. Stille, poet and lecturer. Dr. Stille's talk to the scores of women present, illustrated with slides, dealt with the conditions in this country resulting in the depression, and various methods of combating it.

BESIEGE SCHOOL BOARD TO FIGHT OUSTER OF COACH

Closed Meeting Is Held in Morton High.

Nearly 800 citizens and teachers crowded the regular board room of the J. Sterling Morton High school in Cicero last night to protest against the dismissal of Fred M. Walker as football coach. To escape the mass protest, members of the school board met behind closed doors in an ante room.

After the crowd filled the board room detectives barred the door against others who tried to enter, including members of the football team who had assembled to plead for Walker's retention.

The meeting of the board ended with an announcement that Walker would be given three days more in which to answer the charges on which he was ordered discharged, and that his fate as coach would then be up to Harry V. Church, principal of the school. Walker recently was given 30 days' notice of discharge as the result of charges of neglect of duty filed against him by Maj. William P. McLean, director of physical education.

Charges Against Coach.

The charges made by Maj. McLean cover six pages, but were not officially disclosed last night. From other sources, it was learned that Maj. McLean accused the coach of absenting himself from school the first two opening days, of being inefficient, of being 10 to 15 minutes late in conducting classes, of allowing scholastically ineligible players to play on the basketball team, and of leaving shower rooms dirty during the football season.

"The charges are all untrue," said Walker after the meeting. "Not long ago I met Maj. McLean, and he said to me: 'You'll go along with me or I'll give you a 30-day notice. If I don't like a fellow, I'll get him out by hook or crook.' McLean thinks that I want his job. I don't. I want to be with my boys."

Report Other Accusations.

According to reports current among teachers, Walker was given dismissal notice because he criticized the school board for its arrangements in discounting the tax warrants with which the teachers have been paid in recent months.

However, none of these reported charges was discussed openly at last night's meeting. Walker, accompanied by his attorney, State Senator Richey V. Graham, appeared before the board, and later emerged to ask the citizens and teachers not to cause any stir. Attorney John J. Sherlock, member of the school board, also talked to the assembly and explained what action the board had taken. His announcement was booed.

NEW FLOGGING CASES STIR FLORIDA GRAND JURY; QUIZ TOMORROW

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 24.—(AP)—Reports of five new floggings, adding to the list of whippings by a terrorist band here, were received at police headquarters tonight. The Duval county grand jury will start an investigation Wednesday morning. The new cases reported brought the recent total to 16.

Mayor John T. Alsop conferred with Police Chief A. J. Roberts, Lieut. W. O. Silcox and representatives of the sheriff in his office late today.

Five men have been arrested on charges of assault with intent to murder in the reported flogging of Mrs. Sally Geringer and her daughter, Ola Bell Gilstrap. These men are at liberty under $1,000 bond each. Roberts said additional arrests were expected.

URGES LEGION TO PROTECT HOOVER FROM RADICALS

Arnold Joerns, one of the founders of Advertising Men's post of the American Legion, speaking yesterday at a luncheon of the post in the Hotel Sherman, suggested that the Legionnaires of Cook county appear in force when President Hoover arrives in Chicago and protect him from insult and embarrassment by communist elements.

After recalling the disorders in Detroit on Saturday, Mr. Joerns said:

"In all probability the communists are planning another such demonstration here. Let the American Legion be out 10,000 strong and if there is any communist disorder let us handle it our way. Regardless of partisan politics, the American Legion should stand for American citizenship."

BOY, 10, KILLED BY AUTO; HIDDEN IN OAK THICKET

Riverhead, L. I., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—The body of 10 year old Joseph Konkel jr., missing last night after an automobile accident, was found today in the scrub oaks more than three miles from the scene of the mishap.

The condition of the body indicated that the bumper of a car had caught him by the waistband of his trousers in the rear and he had been carried along with face, hands and feet dragging on the concrete highway.

There is no clew to the identity of the motorist who drove away and hid the body beside the lonely, sandy road through the oaks except the extremely vague ones that might be found in the story told by William Konkel, the boy's brother.

He and Joseph had left their home with a "pushamobile," mostly of their own construction.

They took an old lantern with them and went to the Flanders road, a concrete highway between Riverhead and Southampton, which runs within half a mile of their home. As soon as it began to get dark they lighted the lantern.

A roadster came along, William said, with a man and a woman in the front seat and a woman in the rumble seat. The occupants of the car seemed to be in hilarious mood, for, the boy said, they raced the "pushmobile" and played tag with its occupants. The roadster would back off, he said, and then come racing up, almost grazing them as it passed. It was one of these sallies, he said, which ended with the accident.

CHINESE FARMERS REVOLT AGAINST TAXES; 7 SLAIN

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

SHANGHAI, Oct. 24.—An agrarian revolt began today at Yangchow, in Kiangsu province, less than fifty miles from Nanking. Seven persons were killed and six wounded. The uprising was in oppositon to new tax measures.

The authorities had arrested fifty peasants for nonpayment of taxes. Thereupon, the entire farming population surrounding Yangchow invaded the walled city. Police arrested 200 and the uprising became violent. The farmers were driven outside the city.

Kuomintang [Nationalist party] officials are barricaded inside the city walls. Access to the city is cut off by thousands of enraged peasants, who surround it, while hundreds of exponents of revolt are hastening through the countryside pounding gongs and ringing bells to summon other peasants from more distant places to join the uprising.

HOOVER ASKING TARIFF ACTION TO HELP BUSINESS

Sees Menace to Jobs in Middle West.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—In keeping with the promises made in recent campaign speeches, President Hoover today ordered the federal tariff commission to conduct an immediate investigation into foreign competition that is causing increased unemployment in numerous American communities.

Appended to the President's letter to Robert L. O'Brien, chairman of the commission, was a list of sixteen industries. The names of the cities and towns where manufacturing had been adversely affected by the influx of foreign goods also were listed. Chicago figured as having suffered in six cases.

The President wrote to Chairman O'Brien, as he told audiences in numerous back platform speeches during his last two swings into the midwest, that the depreciated currencies and lowered living standards of countries, which have gone off the gold standard, have caused a need of various tariff revisions.

Warns of Further Losses.

"In extension," Mr. Hoover wrote, "of my recent verbal instructions as to the necessity for investigation of certain tariff schedules due to depreciation of currencies in foreign countries, I inclose herewith a list, furnished to me by the department of commerce, of industries and localities where there has been actual increase of unemployment or alternatively or where it is inevitable that it will increase from importations arising out of this cause unless they be halted.

"You recognize that currencies in thirty countries have now depreciated from 5 to 55 per cent, which has reduced the standards of living in those countries and greatly widened the difference in cost of production between the United States and those localities.

Want Speedy Inquiry.

"I would therefore be obliged if the tariff commission would expedite this matter in order to afford all possible relief to unemployment in these communities. I urge this expedition because of this possible retardation of increasing employment of our people. If it shall prove that the differences in cost of production between here and abroad in these industries have altered the basis of the tariff duties, I wish to receive recommendations of the tariff commission at the earliest possible moment."

Chicago employment was listed as being affected by foreign competition in the following industries: Rag rugs, brushes, leather gloves, silverware, jewelry, and chemical products.

Other Affected Places.

Rock Island, Ill., and Rockford, Ill., were listed as being affected by foreign competition with their rubber boot and shoe and metal goods industries respectively.

Other industries named were: Grass rugs, electric light bulbs, cutlery, pottery, canned vegetables, dried beans, iron and steel products, canned fish, and lumber products.

More than 120 cities were described as having their employment cut down by the import of low priced foreign products.

Hoover Advocates Subsidies to States to Aid Battle on Contagious Diseases

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—Federal subsidies to the states for use in the reduction of contagious disease were advocated tonight by President Hoover in an address before the annual convention of the American Health association. Such a move, the President said, would prove of untold benefit in cutting down losses in productive time of workers and in increasing human comfort and happiness.

Only because he considered contagion a san interestate question, he said, did he recommend federal contributions to aid the states in fighting it.

In urging a greater degree of cooperation between the government and the states in fighting contagious diseases, the President asserted that such a program would contribute to the production of a healthier and more virile race and to the preservation of "those precious exceptional children whose birth cannot be predicted of any class or moment and from whom comes the leadership of our democracy."

The President advocated a public health unit for every county in each state as its minimum health organization. This unit, he said, should consist of a doctor, a sanitary engineer and a trained nurse. Such units, the President added, had been established in counties hit by the Mississippi flood in 1927.

Points to Mississippi Test.

"These units were established in 100 counties in the flood area, and the extraordinarily successful results of their work confirmed the wisdom of the plan," the President said. "The public health in these counties for eighteen months after the flood was so much better than it had been in the eighteen months before the disaster as to prove an object lesson in what could be done by organized public health work.

"By every means within my reach I have ever since promoted the idea of establishing these units in every one of our five thousand counties in the United States. I have frequently helped the voluntary cooperating groups to raise the funds for such units by public subscription, and many times, through conferences and in other ways, have assisted in promoting legislation in the states by which state governments have supplemented these funds on the familiar basis of duplicating from the state treasury the sums raised locally by the county or municipal governments. I have gone farther than that. Although I am generally constitutionally and violently opposed to federal subsidies to the states, yet I have regarded contagion as one interstate question and have recommended federal contributions to such a universal service."

Here the President called attention to the benefits which he said would come from government encouragement of the states in fighting contagious diseases.

"I am in favor, as a constructive measure of public economy," he said, "of a program to be carried out on such wise lines to reduce contagious disease with government encouragement. If communicable diseases could be reduced by even one-third, such a reduction would repay the country more than a thousand-fold its cost by its saving of the present losses in productive time of workers and its saving of the present losses to school funds by absences from classes. That is the sheer economics of it. But far beyond that there would be the wealth of gain in human comfort and human happiness.

"Still beyond that there is the gain of definite community action looking to the protection of the home—the cooperation of organized society in a great work of social well being, with all its additions of assurance to men and women of a further security to their families against the menace of contagion and ill health.

For Future Generations.

"And even beyond that in importance there is the well-being of the future generations of our children, the building up of safeguards around the home and the health of the parents and of the growing family, which will contribute to the production of a healthier and more virile race and to the preservation not only of the treasures of childhood as a whole, but also to the preservation of those precious exceptional children whose birth cannot be predicted of any class or moment and from whom comes the leadership of our democracy, to which they rise through the free channels of opportunity in our country."

SIX ARE KILLED AS RUMANIAN CONVICTS REVOLT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Oct. 24.—Six persons were killed and scores of prisoners and guards were wounded in riots at the state penitentiary at Cernauti, Bukowina, today.

The modern prison chiefly houses prisoners serving life or long term sentences. During the daily walk in the prison court, the convicts overpowered their guards. Arms had been smuggled inside and one of the prisoners captured a machine gun in the prison tower.

The prison chaplain's attempt to reason with the rioters was futile.

"We only want to kill the warden," they cried. "He is responsible for our bad treatment."

The warden telephoned to the nearby city of Gernauti for troops as the shooting continued. Eight prisoners escaped, but the troops arrived in time to prevent a general exodus.

FISHER'S JURY IS REVIVED FOR ELECTION QUIZ

Adcock Reappointed as Special Prosecutor.

The special grand jury of Judge Harry Fisher, a Democrat, was revived yesterday by order of Chief Justice John Prystalski of the Criminal court, to investigate election frauds. Attorney Edmund D. Adcock, who was appointed special state's attorney when the jury first came into existence, presented the petition which brought new life to the investigative agency after six months of dormancy.

Attorney Adcock pointed out that the original jury was legally out of existence and asked that a new jury be impaneled to carry on its work. Judge Prystalski signed the petition and ordered that the jury be selected from a special venire on Thursday morning. He reappointed Adcock as special prosecutor.

Called Democratic Defense.

The action was viewed as a Democratic defense move against the prosecution of Democratic political workers by State's Attorney Swanson on election fraud charges. It was pointed out that the special jury can exist only during the term of court under which it was created. The October term of court will expire on Nov. 5, three days before the election. The new grand jury, by working Saturdays, can get in nine days of actual business.

Mr. Adcock was first appointed special state's attorney by Judge Fisher before the April primaries when Fisher was chief justice of the Criminal court. The appointment followed a dispute over the validity of the special juries appointed by Judge Fisher and Judge Michael Feinberg. At that time Judge Feinberg was a candidate for the Republican nomination for state's attorney. The Illinois Supreme court held that the Feinberg jury was illegal.

Adcock Offers Petition.

Attorney Adcock appeared with his petition yesterday in the court of Judge Prystalski without giving notice to State's Attorney Swanson or to Attorney General Carlstrom. His appearance was noted by an assistant state's attorney, who notified Acting First Assistant State's Attorney William A. Rittenhouse.

Rittenhouse at once went before Judge Prystalski to argue the jury question, since it is the contention of the prosecutor's office that a special state's attorney cannot be appointed unless both the state's attorney and the attorney general are disqualified.

"The state's attorney's office is in the same position in which it would have been if the original jury had acted," Prosecutor Rittenhouse told the judge. "By that I mean that my superior is still a candidate for re-election.

"Concerning the position of Attorney General Carlstrom, however, the matter is vastly changed. The attorney general is no longer a candidate for anything. Under the statutes, I believe that it is the duty of Attorney Adcock to notify the attorney general when the state's attorney is disqualified."

Adcock said that he believed the same condition which governed the original jury held in the present situation and that he did not consider it his duty to notify any one.

Attorney Adcock told Judge Prystalski that he had organized a staff and investigated vote fraud charges made in the original petition presented to Judge Fisher. He announced that he is ready to present the evidence to a special grand jury. When Judge Prystalski granted permission for the impaneling of the new jury Adcock also secured the appointment of two assistants. They are William W. Corlett and John Owen, who was formerly famous as a prosecutor. Mr. Owen is a former law partner of Judge Prystalski.

Says He'll Notify Carlstrom.

Asked if he did not believe that the attorney general should have been notified, Judge Prystalski said: "My idea is that this is a continuation of an old matter."

Pressed further for an answer, he said, first, that Adcock's staff did not think the notification necessary, later that "he supposed that if the attorney general has anything to say in the matter he will come in," and finally announced that he "would see to it that the attorney general is notified."

State's Attorney Swanson said: "It has all the earmarks of a political move, coming as it does a few days before the election. The jury had six months since its origin to do something, if there was evidence other than of a political nature."

John F. Barrett, member of the board of trade, who achieved some prominence because of his accurate "long distance" forecasts of weather, is critically ill in his home at 706 Lathrop avenue, River Forest, it became known last night. He is 73 years old. Mr. Barrett was taken ill two weeks ago.

JUDGE CENSURES DRY AGENT; SETS HIS VICTIM FREE

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 24.—(AP)—Declaring the man who made the arrest had no "conscience," Judge M. H. Joyce in United States District court today freed Peter Adrian Nelson, 55 year old St. Paul gardener, held 38 days in the county jail here awaiting investigation on a liquor charge.

Nelson's release was ordered after the court had read a report from a probation officer. Nelson said a friend of his met a dry agent and had a few drinks. They went to Nelson's small cottage here and he cooked a dinner for his friend and the agent.

After the meal the agent asked for a drink and was given one from a half pint bottle, Nelson said. The man then paid him 75 cents for the meal, the gardener said. Several days later Nelson was arrested and charged with possession of liquor.

On Sept. 26 Nelson pleaded guilty, but sentence was deferred pending an investigation by the probation officer. When Nelson appeared today for sentence, Judge Joyce read the probation officer's report and advised Nelson to change his plea to not guilty. Nelson did and the court dismissed the charges, expressing regret that Nelson had spent so much time in jail.

"The Almighty, when He made the individual responsible for this old man's predicament, left out of him what in the rest of us is called a conscience," said Judge Joyce.

After the hearing William F. Cunningham, deputy federal prohibition administrator in charge of Minnesota, ordered an investigation of the circumstances of the arrest.

HOLDUP VICTIM'S ERROR IS LUCKY BREAK FOR COPS

An excited confectioner made a mistake last night in reporting the address of his store, which had just been robbed, but it turned out all right because the police squad which went to the wrong address captured the bandits. One of the prisoners, it was learned, is also wanted on a charge of murder.

The robbery took place in the candy store of Herbert Schlutz, 734 East 83d street. Two robbers forced him to lie on the floor and took $26. He was so excited when he gave the alarm that a police operator understood him to say the robbery had taken place at 1134 East 83d street.

Sergt. Charles Moore and his squad went to the latter address. Just as they reached it a car which was going east in 83d street speeded past them. A chase followed, during which a revolver was tossed from the fugitive car. The police overhauled the car at 83d street and Jeffery avenue and found two men in it.

Schlutz identified the pair at the Burnside station. The prisoners said they were Edwin Petroskey, 22 years old, 8227 Langley avenue, and John Meehan, 21, of 9813 Aberdeen street.

Meehan, it developed, has been sought since Sept. 13 as an accomplice of Francis Crotty and Peter Balcuilis, who on that day killed Ernest Krampert, owner of a meat market at 5956 South Halsted street, and wounded his assistant, Edward Kirsch, during a holdup.

BEATEN TO DEATH; ROBBED.

Santa Ana, Cal., Oct. 24.—(AP)—Beaten over the head with a hammer, police said, Manus Gantzman, 40, was found slain in his clothing store late today.

CONDUCTOR SHOT BY POLICEMAN IN CARFARE ROW

Apparently angered because he was asked to pay a seven cent fare, Policeman Roy Sullivan, 36 years old, a squad leader at the Fillmore street station, yesterday shot and probably fatally wounded Conductor Andrew J. Gallagher, 40 years old, on a street car in Halsted street just north of Waveland avenue. Sullivan was captured as he fled after the shooting and was taken to the Town Hall station, where the police said he was too intoxicated to answer questions for several hours.

Sullivan, who went off duty at midnight Sunday, got on the street car at 9 o'clock yesterday morning to go to his home at 4823 North Oakley avenue. He had been drinking heavily, the police said, apparently in celebration of the tenth anniversary of his joining the force.

Conductor Father of Twins.

Conductor Gallagher, who lives at 2023 Lyndale avenue and is the father of twin boys 3 years old, was taken to the American hospital, where physicians found he had been shot in the back, the left side, the left arm and chest.

"The policeman got on at Clybourn avenue," Gallagher told policemen at the hospital. "He showed me his star, but I told him that according to the rules he either had to pay or have a police ticket.

"He rode about two blocks, we had no further words, and then he dug into his pocket and handed over the money. He was in a daze and rode on the back platform with me. When we came to the end of the line I don't remember what happened. I do know, however, that we didn't have an argument. My back was turned. Then he started shooting."

Policeman Caught in Flight.

Sullivan leaped from the car and ran to Waveland avenue, where he got on the rear platform of another street car. He ran through the car and jumped off the front platform, brandishing his revolver to drive back a crowd gathered there. Henry Herst, manager of the Wieland Dairy company at 3644 Broadway, who was passing in his automobile, took up the chase. Sullivan fell to the street as he ran and was held by Herst until police arrived.

After several hours sleep at the Town Hall station Sullivan said he remembered nothing. He had taken several drinks when he got through work, he said.

"I have a wife and child and another baby coming in January," he told Dr. Henry Steible, a police surgeon. Dr. Steible said Sullivan had suffered a possible fracture of the skull when he fell during the chase and ordered him taken to the Bridewell hospital. Sullivan, a world war veteran, was suspended by Police Commissioner Allman pending investigation.

GIRL AIDS GUNMEN IN HOLDUP.

ACCUSES HUBBY OF ELOPING WITH MOTHER-IN-LAW

Mrs. Lillian Pawloski, 1309 Holt street, appearing before Circuit Judge Philip J. Finnegan to press her plea for a divorce yesterday, charged that her husband, Theodore, eloped with her mother.

She testified that on Jan. 6, 1928, shortly after the birth of their son, her husband sent her to the store. Her mother, Mrs. Maria Kostro, was in her home at the time. When she returned, Mrs. Pawloski testified, she found a note to herself which read: "I have decided to leave with mother. My love for her is greater than that I bear you."

She has not seen the couple since, she said. Judge Finnegan withheld his ruling in the case pending testimony by Mrs. Pawloski's father, John Kostro.

Bullet Ricochets; Wounds Capt. W. F. Russell's Ankle

Rockford Girl Is Raped; Negro Arrested as Suspect

Rockford, Ill., Oct. 24.—(AP)—A 17 year old girl, whose name was withheld by police, was raped by two Negroes tonight. Her assailants bound the girl, but released her later and fled. Later in the night two detectives arrested Arby Champion, a 20 year old Negro as one of the two.

SAVES $15,000 IN GUN BATTLE WITH 2 BANDITS

Edward Martin, a bookkeeper in the Joliet postoffice, fought a revolver battle yesterday with two bandits and saved $15,000 which he and Alfred M. Bourgo, assistant postmaster, were taking to a bank. Bourgo was slugged by the bandits and required hospital attention.

Bourgo and Martin left the postoffice, on Van Buren street near Michigan street in Joliet, and had walked across Michigan street when the two robbers waylaid them in a subway.

One of the robbers struck Bourgo on the head with a revolver and the money package fell on the sidewalk, where it broke open and scattered bundles of bills over the street. Meanwhile Martin had dropped back behind a pillar in the subway and opened fire with his revolver.

The two gunmen returned the fire and escaped.

BRITISH SLOW UP CONSTRUCTION OF SINGAPORE BASE

May Turn Scheme Into Commercial Project.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SINGAPORE, Sept. 13.—[By mail.]—This is more of a Chinese than a British city. While the British govern and protect it, the Chinese do the business and labor and form the major part of the 400,000 population. There is Chancery lane, York house, and King's road, but also Choon Guam street and Kim Sieng road. Lavender street, with its English hedge rows, merges into a suburb of gaudy Chinese bungalows, where millionaire merchants live, their wives all glittering with diamonds and gold and silk. A nightly jinrikisha parade of Chinese girls comes down Stamford road, close to the old English cathedral set in its walled garden by the sea.

A strange medley of people. Mosques and minarets, opium stores and Methodist missions, cricket field with Moslem boys at play, polo field and race track and Malay huts perched over the water, Sultan's palace and the evening stroll of Arab, Chinese and Indian in the cool breeze of Beach road.

The acceptable costume is a clean undershirt and shorts. Fat Chinese shopkeepers naked to the waist, coolies asleep on the sidewalks, automobiles and jinrikishas all mixed up in the traffic which pours like a noisy river past open sewers and gardens of orchids.

Reclaimed from Swamp.

Much has been done with this old swamp and jungle. While the Malays have courteously stepped aside, choosing to live their simple and indolent lives near the water, the Chinese and Europeans have stepped in and filled in the swamps, reclaimed the water front much as in Chicago, and have begun to realize here an impressive city, a center of the world's ocean traffic and guardian of the British empire. The most significant development, however, is the peaceful penetration of the Chinese. They come here as coolies and step by step, as the logical development of a superior, resistless ability, the walls of wealth and power open to them.

Singapore is on an island governed as a crown colony of England and between it and the mainland, where the Malay state of Jahore forms the lower end of the peninsula, work is proceeding slowly on the great British naval base, on which £5,145,000 [about $17,000,000 at current rate of exchange] will have been expended by 1935. The original plan calls for an expenditure of £11,000,000 [$36,500,000] in dredging, drydocks and fortifications, but only the basic contract is being carried out and this may eventually turn into a commercial project only.

Australia and New Zealand are keenly interested in its completion as a naval base, but lack of money and the uncertainty as to world disarmament agreements have slowed down the work so that only maintenance has been kept up and no fortifications begun. The turn of events in Japan may have a good deal to do with the future of this work.

Develop Air Transport.

In the meantime the development of air transport is engaging the attention of the British in this part of the world. The Dutch have pioneered the way and have a weekly air mail service to Europe from Java and Sumatra, stopping at Singapore. The proposition now is for the Australian government to provide a link from Darwin, connecting up here with the service to England. This calls for a subsidy, while the Dutch have offered to take over the work without any subsidy but at higher rates.

One hundred years ago the Dutch and English were fighting for control of Malaysia. Now it is all divided up and they are very friendly. The Dutch have done a better job in some ways than the English in developing the agricultural possibilities of their tropical empire. Both have beaten the Americans. There is nothing here but what is potentially in the Philippines, but while the development there has been political it has been distinctly economic on both sides the Malacca straits.

Take the nipah palm industry, providing industrial alcohol. This has been recognized as one of the many unused opportunities in the Philippines.

Build City in Jungle.

From Kuala Lumpur, the capital of the British Malay federation, where a staid English city has been built in the jungle, comes this description of present developments there:

"A high rectangular tower dominating an expanse of coastal country as flat as a billiard table. A solid block of 2,000 acres covered with a species of low palm planted with beautiful precision and broken only by the roofs of bungalows and coolie lines. On the seaward side a belt of mangrove jungle showing the kind of country in which this scene of planned and scientific agriculture has been created. A potential output of 8,000 tons of white sugar and 1,000,000 gallons of power alcohol a year, or alternatively 2,000,000 gallons of alcohol a year.

"There is nothing like this property in Malaya or anywhere in the world. It represents the first attempt to cultivate the nipah palm on a plantation basis, and on the agricultural side it is already a convincing success. At a time in Malaya's history when we can afford to make no unnecessary purchases from abroad, this estate is in a position to supply us now with a large part of the sugar which we now buy from the Dutch East Indies and a large part of the motor fuel which we buy from the international combines."

This enterprise has developed since 1925. Experts studied the palm and the haphazard native tapping in the Philippines and in Borneo, and the government here was interested to the extent of financing the project until private companies took it over.

But rubber is the chief industry of Malaya today, and the rubber price has brought temporary disaster here, as in the Dutch East Indies, forcing economies in estate management and also in the government. Malaya supplies 43 per cent of the world's rubber. The plantations begin at the edge of the city, mixed with cocoanut groves. The rubber trees have a smooth reddish brown bark, and in size and leaves they are similar to the elm, forming deep groves of shade.

British government affairs are very complicated in Malaya just now. Partly as the result of wars, partly from the steady extension of "spheres of influence," and through treaties with native kings, they now control, either as crown colonies or through "advisers" and "residents," this entire peninsula, which is about the size of England itself. It is like a kingdom of medieval times, with the colonial office control exercised through one high commissioner and governor, Sir Cecil Clementi, sitting behind high walls in the green oasis of government house in Singapore. Five crown colonies, four federated Malay states and five unfederated states make up the mixture.

British in Feud with Governor.

There is a feud on now between the British residents and the governor, centering in Sir Cecil's policy of "decentralization," which involves giving back to the feudal sultans and princes much of their local governing power and thereby losing influence and jobs to many Europeans. The colonial office has disclaimed knowledge of such a policy, and Sir Samuel Wilson is coming out from the home office soon to look the situation over. The trouble seems to lie in the distinctions between the federated and the unfederated states. The Straits Times, giving some advice to Sir Samuel, says:

"If he will reduce the problem to its simplest possible terms he should start with the fact that when the Malay states came under British protection they were entirely independent states, and the intention was always to maintain a sharp distinction between them and a British colony. It was also the intention to train the Malays to govern their own states.

"Only to a pathetically small extent have the Malays of the Federated states been trained for administrative work. In the unfederated states the Malays almost fill the council and they administer the affairs of state with conspicuous ability. In the unfederated states the rulers take an active part in the work of government, whereas in the federated states the individual state governments are overshadowed by the federal government.

Recede Into Background.

"Despite honest efforts to help them, by means of a special administrative branch, preferential treatment in education, and in other ways, the Malays in the federated states are receding more and more into the background, as a result of highly centralized, purely British administration and the very great growth of non-Malay industry and population. In each federated Malay state there remains a sultan, exercising not inconsiderable influence through his British resident; there remain major and minor chiefs and village headmen; and there remain the Malay inhabitants, living as of old in their rice swamps and cocoanut groves. But the sultan is a figurehead and the people live, as it were, in a quiet lagoon while the main stream of modern life passes them by."

The question to be decided is similar to that of America's problem in the Philippines. It is whether political promises are to be kept or economic considerations must rule future policy.

$6,303,150 ASKED FROM R. F. C. FOR NOVEMBER RELIEF

Reynolds Will Go to Washington Today.

Wilfred S. Reynolds, executive secretary of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission, will leave for Washington this afternoon to confer with agents of the Reconstruction Finance corporation regarding Illinois' relief needs for November.

"The commission estimates that $6,303,150 in federal funds will be needed for relief work in Illinois during November," said Mr. Reynolds. "Of this sum, $5,554,000 will be required in Cook county and the remainder in downstate counties.

"During October, relief budgets were reduced drastically in expenditures for food, fuel, and clothing. The November estimates have been made on the basis of restoring the standards of relief in use prior to October."

Urges Relief Bond Approval.

The urgent need for voters to approve the $20,000,000 state relief bond issue at the Nov. 8 election was stressed by Fred W. Sargent, chairman of the Cook County Emergency Relief Bond Issue committee, in a statement issued yesterday. He warned that higher taxes will result unless the bond issue is approved.

"This bond issue must be approved by a majority of those voting for members of the Illinois general assembly," Mr. Sargent pointed out. "Therefore, practically every voter must remember to vote 'yes' on the emergency relief ballot. The bond issue proposition will appear on a separate small ballot.

"Vote to Prevent Extra Tax."

"This is unlike any bond issue ever submitted before. There is no opposition to the measure. Its adoption will not increase any tax but will prevent an additional tax on all real and personal property, which otherwise must be collected in 1933 to repay state relief funds already borrowed and spent.

"The bonds themselves will be financed by withholding proportionately from the counties which have used state relief funds, a part of their share of gasoline tax revenues."

Model Workroom

Volunteer Red Cross workers began active duty yesterday in the model workroom of the American Red Cross established in the Pure Oil building, Wabash avenue and Wacker drive. They will assist in the making of a million garments for needy families in Chicago from the three million yards of cotton goods given the Chicago chapter of the Red Cross by the government.

The model workroom was opened at a meeting of the Chicago chapter's officers and heads of coöperating agencies. James B. Forgan Jr., chairman of the Chicago chapter; Robert Gardner, chairman of the campaign committee of the Emergency Welfare fund, and Mrs. George A. McKinlock, executive chairman of the cotton production committee for the Chicago chapter, were among the speakers.

At least 4,000 garments are to be turned out daily in workshops being opened throughout the city, and the number will be increased to 10,000 later on, it was explained. Many of the workshops will employ paid labor from the relief agencies.

MOSLEY FASCISTS FIGHT JOBLESS IN LONDON STREETS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 24.—As thousands of jobless marchers converged on London tonight, Sir Oswald Mosley, millionaire baronet and founder of the "new" party, led his British Fascists, wearing black shirts, out for a short maneuver which terminated in a street fight in which two unemployed men were injured. Preliminary skirmishes occurred in the East End, where Sir Oswald addressed a meeting. Three hecklers were ejected after a brief struggle.

Sir Oswald, whose wife, Lady Cynthia, is a granddaughter of the late Levi Leiter of Chicago, then placed himself at the head of 150 blackshirts and led them towards their headquarters near the parliament buildings. A crowd of unemployed followed, jeering and hooting as the Mosleyites repeated Mussolini's Fascist salute.

Near Trafalgar square Sir Oswald's rear guard broke ranks and attacked the unemployed. Others pitched in and police separated the combatants. Mosley reformed his ranks and continued the march. Near the parliament buildings, the Fascists were met by a cordon of police and the column was forced to disband.

DELAY BY GRAIN CO-OPS BLOCKING LOAN TO CHINA

$8,000,000 Wheat Deal Awaits Their O. K.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—The Reconstruction Finance corporation, it was said today, is ready to grant an $8,000,000 loan to China to finance the purchase of 15 million bushels of Pacific northwest wheat. Thus far, however, it has been unable to persuade coöperatives in this country to underwrite an obligation of the Chinese government.

Director Wilson McCarthy of the finance corporation conferred today with George S. Milnor, president of the Farmers' National Grain corporation, in an effort to get the indorsement of that coöperative for the Chinese note. McCarthy said he hoped an agreement will be reached within the next twenty-four hours.

Only Remaining Obstacle.

McCarthy said that failure of domestic coöperatives to volunteer enforcement is now the only obstacle to granting the Chinese loan. All other phases of the proposal, he said, have been investigated by experts of the corporation and found to be legal. Such loans to finance the exportation of agricultural products were authorized in the emergency relief bill.

McCarthy describes the finance corporation as anxious to advance the $8,000,000 to China in the belief that purchase of the northwest grain and the subsequent inflow of money into the northwestern section will serve to alleviate what he termed an acute situation. Many of the banks in that area, according to the R. F. C. director, are facing a serious situation with much of their loan collateral represented in wheat.

Not only is the corporation interested in the immediate proposal for an advance to China, according to McCarthy, but it will favorably consider loans with other coöperatives or private traders for the financing of agricultural exports. Thus far, he said, however, the grain coöperatives and traders have shown little actual disposition to apply for such advances.

New Feeder Loans $216,872.

Meanwhile, today the corporation announced that a total of $216,872 had been actually disbursed to 102 farmers and stockmen for feeder loans through the agricultural credit corporations during their second week of operation. Loans totaling more than $4,500,000,000, he said, were approved by the corporations during the seven day period.

The finance corporation also announced today that, since its creation last February, it has advanced 4,973 bank loans amounting to $853,496,289. The borrowing banks, it was said, had individual depositors numbering nearly 14,500,000, of whom nearly a million were depositors in closed banks.

Bookkeeper Reports $1,279 Loss in Holdup on Street

Fred Turner, 3830 Ohio street, a bookkeeper for Cohen & Egalnich, fruit merchants at 27th street and Ashland avenue, reported to the police yesterday that a bandit robbed him of $1,100 in cash and $179 in checks while he was on his way to deposit the money in a neighborhood bank. The robbery, Turner said, took place in front of 1343 South Racine avenue.

It'll be just too bad about the breakfast dishes down on the south side today!

If they aren't deserted altogether they can expect only "a lick and a promise" at best. Because THE TRIBUNE'S second annual school of cookery is due to open at 1 o'clock at the Trianon ballroom, 62d and Cottage Grove avenue, and seats are going to be available there from 11:30 in the morning.

If you think that's too wide a margin of time, you don't know your TRIBUNE cooking schools, or you've forgotten the crush of women that stormed the doors of that same spacious hall a year ago this fall. They gathered hours in advance of the announced starting time and, surging through when the portals were opened after a long wait, filled every available chair and left disappointed hundreds outside. This year those in charge of the cookery school have made allowances and arrangements to change that situation. It's going to be first come, first served.

Improve Seating Plans.

The heads of the school have learned the popularity of the chatty and informing lectures by Mrs. Ida M. Chitwood, chief cook and demonstrator, who last year taught thousands of Chicago women scores of new tricks in their kitchen domains. As soon as it was decided to repeat the school this year by request, changes in the plans were indicated to improve the method of seating and avoid the long waits.

In addition to Mrs. Chitwood's new collection of recipes, and the talks of Mary Meade, TRIBUNE home economics expert, there will be an array of talent from the legitimate theater and the radio world to entertain the guests at the cooking school.

Master of Ceremonies Phil Maxwell is enthusiastic over the stars he will present. This first session will justify his enthusiasm. He will introduce Miss Kathryn Witwer, sprano soloist, who came from her home town of Gary to capture laurels in Chicago and who was sent abroad by her home town to develop her voice. He also will present that veteran of the stage, De Wolf Hopper, who is appearing at the Chicago Woman's Club theater in a revival of "The Mikado."

Cooking Expert's Program.

Mrs. Chitwood has already announced that her program for the afternoon will occupy two hours, the first lecture and demonstrations of dishes being made at 2 o'clock, and the second, following the appearance of Mr. Hopper, who is to be accompanied by his wife, Lillian Glaser, beginning at 3:30 and ending at 4:30. Since Mrs. Chitwood's schedule is sharply defined, it is fairly certain that every one will be out of the hall by 5 o'clock, in time to get home to try out some of the new recipes for the evening meal.

Just to start off the day and the week right for the southsiders, those favorites of the first cooking school, Frank and Cathryn Bennett, will be on hand to swing the crowd into the measures of the folk songs of the nation everybody warbled with such enjoyment last year. Cathryn Bennett will be at the piano, and Frank wields the baton.

Two other favorites who sang for last year's throngs—Henry Phillips and Ruth Streeter—will be on hand to sing duets again. They're really Mr. and Mrs. Henry Phillips now, for they were married after the first cooking school. Another familiar voice will be that of Bob Elson, radio announcer from W-G-N.

To Be Guests of Honor.

Last fall many a dance novelty was staged for the cooking school by boys and girls from the Ethel and Gertrude Morgan School of Dancing. This afternoon 40 of these youngsters will perform.

Guests of honor at this afternoon's session will be Mrs. Henry W. Hardy, president of the Chicago and Cook County Federation of Women's Organizations, and Miss Frances L. Swain, who has been administering the Hungry School Children's fund of THE TRIBUNE. Miss Swain is head of the household arts department of the Chicago schools. Rhea Seeger, fashion editor of THE TRIBUNE, will be introduced to the audience today, as will Sally Joy Brown, a "Friend in Need."

For four consecutive afternoons the cooking school will be held for the south siders at the Trianon, ending there on Friday. Entertainment numbers and the guest artists will be changed at each session. Next week the scene will shift to the Guyon's Paradise ballroom on the west side, and the following week to the Aragon ballroom in Lawrence avenue, until both the west side and the north side housewives have enjoyed the course.

Quantities of prizes are to be distributed to the crowds again this year. No tickets will be required for admission and the coupons for the prizes will be distributed inside the hall.

Richard Zimmerman, 20 years old, 8417 South Racine avenue, told a coroner's jury yesterday the story of how he struck and killed Harold Forbes, 10 years old, 1510 East 63d street, with his automobile and then fled the scene of the accident.

Zemmerman was arrested through the detective work of Sergt. Earl Cook of the Woodlawn police several hours after his car had killed the boy at 63d street and Indiana avenue. Miss Ruth Corrigan, 7253 West 37th street, a witness to the accident, gave Cook a description of the car and the last three numbers of the license.

Confesses at Hospital.

Cook searched automobile records until he discovered a car of the make he sought with corresponding numbers. He went to Zimmerman's home and found the automobile blood splattered and the radiator dented. Taken to the St. Bernard hospital, Zimmerman was confronted with the sight of Mrs. Myrtle Forbes sobbing over the body of her son and confessed.

The inquest was continued until Nov. 11 after Zimmerman testified that a girl he knew only as "Marie" was riding in the car shortly before the accident. Police asked time to find her, although Zimmerman said that he had let her out of the car before the crash.

Hurt When Train Hits Auto.

Gus Huber, 45 years old, of Elgin, was critically injured yesterday when his small sedan was demolished by a Skokie Valley electric train at Woodridge crossing west of Highland Park. Thirty passengers were shaken up when the train carried the wrecked car for 100 feet, then left the rails before coming to a halt.

Two deaths yesterday raised the 1932 Cook county motor toll to 921. The victims:

Walter Hamilton, 83 years old, 135 North Long avenue, retired business man. Died last night in the Garfield Park hospital of injuries incurred on Sunday when he was struck by an automobile in Washington boulevard at Long avenue. F. A. Hill, Jr., 44 years old, of 514 North Linden avenue, Oak Park, was the driver. Witnesses said the accident was unavoidable and Hill was not held.

Pearl Galbraith, 35 years old, a Negro, of 23 East 36th place. Fatally injured last night at 36th and State streets by an automobile which did not stop. He died in the Provident hospital.

Mrs. Charlotte Ferguson, 27 years old, 202 20th street, North Chicago, died in the Victory Memorial hospital, Waukegan, last night of injuries incurred when she was struck by an automobile driven by Peter Starin, 133 North Sheridan road, Waukegan, at Sheridan road and Clayton street in Waukegan.

Belle Bennett Near Death in Hospital at Hollywood

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—Belle Bennett, motion picture actress, was reported sinking tonight at Cedars of Lebanon hospital, where she has been a patient for several weeks. Little hope is held for her recovery from a serious ailment for which she recently underwent an operation in Pennsylvania, where she collapsed on the stage. Miss Bennett is semi-conscious. Her husband, Fred Windemere, film director, is at her bedside.

CANADIAN COURT BARS ATTACKS ON INSURANCE FIRM

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 24.—The law tightened its net today around J. J. Harpell, publisher of the monthly Journal of Commerce, who is now before the courts charged with criminal libel on action taken by T. B. Macaulay, president of the Sun Life Assurance company, following an attack on Macaulay and the Sun Life in the October issue of the Journal.

An interlocutory injunction was granted by Justice Boyer in the Practice division of the Superior court, restraining further publication of the paper if it contains any attack on the Sun Life. The injunction also forbids further circulation of the October issue.

The injunction was granted on the eve of the publication of the November issue, which Harpell admitted had something further on the Sun Life. Last week Harpell printed copies of a lengthy statement he started to make in court when committed for trial. The statement was ruled out of court and Harpell today was restrained from issuing any such statement.

SMITH ATTACKS HYPOCRISY OF G. O. P. PLATFORM

Says He Wrote His Party's Wet Plank.

More About Mabel.

After the 1928 campaign, Smith continued, Mrs. Willebrandt "got herself the cute little position of chief counsel of Fruit Industries, Inc., of California." He added that she dug up a wine brick "with 100 per cent kick in it" and convinced the department of justice that wine with 12 per cent alcohol was not illegal. She then, according to Mr. Smith, got the farm board to lend the Fruit Industries $20,000,000.

"So that when all is said and done," he declared, "Mabel collected a beautiful fee for making the Volstead act and the eighteenth amendment look just like 30 cents." The crowd shook with laughter.

That Mabel was the same woman who delivered that Ohio speech in the interests of temperance, the same Mabel who directed numberless prosecutions for dry law violations, while she was a paid servant at Washington, and before she got into the pay of the California fruit interests.

Vast Crowd Greet Smith.

More than 200,000 hailed the "Happy Warrior" as he moved on to Newark to deliver his first campaign attack on the Hoover administration.

In Jersey City alone, at least 100,000 cheering men, women and children lined the streets. And along the rest of the eight mile route from the Holland tunnel exit in Jersey City through Harrison, to the Newark armory, the former governor passed through almost unbroken lines of admirers.

Harrison turned out 20,000 citizens, almost half its population. In Newark fully 30,000 were massed outside the armory, unable to gain entrance, while 17,000 jammed the interior. It was estimated nearly 250,000 turned out to pay their tribute to the former governor.

Bands along the route played only two tunes, "East Side, West Side," the Smith march of 1928, and "Happy Days Are Here Again," the Roosevelt anthem of the current campaign.

As the Smith car moved up in front of the armory the crowd was so dense that 30 or 40 police had to force open a path. The arrival of Smith was the signal for a wild ovation both outside and inside the armory.

Outside the crowd was almost beyond police control, although 600 were on the job. Many women were crushed and pushed and more than 20 received hospital treatment. One man fell dead of excitement.

HOOVER SURE OF ILLINOIS, GLENN REPORTS TO HIM

Washington, D. C., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—Listed among the encouraging political news received at the White House during the day was a personal report from Senator Otis Glenn [Rep., Ill.] to the effect that President Hoover was now certain to receive the twenty-nine electoral votes controlled by the state of Illinois.

The Illinois senator, now up for reelection, told Walter Newton of the White House secretarial staff that the American people were turning away from Gov. Roosevelt because "the most radical and unsound men in public life" are among his sponsors.

"Our state was doubtful three weeks ago, but it is doubtful no longer," Senator Glenn said. "The desertions from Roosevelt and the sweep to Hoover began three weeks ago, but have been increasingly apparent in the last week. Many competent observers believe that Hoover will even carry Cook county, in which Chicago is located.

"The people are becoming more and more impressed with the sort of advisers who have surrounded Gov. Roosevelt and taken over his campaign. They see among his sponsors the most radical and unsound men in public life. They see every class of irresponsible person advocating his election. The people tremble of the thought of an administration sponsored and controlled by such people.

"The attacks upon the President by the communists and anarchists, as evidenced at Detroit last Saturday night, are consolidating the forces of sound thinking Americans who do not want to see America taken over by such classes."

LABOR SHORTAGE HITS HARVESTS OF SOVIET CROPS

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

MOSCOW, Oct. 24.—While the soviet record cotton crop, estimated at 1,500,000 tons, is being rapidly harvested, the grain, beet, flax, and other crops are behind last year. This, it is stated, is due to a shortage of labor.

The newspaper Isvestia states that the tractor machine stations on state farms and in grain producing regions have 30 to 50 per cent of their machines idle because mechanics and drivers have abandoned their jobs for better positions elsewhere. The same applies to the collective farms.

Crops on millions of acres have not been gathered because the men will not remain on the land while they are deprived of clothing, tools, tea, sugar, and tobacco when the towns and construction camps or the wandering life of the so-called individual producer or trader offers more.

SMITH PRAISES JUDGE HORNER AND COURTNEY

Friends of Judge Horner and of State Senator Thomas J. Courtney were pleased last night, while listening to the radio broadcast of Al Smith's speech from Newark, to hear the Democratic leader boost their candidacies. Mr. Smith advised his Illinois and Chicago admirers to vote for the judge and Senator Courtney and said he regretted his inability to come to Illinois to help them in their election fights.

TEXT OF ALFRED E. SMITH'S SPEECH FOR DEMOCRATIC TICKET

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 24.—(AP)—The text of former Gov. Alfred E. Smith's speech in behalf of the Democratic national ticket tonight follows:

"Mr. Chairman and my friends of New Jersey: Bear in mind that the cheering all comes out of the radio time and it is one of the chief items of expenditure today in a national campaign. And funds are not coming in nearly as lively as they did in the prosperous and better days of 1928. So in the interest of economy we take the cheering out of the radio.

"Realizing how impossible it would be for me to meet the demands of my many friends in different sections of the country, realizing how impossible it would be for me to respond as I was so happy to respond tonight to the call of New Jersey and I will later in the week respond to the call of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, I take this opportunity in a nation-wide hookup, knowing that there are thousands at the radio apparatus to find out what I have to say.

"Now, I would love to go into the state of Connecticut in the interest of Gov. Cross. He has given that state a forward looking and progressive administration, and at the hands of the constituency of Connecticut he deserves reelection.

Urges Horner's Election.

"It is a matter of great regret that I cannot go to the state of Illinois. I am particularly interested in the election of Judge Horner for governor of that great commonwealth. I am interested in electing Tom Courtney, who is a candidate for state's attorney in the state of Illinois, and I hope all the people in that state over whom I am able to exercise even the slightest amount of influence will for my sake and for their sake and for the sake of that state remember them on election day.

Well, now, let us get to it. The first thing I want to call to your mind, and it probably appeals to me quicker than to anybody else, is the flight of time. Just think, it is four years since I stood on this platform or some place in Newark—I don't know whether it was here or not, but I know it was in Newark, because I had quite a time getting to the place and a harder time getting away. Well, we are four years older, but we are certainly at least 40 years wiser.

"In 1928, as we partly at the time but thoroughly realized afterwards, we were waging an important fight. Not the least element that operated against us to the last degree was the great Republican boast that that particular party had a patent on business prosperity, that they were responsible for its production, and that they alone could continue it. When my mind goes back and I think of the rosy promises, I can imagine how easy it was for a great public to fall for it, that there would be a chicken in every pot.

Poverty to Be Abolished.

"Every workingman had two automobiles and he went from his home to the mill with his silk socks on and it was even promised to us that poverty was forever to be abolished from the land, although our divine Lord himself said, 'the poor you will always have with you.'

"In looking through the speeches of my Republican opponent in 1928, looking for something that made an argument—I was hungry for argument—I was anxious for it. But what did we hear? And, incidentally, you heard it in Newark.

"The reading of the reports of the department of commerce telling the number of new telephones installed, the number of miles of electric light wires, the great growth of business, and all put to the credit of the Republican party that was supposed to have produced that prosperity, and promised to continue it.

Assails Claims of Hoover.

"And that last straw, the very last straw that broke the camel's back, was when the candidate for President claimed for the Republican party credit for the increased number of children in the public schools. I could not let him get away with that. Down in Baltimore I said, 'Wait a minute, now. Go easy on that. The Democrats are pretty good at that themselves.' Incidentally, with becoming modesty, I reminded him that I made my full contribution.

"However, it goes without saying that the people in all walks of life in 1928 were not thinking very much about this country. Let us be very frank about it. They were not thinking of any progressive measures for improving the government of the country or, incidentally, any service that it could give to its people. They were interested in themselves; they were interested in their pocketbooks; their vote was a selfish vote.

"And if the fire that was gone through, the chastening fire that followed the paralysis of business and industry, with unemployment close in its wake—if it taught us one thing, it has taught us that in the future and for many years to come no candidate for public office will dare to stand on the platform any place in the United States and claim the credit for any political party for the economic cycles of business depression and business rally.

Says History Repeats Itself.

"Well, there is nothing new. Everything you do, after all, is just history repeating itself. Here we have the Republican cabinet officers. They are the advance guard. They are out in the front row. Here we have them all out at the present time promising to restore something that they could not hold when they had it. I wonder if any of them really realize that the attitude of the rank and file of the people of this country in a short period of time has completely changed with respect to the 18th amendment. I am not sure that they have, and I am going to speak about it.

"Incidentally, I will compare, in the course of my remarks, the two platforms, so that we may understand definitely just what the two parties promise, and why there is such a vast difference. It is a difficult thing to get into your mind how easy it is to fool so many people, but it has been done with such success in the past that I think we are all coming around gradually to the belief that Barnum probably was right.

"In 1928 both parties ducked the prohibition issue. They were both afraid of it. The Democratic party wasn't a bit better than the Republican party. They both laid down, in fear of the consequence had they taken a decided step looking to revision or repeal of the 18th amendment.

Recalls His Wet Telegram.

"Let us go back and see what happened. Do you remember my telegram to the convention at Houston, defining my attitude? I was advised to hold that telegram back, not to send it until the convention was adjourned. I insisted that that telegram be read to the convention before its adjournment, so that if the convention was not satisfied with my attitude on prohibition, they could reconsider the vote by which they nominated me, and nominate somebody else.

"I think that the record pretty clearly indicates that I did not dodge it, I did not duck it; I went into it head on. As a result of that, after the convention was over, there sprang up all over the country a widespread opposition to me because of that telegram, which we all found out afterwards was nothing more or less than a cloak for bigotry.

"Well, we will always have some people in this country who have nothing to think with. I understand that and appreciate it fully, and in my time I have helped as many of that kind of people as any living man. I thought for them, but what I found particular fault with was that the Republican party with its money, its power, and its influence, incited and paid and encouraged that spirit of bigotry. They should have discouraged it, but it meant votes and it meant dissension within the Democratic ranks, and it is a matter of record that it was encouraged.

Refers to Mrs. Willebrandt.

"The chairman tonight mentioned the name of a lady who had a large part in putting before the country the Republican attitude with respect to that, and with a great deal of respect for her, I desire to have a little something to say about the career of Mabel Willebrandt.

"Do you remember the time that she appeared before the Methodist conference in Ohio and urged the Methodist ministers to go out and preach to their people to bring about my defeat? That was on the theory that I had spoken against the 18th amendment. We know why it was. Here is what she said:

"'There are 2,000 Methodists here. You have in your churches more than 600,000 members of the Methodist church in Ohio alone. That is enough to swing the election. The 600,000 have friends in other states. Write to them every day. And every ounce of your energy is needed to arouse the friends of prohibition to register and vote.'"

Mable Writes Little Book.

"Well, what happened? When the campaign was all over and Mabel was being put on the shelf the Republican party was not quick or spontaneous in the reward for her questionable services. So she wrote a little book. And she said down deep in her heart, 'I will get hunk on them.' And here is what she said in the book. Speaking about the speech, she says, 'I made it at the request of the Republican national committee and not as a free lance; in fact, I wired the committee asking twice to be excused from making the speech. But I was urged by the Republican national committee in two telegrams which I still have in my files.'

"So the real fact is, that the speech did not sit so well on Mabel's conscience.

"But she found it necessary after the campaign was over and the election was won to explain that she was not there in her personal capacity, but she was there speaking for the Republican national committee. She further said that every single line—every line—was edited by the Republican national committee before she made the speech. Well, what happened? Naturally a speech of that kind brought a great wave of protest from liberal minded people inside of both parties, and she was repudiated by some of the progressive thinking leaders of her own party. Senator Edge of New Jersey, not in so many words but in thought, said, 'Keep her out of Jersey.'

How They Receive Protests.

"Well, what was the answer of the Republican national committee? How did they receive the protests that came from all parts of the country and from all kinds of people? Why, they received them this way:

"New York newspapers, Sept. 27, 1928, 'Mrs. Willebrandt will continue the stiff attacks but speaking under the auspices of the Republican committee for the south and midwest. Newton explains her status.'

"Which means that he explains that she was talking for the Republican national committee. Who is Newton? Newton was at that time the secretary of Herbert Hoover and he is now the secretary to President Hoover, and sitting on the board of strategy at that time outlining the campaign was no less a person than the Republican candidate for governor of the state of New York, Col. Bill Donovan.

"So that so far as the Willebrandt incident is concerned, let it be read into the political history of this country that what she did at the behest of the Republican national committee and the bigotry and the intolerance that arose throughout the country because of her remarks can be directly charged to that political committee.

Mabel With Blazing Torch.

"Do you remember the cartoon by Rollin Kirby which stirred so many people? He had a picture of that terrible looking fellow that he calls Prohibition, that stovepipe hat and the battered umbrella and that terribly cadaverous look, and he was holding out his hands and on his hand Mabel was standing with the blazing torch of bigotry and intolerance. Well, four years make quite a change in the picture. The Republican convention at Chicago, with characteristic hypocrisy and, I add, characteristic stupidity, attempted to face both ways on the prohibition question.

"They tried to hold out a sop to the wets and a little bone to the drys, so that they could again repeat the performance of 1928 and try to have everybody with them, and had it not been for the office-holders that were amenable to the influence of the White House that were delegates to that Republican convention at Chicago, that convention would have handed the United States of America as clear cut a wet platform as did the Democratic national convention. But what did they run up against? They ran up against Herbert Hoover, who is himself the leader of the dry forces today in the United States.

"You see how the things work double. The platform in 1928 dodged. Hoover tried to fix it up in his speech of acceptance and whispering over the fellows in the high hat, and he said 'it is a noble experiment.' Now, he wanted to get the liberal fellows in the city, he wanted all the golf players with him. And he turned around to them and he said, 'but there are things about it that are not all right and I will appoint a commission to study it.'

"Well, both groups left the convention. The drys went into a huddle and they said, 'he called it a noble experiment.' Then his friends among the wets said, 'that was just to calm them down; he is going to do something about it because he says it is not all right.' And he appointed the commission.

"It cost a half million dollars. They brought in a report, and 16 out of 11 of them said that prohibition was an absolute failure, that it did not prohibit. Ten out of 11 of them wanted something done to it right away. Several were for complete assassination. Others were for modification. One fellow wanted to give it another trial for a little longer and less than six months after he asked for that, he took a plea and said, 'I guess I better had be with the majority.' So that the whole 11 of them would be against it.

"What did the President do, after all that study and all that expenditure? He just quietly pigeonholed it and said nothing about it and thought nothing about it, and then he stopped the Republican national convention from taking a clear cut stand. Is there any doubt that he is the leader today? Wait until you hear who endorsed him.

Indorsed by Dry Leaders.

"Daniel Poling, president of the allied forces and editor of the Christian Herald and general secretary of the Christian Endeavor movement. He is also indorsed by Dr. Dinwiddie, president of the National Temperance bureau and secretary of the Prohibition Board of Strategy. He is indorsed by Dr. Rowland, editor of the Virginia Christian Advocate, Methodist. President Bishop Richardson, representing the Anti-Saloon League also indorsed him, and that indorsement is published in the organ of the Ku Klux Klan, known as the Fellowship Forum.

"Incidentally, that brings something back to my mind. The Fellowship Forum in 1928 was not only the active organ of the klan, but it was encouraged by the Republican National committee. When a lady from the New York World went to the Republican headquarters in Washington and said 'Where can we get some of these newspapers that attack Al Smith and the Pope?' The young secretary said:

"'We haven't any here, but come with me.'

"He got into her automobile and brought her around to the headquarters of the Fellowship Forum and there she got all she wanted. Well, let us get back to Mabel for a little while, as the saying goes, 'Up in Mabel's room.' After the victory in 1928 what became of Mabel? She was smart. I give her great credit. She was foxy. She didn't wait for the revolution to come. A cute little position as chief counsel of the Fruit Industries, Inc., of California.

Dig Up a Great Engineer.

"Now, this group of fruit growers dug up a great engineer some place who was able to devise a brick of concentrated grapes, so after it received a certain amount of treatment it just poured out for the people effervescent-like the old-time vintage that had the 100 per cent kick.

"Here were all of these grapes that resembled for all the world the stuffing of a mince pie. And the fellow came along and said, 'Now you see it, now you don't. Presto, change, what will you have?' I think these nice fruit growers should have paid for these competent services secured from Mabel.

"She did two things for them, two wonderful things: No. 1, she convinced the department of justice that this 12 per cent wine was not intoxicating That is some stunt. When you figure that old Uncle Andy Volstead fixed it at one-half of one per cent, and she jumped it up 11½ per cent and still robbed it of any intoxicating matter.

Gets Loan of $20,000,000.

"She did something else for them which is equally important. She got the farm board to lend them $20,000,000. There is no doubt about that. It was all published in the papers. Let us look at what the papers said about it at the time.

"Senator Copeland, speaking before the United States senate, said that the Republican party paid its debt to Mrs. Willebrandt. Paid its debt in what way? Declared that her concentrated grape juice was all right and did not violate the law, and then loaned them $20,000,000. But the director of the prohibition bureau in Washington said that there was a billion dollars' worth of this wine made with a 12½ per cent alcoholic content. So that when all is said and done, Mabel collected a beautiful big fee to make the Volstead act and the 18th amendment just look like thirty cents.

"Well, there still had to be something done. And on Friday, Aug. 7, 1931, the New York papers carried a big headline that out in open court, right in the trial of a suit, the charge was made, and went unchallenged, that her particular client was going free from prosecution at the hands of the department of justice. And incidentally, there are some opinions taken from some of our more or less prominent citizens about it, and there was a former resident of New York by the name of Legs Diamond who was asked what he thought about it, and here is what he said. He says, 'Yes, I read about it. It sounds to me like a good racket.'

"Well, you know you can get away with that for a certain length of time, and in order to show you how quick the worm can turn, the same Methodist conference that she addressed in Ohio, presumably in the interest of temperance, held a meeting and deplored the fact that the woman whose voice had been so eloquently raised before the nation in support of what they call temperance—but what they really mean is prohibition—should have gone over to the liquor traffic by being counsel for the Fruit Industries, Inc., of California.

Raid One of Mabel's Clients.

"Well, finally it got a little bit too hot even for the department of justice. And they finally raided one of Mabel's clients; and the attorney general made the decision that her wine bricks were not kosher. They were like all the rest of them, a violation of the law.

"On listening in to the national convention of the Democratic party at Chicago I heard a husky Texan rise in his place and cast the forty votes of Texas for a wet platform—and I lost Texas because of prohibition. Now, there is the history. And for hypocrisy, for deceit, for double dodging, double dealing and double crossing, it probably has nothing to equal it in all the annals of American history.

Quotes G. O. P. Platform.

"Let us take a look at the platform. The Democratic plank on prohibition consists of about 50, or 60 words; the Republican plank is half a page. But I will only read two little sections: No. 1, 'We do not favor a submission limited to the issue of retention or repeal.' What does that mean? That means that they will not limit the issue only for submitting it to the American people, to the question of repeal. Nothing could be plainer than that. They did not have to say it in the platform. If you want my private opinion of the fellow that put it in there, I would put him in the bonehead class.

"There is no reason for saying it, but although that is what they mean. Now, this, however, is the important fact, 'Members of the Republican party hold different opinions with respect to it, and no public official or member of the party should be pledged or forced to choose between his party affiliations and his earnest convictions upon this question.' What does that mean? That means that while the party declares it as a fundamental principle, no candidate is pledged to it.

"He can do anything he likes. That is exactly what that means. It is an empty declaration. It does not mean anything. It was not intended to mean anything. It was put in there with cold blooded deliberation so that they could come out afterwards and say in the various congressional districts, 'I am not bound by that. My platform distinctly and specifically absolves me from any adherence again to any declaration against the 18th amendment.' That is what it was put in there for and that is exactly what it means, and I will show you that is what it means.

Drys Indorse Eight Candidates.

"The dry forces met in the state of New York last week and they indorsed eight congressmen—all, above the Bronx line. It is not necessary for me to tell you, but in order to get the record straight, all eight of them were above the Bronx, and it is not worthy that all eight of them were indorsed by the dry forces of New York. Why, because the dry forces had read that section of the platform and they knew that these men are not bound by it and that when they go down to Washington they can do as they please about it. Consequently, it is easy for them to receive the approval of the Anti-Saloon league, the Women's Christian Temperance union, the Ku Klux Klan, the Methodist conference, and the aggregation of bigots that make up what they call the dry forces.

"At that, at best it would take a couple of years to repeal or amend or supplement that eighteenth amendment. Meanwhile, what about the power of congress to amend the Volstead act and give us light wines and beer? Is there anything about that in the Republican platform? The dry leaders of the United States could not stand for that. That is something different, that is something that can be done at once, and it is pushed to one side.

Quotes Democratic Plank.

"Now, let us go back and look at the Democratic platform. The Democratic national convention is speaking to the people of the United States and no political party during my time or any particular issue spoke more plainly and more definitely than the Democratic party spoke from that convention in Chicago when it said:

"'We favor the repeal of the 18th amendment, to effect such repeal we demand congress immediately provise a constitutional amendment of duly representative conventions in states, called to act solely on that proposal. We urge the enactment of such measures by the several states as will effectually promote temperance and effectually retard the return of the saloon and bring liquor traffic into the open, under complete supervision and under the control of the states. We demand that the federal government effectively exercise its power to enable the states to protect themselves against importation of intoxicant liquors in violation of their own laws. Pending repeal, we favor immediate modification of the Volstead act to legalize the manufacture and sale of beer and other beverages of such alcoholic content as is permissible, under the constitution, and to derive therefrom a profit and needed revenue.'

"I wrote that plank. No man on the committee on resolutions worked harder or put more energy into putting it into the platform than the commissioner of the public safety of this city, who was talking on the platform a while ago.

"Well, it is the old story—history repeats itself, ducking and dodging. I remember a funny little story connected with the 1928 campaign. When little Willie was going to bed at night, he had a little bed time conversation with his father and he said: 'Father, I see that Senator Borah was out west and said that prohibition was the paramount issue of the campaign, but Judge Hughes was talking in New York and Judge Hughes said that prohibition was a sham battle, now, papa, which of them is right?' And his father said, 'Well, they are both right. Senator Borah was talking out in dry territory and Judge Hughes was talking in wet territory.'"

What Is Political Honesty?

"Then little Willie looked up at his father and he said, 'Papa, what is the meaning of political honesty?' And his father said, 'Go to bed, Willie. Don't be asking so many questions.'

"The result of it all has been just this: The Democratic platform plank has put the Democratic party in the right light of intelligent understanding on the part of the intelligent people throughout the United States and it leaves the Republican party today where it was in 1928—the party of bigotry, of deceit, and of hypocrisy.

"What brought this on so fast? We have been discussing this question for about twenty years. I wrote memoranda against prohibition as far back as in 1923, and I spoke against it. What brought it on so fast? The economic condition. It came and hit the people of America between the eyes, and there has been more accomplished on that side of it than there was talking on the moral side of it in all the five years that preceded the last year.

Bootlegger Cheats Uncle Sam.

"The American people have awakened to find out that our first families, our society people, and our speakeasies of high and low character are dealing with bootleggers. The bootlegger is waxing fat. No revenues are coming in to the government. The sale of this stuff is going on all over the country in every state of the Union.

"The bootlegger is cheating his Uncle Sam. He pays no income taxes. He does a cash business. There is no way of checking him up. Meanwhile the wise sages of the government in Washington are tossing out the window the billions of dollars that could be legitimately taken from this traffic and they are rooting around the family cupboard and in the small business store and in the big accounting house trying to find enough money in taxation to keep the government going.

"I ran across this only yesterday. 'Tax yield rises, but falls short of the estimate.' Up to a couple of days ago we were only five hundred million dollars overboard. We have to find up to date five hundred million. Watch that figure grow. By the time congress gets ready to pass some more nuisance taxes it will probably be a billion. Then we are going through the senseless performance down there of increasing the income tax at a time when nobody has an income. They absolutely forget, going back to the elementary principles of mathematics that twice nothing is nothing.

Few Understand Political Issues.

"Now, I confess that political issues are confusing to the average mind. Few people understand the intricate question of taxes. Few people understand our foreign relations, our foreign debts, or our inter-governmental debts, but everybody, even the children in the high school distinctly understand that the 18th amendment did not prohibit and the Volstead act did not prevent, and that conditions are worse today than they were before the enactment of this amendment, and that the federal government and the various governments of the states are getting absolutely no revenue from it."

Rum Planes Overhead.

"If you think that children don't understand it why, when I was down in Florida I went across to West Palm Beach to visit an old lady, who came from the old neighborhood in New York and who had gone there to live with her daughter. She told me that her grandchildren could spot the airplanes that were bringing the booze over from the Bahama islands every night and Florida is supposed to be dry.

"Now this is the time to settle that question. Let me impress upon my listeners in every part of this country that if you do not settle this question on the eighth of November there is no use of holding any protest meetings in January. There is no use of gathering in solemn conclave and harrassing the government. It won't get you any place. Now is the time to settle it, and it must be settled by the election of Democratic congressmen, because they are the ones, under the platform, that are pledged to this reform. The Republicans are on the string—they are on the loose; they can do whatever they like about it.

Appeals to Jersey Voters.

"Now, incidentally, that brings me to an important question affecting the whole country, but, particularly affecting New Jersey. Congressman Stewart here, your candidate for senator, is running for an unexpired term. He does not have to wait until the fourth of March to be inaugurated as a senator of the United States. He goes into that office at the next lame duck session, which will be in the month of December, and his vote makes the senate of the United States Democratic. The people of New Jersey have it within their power, by his election to make the senate the moving force and the great power for the settling of this question of reform that the country is crying about.

"There is another thing I want to say in New Jersey. The people of this state should elect a Democratic legislature to hold up the hands of Gov. Moore in his efforts to reorganize the archaic government of this state. I do not think anybody can speak about that with any better personal understanding of it than I have. I battled for it in New York against a Republican legislature, and had it not been for the fact that I went back to Albany so many times that it looked like I was a civil service employe and could only be removed on charges, I never would have got it done.

"Under the constitution of New Jersey no governor succeeds himself, and unless he accomplishes it in three years he has got to stay out three before he can come back and tackle it again, and if you want the government reorganized and want a greater efficiency and greater economy in its engagement, if you want it brought down to date and made modern the way the business organizations are made throughout the country, hold up the hands of your governor by the election of a Democratic legislature.

Plea for National Ticket.

"Now I have but a few minutes left, and in conclusion let me leave with you just this thought: when you go home tonight search your conscience, search your memory and see if you can think of one great big public question that has been settled by the present Republican administration.

"See if you can find one great big public question that they made a reasonably good attempt to settle. Instead of that we received a program of threat that if the Republican party is defeated the return of prosperity will be retarded.

"I deny that, and I deny it emphatically, and I state from this platform to my nation-wide audience that the election of the Democratic ticket is the best way to solve these problems and the best way to bring back prosperity—the election of Roosevelt and Garner."

SPUR DEMOCRAT PRECINCT HEADS AT PARTY RALLY

Democratic precinct captains of the first 25 wards of the city attended a pep meeting in the Hotel Sherman yesterday afternoon as the party launched its drive in Cook county.

Patrick A. Nash, chairman of the county central committee, presided. Candidates pleaded for support of the workers.

"Our only danger now is over-confidence," William H. Dieterich, candidate for United States senator, told the workers. You must fight for democracy in Cook county as the workers have down state."

"Keep the rascals on the run," urged Judge Horner, candidate for governor. "When I get in the governor's chair I pledge you there will be no pardoning of gangsters, racketeers, and hoodlums. Work to help drive them out of the county and into jail."

Mayor Cermak urged the workers to visit every home in their precincts. You will be judged by your performance for those at the top, he said. "I want no knifing, no deals and no compromise."

INSULL REPORTED SEEKING DELAY IN FIGHT ON RETURN

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ATHENS, Greece, Oct. 24. — Greek lawyers hinted today that the extradition of Samuel Insull may never come to a legal showdown in Athens. They discussed reports that Insull's agents in Chicago are trying to obtain assurances that prosecution of the fallen utilities czar on charges of larceny and embezzlement would be delayed for some time.

This delay, it was stated, would permit feeling in Chicago against Insull to cool down, when the utilities magnate would agree to return voluntarily to face trial.

Prepares for Long Stay.

Meanwhile, under such an arrangement, the battle which Insull and his lawyers have been preparing to wage against a demand by the United States for his extradition could be stalled along or abandoned.

At any rate, Insull apparently has no intention of leaving Greece now. He has sent to Paris for clothes and other things that he needs for an extended stay.

Insull chuckled today when he read press reports quoting Charles M. Schwab in London as saying: "If the depression continues, I may have to join Insull in Greece."

"Well, I wish he would come down," Insull said.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 24.—Samuel Insull Jr. left his hotel secretly this morning and was out all day.

The hotel staff says that he keeps very much to himself, and that so far he has received no callers other than newspaper men. He manages to avoid drawing attention to himself by the simple method of removing his horn rimmed glasses, which considerably alters his appearance.

May Meet Father's Lawyer.

Questioned regarding the return to London from Athens tomorrow of Insull's British solicitor, Arthur Page, and if he has arranged a meeting with Page, young Insull declared:

"I do not know where Page is at the moment, although I have heard that he is en route to London. If he is en route to London to see me then it is probably in connection with my father's affairs, and that being the case, as I said before, I have nothing to say and will have nothing to say concerning father's affairs."

Asked if he plans to do anything important tonight, young Insull said that he was going to bed early, unhook the telephone, and sleep "like hell" until late tomorrow morning.

Enthusiastic!

DEERPATH Draped Suits

This is particularly true of young men who are familiar with all the current versions of the so-called "London drape." It's true of young men who quickly recognize the amazingly close resemblance of the Deerpath to custom clothes produced by only a few important tailors here and abroad.

Of course, it's reasonable to expect a highly refined form of the drape in Deerpath Suits—we've had more than a year's experience making and selling them.

Look at all draped suits—if you like—we're sure you'll like the Deerpath best of all.

Famous Tribune Cooking School Expert

When every cent must be carefully spent—follow the advice of the Tribune Cooking School expert, Mrs. Ida Chitwood, and "build your meals around milk." There's a world of experience behind this sage testimony. She knows her menus . . . and how to stretch food dollars to their limit. And she advises you accordingly.

Food economists and physicians everywhere today indorse Mrs. Chitwood's statement—and even add that every child should drink a quart of milk daily and every adult at least one pint. There's a reason for it: milk is the only inexpensive food that contains every vitamin and mineral essential to nutrition. If you use milk as your basic food, you cut your food costs to a minimum without lessening food enjoyment.

Why not try it? Milk is a delicious, invigorating food; and it can be served delightfully (without losing a single degree of its health-giving qualities) in tasty puddings, creamed vegetables, soups and other satisfying dishes.

We suggest that you experiment for just one week. Try the menus listed below—and when you've discovered what an aid they are to pleasant economy, fill out the coupon and we'll send you more!

NEW ORDINANCE URGED TO HELP END TAX STRIKE

Clark Would Revoke Delinquents' Licenses.

Ald. John S. Clark [30th], chairman of the council finance committee, asked the corporation counsel's office yesterday to prepare a resolution or ordinance for passage by the city council revoking all licenses, permits and special privileges held by property owners who are able to pay their taxes but have refused to do so.

The measure will also put the council on record as opposing any future grants of licenses or permits to tax strikers. A number of aldermen expressed themselves as in accord with the move, stating that the city should spare no effort to break the tax strike and rescue the city from the financial distress. If the corporation counsel's office prepares the measure asked by Ald. Clark within a few days a special council meeting may be called to consider it. The next regular meeting of the council is Nov. 10.

Discuss Tax Strike.

A county board subcommittee meeting yesterday to consider Commissioner Peter M. Kelly's plan to arrange credit for unpaid county employes, spent most of its time discussing the tax strike. Commissioner Dan Ryan precipitated the discussion when he asked Hayden N. Bell, county tax attorney, if the recent ruling of the United States Supreme court in the Bistor case might be expected to increase immediate tax payments.

"There are really two heads to this business of a tax strike," replied Mr. Bell. "One head is the Bistor group. It controls a billion dollars worth of property, and has about $55,000,000 in taxes tied up. The other group is the Keehn outfit [Attorney Roy D. Keehn is one of the counsel in the Cisar tax case, which the United States Supreme court has been asked to consider.] I can't get any exact figures from that group, but I believe it has $20,000,000 in taxes tied up. That is 70 odd millions of dollars of tax money tied up by these two groups.

"There's one way to break this up. I thought when the Supreme court ruled on the Bistor and Cisar cases that that would end it, but now they say they are going to re-litigate the cases, open up these same questions again, and carry them once more to the Supreme court. All they want to do is to stave off payment of taxes on those properties.

Charges Lawyers Seek Delays.

"What I think the county board ought to do is to get about 90 clerks working in the county treasurer's office and Judge Jarecki's office, and we'll carry those cases to judgment in half the time required if we follow the ordinary routine. The lawyers simply want to delay this so that they can get from ten to twenty millions in fees. If we send the cases to judgment, the fees won't be paid."

"What about property that's in receivership?" asked Commissioner Grace Fleming. "I understood that the state's attorney, with the help of the judges, was going to make every receiver pay up the taxes."

"Judge Harry Fisher says that a receiver can't use rents to pay taxes," said Deputy Controller O'Connor.

"O, that Judge Fisher!" interjected Mrs. Fleming.

"He's wrong," declared Mr. Bell. "How can he be right when the statute says that taxes are a first and prior lien on property? You can't drive an iron wedge in ahead of taxes when the statute says that."

Consider Kelly Proposal.

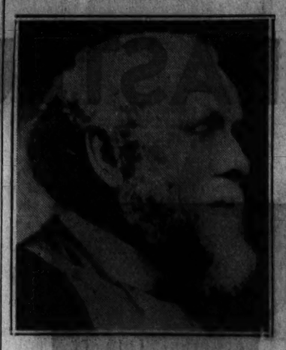
The subcommittee then returned to consideration of Commissioner Kelly's proposal that county employes be given credit slips up to a half of their unpaid salaries, which State street department stores and other merchants have agreed to accept at par, provided they are legal.

Commissioner Ryan asked why the stores would accept the credit slips if they are unwilling to take tax warrants.

"If a man has his June or July salary coming from the county, and we give him some means of proving that it is due him," said Commissioner Kelly, "the merchants know very well that the salary is going to be paid before 1931 or 1932 tax warrants are redeemed.

The subcommittee approved the plan tentatively, pending preparation of an opinion as to its legality by Mr. Bell, which will be considered tomorrow by the full finance committee of the board.

TO VISIT CHICAGO



THE RT. REV. W. G. CECIL.

The Rt. Rev. Lord William Gascoyne Cecil, bishop of Exeter and member of the famous Cecil family in England, will be the guest in Chicago of Bishop George Craig Stewart from Nov. 6 to Nov. 8, it was announced yesterday. Bishop Cecil will address the Church Club of Chicago, an Episcopal organization, at a dinner in his honor Nov. 7, and the Sunday Evening club on Nov. 6.

LAUSANNE, Switzerland, Oct. 24.—(AP)—The Court of Appeals today reversed a decision of the Geneva tribunal which recently granted Nelson Morris of Chicago 1,500 francs ($290) damages against a Geneva theater which permitted Jean Aubert, his actress wife, to appear on its stage despite his objections.

Canadian Vet Put in Charge of Portsmouth Prison

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 24.—Col. W. B. Megloughlin, veteran of the world war, has been placed in charge of Portsmouth penitentiary at Kingston, the scene of rioting by 900 convicts last week. Tear bombs have been used to restore quiet at the prison. Hugh Guthrie, minister of justice, told parliament today.

DEMANDS LOWER TAX LEVY; IT'S RAISED INSTEAD

Amount Is Doubled by the Appeals Board.

George F. Nixon and Fred W. Brummel, members of the board of tax appeals, yesterday for the first time increased a valuation in a 1931 personalty assessment as determined by Assessor J. L. Jacobs. During the 10 days of the board's work it has sustained many, canceled a few and reduced approximately 50 per cent of the assessments covered by the 600 protests it has heard.

The protesting taxpayer whose assessment was raised was Paul G. Warren, 156 Scottswood road, Riverside, assistant secretary of the Gunthorp-Warren Printing company. He filed a schedule listing his personal property at $322 value. This valuation was increased by the assessor to $1,233. Warren then complained against the increase.

Admits Owning Cruiser.

In an earlier hearing last week Warren had admitted that he owned a 10 room home in Riverside. When he was questioned by the appeals board he said that he owned a 38 foot motor cruiser in Belmont harbor which he had failed to schedule at all.

When Warren appeared yesterday H. G. Bollman, deputy assessor and representative of the assessor's office before the appeals board, produced an itemized appraisal of the furnishings in Warren's home and of his boat. The deputy assessor suggested that Warren's assessment be raised to $3,195.

Warren insisted that this valuation was grossly inaccurate. He said that all the furniture in his home was 10 years old and nearly worthless. After the board members questioned him they set his assessment at $2,670, more than double the amount he had protested.

Debate Over Complaint.

In the morning a sharp debate took place between Deputy Assessor Bollman and Mr. Nixon over the complaint of Clyde M. Robinson, 723 North East avenue, Oak Park. Robinson asserted he was assessed at a total of $849 because of a 50 per cent penalty which was added to his valuation on the grounds that he had failed to file a schedule. He contended that he had filed a schedule.

After a few questions the board members ordered Robinson's schedule reduced to $241. Bollman objected.

"I don't see how you can remit a penalty for failure to file a schedule," he said. "That penalty is fixed by law. How can you believe that the assessor would say no schedule had been filed if it actually had been made?"

"I'll show you how we can do it," retorted Mr. Nixon. "We aren't going to assume that every taxpayer is a liar."

Schedule Filed, He Insists.

"I consider my word just as good as any deputy assessor's," interjected Robinson. "My schedule was sent in by my notary public."

"Anyway, we've included a penalty in the changed valuation," Mr. Nixon told Bollman.

"What's the makeup of the assessment and the penalty," asked the latter.

"That's our business," shouted Nixon, "just you put down what we told you."

SENTENCES TWO GUN TOTERS.

Municipal Judge John F. Haas yesterday sentenced Tony Mirones, 20 years old, 2500 West 45th street, and Tony Lipschis, 17 years old, 2522 West 45th street, who were captured in an attempted holdup a week ago, to serve six months in the Bridewell for carrying concealed weapons.

DUCE MAKES NEW PEACE OFFER TO HOSTILE TURIN

Urges People to Join the Fascist Party.

TURIN, Italy, Oct. 24.—(AP)—Premier Benito Mussolini made new proffers of peace today to the Turinese, who probably have been the most hostile people in all Italy towards Fascism.

Workers in a big automobile plant cheered his statement that "no other country in Europe or America does for the workers what Fascism is doing for you." He urged they join the Fascist party.

The second day of his first visit here in nine years was to conclude tonight with a dinner given him by Crown Prince Humbert and his bride in Castle Racconigi, the king's summer residence. It is the first such entertainment the crown prince has offered Il Duce.

Walks Without Escort.

Turin's reluctance to accept Fascism has been attributed partially to its affection for the prince, whose favorite home is here.

In contrast with the elaborate precautions taken yesterday for protection of the premier on the occasion of his arrival here, Mussolini walked without an escort through lanes of cheering workers at the automobile plant.

"From morning till night I am absorbed in the task of seeking to create more employment for the people," the premier told them.

The son of a blacksmith himself, the premier stood beside a huge wooden anvil as he addressed the men.

Drives to Feudal Castle.

Mussolini drove to the feudal castle, 25 miles from here, for what was described as the "family dinner" with the crown prince and princess. Among the limited number of guests were Italo Balbo, minister of aviation; Gen. Pietro Gazzera, minister of war; Achille Starace, secretary of the Fascist party, and Cesar Maria de Vecchi, ambassador to the Vatican. It is reported that Mussolini intends to have Prince Humbert promoted to lieutenant general. This would involve his transfer from Turin to Naples, which it is rumored he does not like.

After lunch tomorrow the premier will go to Milan to make a speech.

Andrew Trecka, 2041 West 19th street, owner of the bungalow at 3941 South Oak Park avenue, which was damaged by an explosion early yesterday, was arrested yesterday with his two sons and a cousin and held for questioning by the state fire marshal.

The others arrested are Andrew Jr., 24 years old, John, 18 years old, the sons; and Michael Tebricky, 30 years old. They were seized when they appeared at the scene of the bombing. Assistant State's Attorney Leonard Mandell said that the stories of the four prisoners varied on major points. He said he had learned that the Trecka family moved out of the bungalow last Thursday.

The holder of a mortgage on the house was about to foreclose, Mandell said. He asserted that the house was insured for $8,000. A black powder bomb was set off in the basement, police said. The damage was estimated at $7,000.

Salesman Is Found Slain; Suicide, Inquest Verdict

Suicide was the verdict of a coroner's jury yesterday in the case of Charles Hurt, 30 years old, a salesman, who was found shot through the head early in the day in the small apartment he shared with Beulah Phillips, 24 years old, at 5722 Winthrop avenue. The police last night were trying to find relatives of the dead man, who was said to have been from Indianapolis. The Phillips girl said she met Hurt in Greensboro, N. C., when she was working there as a waitress and came with him to Chicago three weeks ago.

THE BLACK PANTHER

"Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by the great animal painter, Paul Bransom . . . inspired by the natural ferocity of "Bagheera," the black panther in the famous "Jungle Book." "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild" —and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes.

No raw tobaccos in Luckies
–that's why they're so mild

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

MILITARY CHIEFS OPPOSE FRENCH DISARM SCHEME

Socialists Say Herriot Must Not Bow to Army.

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Oct. 24.—The famous French disarmament plan about which so much has been said and so little is actually known, has hit a snag.

The superior council of national defense, and particularly the chief of staff and the generalissimo of the French army, Gen. Maxime Weygand, do not like it.

Constitutionally, Premier Edouard Herriot, who, with his minister of war, Joseph Paul Boncour, drafted the scheme to answer criticisms that France had no constructive disarmament plans, and supposedly to solve the disarmament conference deadlock, has been obliged to consult the defense council. He is not obliged to yield to its objections, but for a premier whose position is already none too secure, to overrule considerations for national safety advanced by a soldier of Gen. Weygand's prestige, has its disadvantages.

Still Resisting Scheme.

After two long meetings today the defense council was still resisting Herriot's plan to place heavy French artillery, tanks and other weapons which have been denied the Germans, in neutral areas, to be used only in case France is attacked. Despite the objection, the government tonight claimed that the plan is ready to be presented to the disarmament conference at Geneva on Nov. 3.

Gen. Weygand's opposition to the plan was the signal for a bitter attack launched by the Socialists against what they called the "Weygand scandal."

The Socialists, upon whom Herriot chiefly depends for his support, claim that Weygand is holding up the disarmament plan and is making it impossible for the scheme to be presented to the disarmament conference. They also charge that the general hopes to spike it definitely.

Party Chief Threatens Herriot.

Leon Blum, Socialist chieftain, clearly threatens Herriot with the loss of Socialist tolerance if he surrenders to the general staff.

"If the premier sacrifices the supremacy of republican authority in the interests of peace and security of France to the military, he will build a barrier between himself and the Socialists," he said.

Le Populaire, the Socialist organ, charges that the government is put in the humiliating position of taking orders from a general.

"Not since the Dreyfus affair," the newspaper said, "have we seen such meddling in civil affairs by the military. Will the government of the republic find a way to reduce this rebellious general to submission?"

NEAR NAVAL ACCORD

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 24.—After two weeks of informal conversations, Norman Davis, chief American disarmament delegate, and his associates, Allen W. Dulles and Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn, got down to brass tacks today with the British as represented by Prime Minister MacDonald, Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, and Stanley Baldwin, lord president of the council and lord privy seal.

They met at No. 10 Downing street and the conversations lasted for more than two hours.

While official news of the results of the conversations has not been divulged, THE TRIBUNE is in a position to state that they have been unexpectedly satisfactory to both sides and it is hoped that by the time Davis departs the United States and Britain will have reached a general agreement.

The general trend of the discussion is that within some formula of equality Britain and America will have the types of navies they desire and that the present strength will be scaled down considerably. This would mean an extensive scrapping and cessation of building replacements by the British as well as the removal of the necessity to build up to the present British strength by America.

32 MOROS SLAIN IN PHILIPPINES; HALT FIGHTING

JOLO, P. I., Oct. 24.—(AP)—Deaths of thirty-two Moros, including eight women and six children, in recent attacks on the Sulu outlaws by the Philippine constabulary, were revealed here today when fighting was suspended for two days to permit officers to bury the dead natives.

The women and children were killed because they refused to leave their men despite parleys in which officials negotiated for the removal of noncombatants before attacking the fortified village of Tayungan. The six children were all in one house.

The attacks on the village, from which the Moros have been routed, were the result of an ambush of a constabulary detachment Oct. 9 in which ten native police were slain. Today's revelation of thirty-two more deaths brought casualties since fighting began to more than eighty, including fourteen constabulary men.

Papen Puts Form of State Up to People of Germany

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Oct. 24.—"We will never recognize the right of any foreigner to judge what form of state is most suitable for Germany. The people alone must decide this. We have so many problems to solve that we are glad not to have to worry about the form of state. This question is not open to debate."

In these words Chancellor Franz von Papen replied to queries of a nation eager to ascertain whether the monarchists are negotiating with him or his associates to resume power in Germany.

An Evasive Reply.

Von Papen made this rather evasive answer in a speech to master handicraftsmen of Brandenburg, descendants of old guilds, in which he pledged them a greater share and influence in the government.

"There has been a lot of talk about restoration of the monarchy" he continued. "The foreign press took up these reports and argued cleverly that such a move would mean the danger of unrest in Europe and that therefore it was necessary to draw tighter the fetters of Versailles, but we have enough to worry about without that question."

The chancellor, who is preparing a new constitution, told the handicraftsmen of Germany at large over the government controlled radio that the Weimar constitution violated "fundamental rights of German citizens—their right to work and to have bread."

Pledges to Restore Rights.

Von Papen promised that his government would restore these rights by providing a strong political government as a foundation for a strong economic life. Since only spokesmen for the government are allowed to speak over the radio, supporters of the republic have no chance to answer Von Papen through this channel.

The audience applauded when the chancellor announced the sums which the government plans to advance to their organizations directly and indirectly. He said that 60 million dollars will be used to pay the debts of East Prussian farmers and will enable handicraftsmen, to whom they are indebted, to collect forty cents on the dollar.

"Twelve million dollars has been allotted for the repair of houses, 12 millions more to finance smaller businesses, 15 millions to finance industrial credit cooperatives, and 6 millions has been given to these organizations outright to make up their deficits," Von Papen said.

Sees Economic Improvement.

"Improvement in the world economic situation has been continuing in recent weeks. Unless all signs mislead us, the drop in prices for raw materials from which the collapse of world economy emanated has reached an end. Restricted production has so diminished stores of representative commodities that necessary replenishment must lead to reviving markets and increasing production.

"Up to now the economic policies of my government have proved correct, and in the immediate future contracts will be let for public works involving $179,000,000."

Sketches New Constitution.

Republicans at the meeting attempted to ask the chancellor where he intends to get the money for these subsidies, but they were shouted down.

Von Papen sketched the new constitution he is planning. He said it is founded on the social structure, the family, groups united by common profession, and finally associations of professional groups.

6 CONVICTS FLEE DEVIL'S ISLAND IN A SAILING CANOE

WILLEMSTAD, Curacao Island, Dutch West Indies, Oct. 24.—(AP)—Six men, five Frenchmen and a Spaniard, who said they had escaped from the dreaded "Devil's Island," French penal colony, arrived here today in a sailing canoe in which they had traveled 1,500 miles.

The men said they had been sent to the penal colony for various offenses, including murder and robbery, and that they escaped early in September. On Sept. 26 they arrived in Trinidad, where they were held until Oct. 5. Then, having received food and supplies from sympathizers, they put out in their canoe on Oct. 11.

They came into this port because they were out of water and provisions. Authorities held them as unadmitted foreigners without proper identification papers. They were accompanied by an Italian who declared he was not a convict but had been left behind in Trinidad by an Italian steamship.

Stomach Pain, Heartburn, Belching, Ends

"After suffering terribly with heartburn, like fire in my stomach, and pain, belching and sour stomach, I found almost instant relief taking ACIDINE," says Mrs. Bertha Williams, Atlanta, Ga. "Please use this letter to help other sufferers."

Just another of thousands who are astonished at the way ACIDINE succeeds when other known remedies fail. The reason is it is different from other medicines. ACIDINE contains Japtase, which, in laboratory tests, digested 800 times its own weights of certain heavy, starchy foods that cause trouble. ACIDINE stops burning acid, soothes irritated stomach and intestinal linings, ends gas, headache, sleeplessness from acidity and helps digest starchy foods and meats.

Don't run chances of dangerous painful troubles from acidity. Get ACIDINE today from your druggist and note quick relief from sourness, pain and belching. You can eat, drink and smoke as you like. Maker guarantees results that satisfy you or money back.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

AN END TO THE TAX STRIKE.

Only a few days ago one of the organizations which fomented the tax strike was heard on the radio appealing to property owners to join the movement. If the strike leaders are still getting converts the fact reflects no credit upon the intelligence of the property owners of Cook county. The tax strike is licked. The lawyers who handled the cases on a contingent fee basis are out in the cold. If property owners don't pay their delinquent taxes, with interest, the properties will be sold for taxes or forfeited.

The sooner that Judge Jarecki orders the delinquent properties to judgment and sale the better. Nothing is to be gained by delay. The contingent fee lawyers have lost their fees. The legal points raised by the strikers have been overruled by the highest courts in the state and nation. There is little or nothing left to decide. Any further delay in entering the appropriate orders can serve only to impair the public credit and the public services without the slightest benefit to the objectors to the tax levy. But delay in pressing the collections may encourage the more gullible among property owners even at this late date to throw good money after bad by joining one or another of the strike movements.

More than half of the property owners have paid their taxes. Those who have paid, as was noted here before, are suffering from curtailed public services because the strikers have sought to evade their share of the burden. The longer the court delays the entry of the orders of sale the more serious this abuse becomes. Also—and this is the crux of the whole matter—delay granted now will encourage property owners not to pay promptly in future. The end of that process is complete stagnation of government caused by a complete drying up of tax revenues.

THE COSTS OF SCHOOLING.

Citizens of school district 107 in Highland Park were told that they must increase their taxes or curtail the school activities or salaries. The question went to a special election—should the district levy be increased from $1.50 on the hundred of assessed value to $1.80?—and 763 votes were against it, 551 for it.

The cost of schools has been accepted without much complaint by American communities. There has been an overemphasis on plant and equipment and extension of curriculum—favored by parents and indulged by taxpayers. Villages, towns and cities have sought to acquire merit by the distinctive features of public education and citizens with children in school have been inclined to demand that the public school be everything that is expected of a great private school supported by endowments and high tuition.

The consequences of such expectations, encouraged by school authorities who have found that the pleasure of the parents is the line of least resistance, are that school taxes are nearly everywhere the heaviest single tax burden. If school costs escape retrenchment the necessary reduction in government expenditures cannot be made. This Highland Park school district vote indicates that the supporting citizens require a reasonable readjustment of public education to expectable income, and it is a significant vote.

BRITISH EDITORSHIP AND AMERICAN EVENTS.

Only the comparatively few Americans who read the British newspapers, mostly editors, are aware of the significant contrast between British and American treatment of crime and disorder in the respective countries. American newspapers give virtually no attention to ordinary criminal news from England and their treatment of sensational offenses or disorders is obviously controlled solely by news values. But the English press is sprinkled with reports of crimes in the United States and there is perpetual comment upon the deplorable conditions in this country. Prison riots, gang murders, lynching in a backwoods district, disorders, all point a moral for the British press. A prison riot in England is a deplorable accident. In the United States it is a revelation of the general incompetence of American penal administration. A gang murder illustrates the lawlessness of the American people, a lynching in the black belt the incurable barbarism of American society. A crime or riot in England is a crime or riot. A crime in the United States is evidence of the inherent violence of the American character and of the general futility of American government. A riot is a sign of the crumbling of the foundations of American order and of impending chaos in American society.

We are not saying that such inferences are crassly asserted, but they are ever present in innuendo and suggestion. No newspaper man would protest the display of picturesque and sensational events, but the Pecksniffian accompaniment reveals a will to detract and a satisfaction in them that shows nowhere in the editorship of the American press in the handling of similar events in Great Britain. American newspapers expose all the evils with which our people are afflicted, with an excess, many Americans believe, of candor. It is a part of the ethics of a free press, as we conceive it, to print the truth, and it is our belief that it is in the long run a benefit to expose evil that it may be fought effectively. We do not favor individual, class, or nation and we do not draw indictments against other peoples.

Conditions in the United States that need correction are openly and honestly attacked by our own press, but the will to exploit, exaggerate, and sweepingly condemn, so apparent in British report and comment upon American news, comes in ill grace from a press so studiously restrained in its treatment of similar events in Britain. The contrast is suggestive to us of an underlying unfriendliness which does not very well support the declarations of amity we hear upon profitable occasion from British public men.

AN ABORTIVE TAX RAID.

The state income tax law, held unconstitutional by the Supreme court, was an outstanding example of the reckless and demagogic politics which has cost the people, all the people, of the nation so heavily in recent years. It was passed by the assembly partly because it was hoped the Supreme court would not have the courage and conscience to enforce the clear mandate of the constitution and partly because its supporters thought the "soak-the-rich" fallacy was popular with a majority of voters. There was no serious doubt of its unconstitutionality under the present constitution. It was obvious from the terms of the law that it not only would soak the rich but thousands of citizens who are far from rich, who are, in fact, having a hard time to make both ends meet on a basis of mere existence. It was obvious that it was piling on the shoulders of the people, directly and indirectly, another burden of taxation.

In short, instead of seeking an equitable and efficient means of obtaining essential revenue and taking essential measures of retrenchment in public expenditure, the assembly adopted the least effective and most defective method of exacting fresh taxation from an already overburdened people.

It is notorious that the income tax in a period of disappearing private earnings is the least satisfactory and most demoralizing device of taxation. It is obvious to all reasoning minds that the essential of recovery is public economy and the lightening of the tax load. Yet parasitic politics has refused to reduce its profits and its exactions and spent all its ingenuity in trying to find new means of wringing money out of exhausted private business and individuals of all classes.

It is to be hoped the demand of the public for relief will be made so imperative as to bring a greater sense of responsibility to the next session of our legislature and to all legislatures, including the national. To make this demand effectual is the first of our duties to ourselves. The recent refusal of Tammany to heed the warnings of imminent bankruptcy in New York is striking evidence of the resistance of political parasites and tax eaters to adequate relief, and this resistance extends throughout the country. It can be overcome only by the organization of the people's will to compel relief. This organization has begun and is making headway. It must be carried on as rapidly and practically as possible. All candidates for tax spending and appropriating bodies, local, state, and national, should be required to pledge definite and drastic retrenchment and fighting organization should be established to see that pledges are kept.

AN INVITATION FROM IL DUCE.

The invitation of Sig. Mussolini to the "people of the great starred state" to wipe out the national debts so far as they are concerned would make more of an impression upon them from another source. The Italian government of 1914 waited to take sides until it had driven the best possible bargain. At the peace conference, so-called, it drove the hardest bargain it could make for national advantages, and Italy today holds to its profits, ruling over hundreds of thousands of alien peoples and holding their national territory by force under the Italian flag. In the seizing of Trieste and Fiume it was the first of the victorious powers to threaten the peace of Europe and was the first to defy the new régime of international cooperation which the league is supposed to represent.

At no time during or after the war have the people of the great starred state been able to discover in the action of either the old governments or that of Sig. Mussolini any regard for the peace and reconstruction for which they are exhorted to make an almost unilateral sacrifice. And Sig. Mussolini, although he has ceased for the time being to rattle the saber, may rest assured that the American people will not relieve their European creditors of the resort to repudiation or abate their just demands without better assurance than has yet been offered us that the sacrifice will not be futile, not only so far as our welfare is concerned but also that of European recovery and pacification.

The Other Side

[Spokane Spokesman-Review.]

A special committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States recommends "less government regulation of railroads as a new national transportation policy." The committee urges that railroad management be given back much of the responsibility of which they have been divested by law and regulation.

Constituent members of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States will do well to study conditions in this country before the government adopted its necessary policy of putting the railroads under regulation. A vivid picture of the old order is this recent reproduction by the Portland Oregonian of a news item from Chicago, in its number of Oct. 11, 1882—50 years ago:

"When I want to buy up any politician, I always find anti-monopolists more purchasable. They don't come so high," said W. H. Vanderbilt, railroad and financial magnate, in an interview at Chicago. He added that his limited express trains do not pay, and that the New York Central is forced by the Pennsylvania road to run them.

About that time this same W. H. Vanderbilt, when told by a Chicago reporter that the public was interested in some questions that he was asking, retorted: "The public be damned."

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States should reflect before it decides to take the back track to the old conditions—corrupted legislatures, bought congressmen, intimidated and browbeaten city councils, contempt for righteous public opinion, secret rebates to favored shippers, discrimination and unbridled competition, as revealed in this illuminating news item of 50 years ago.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.
By F. C.

"RISING DEFICIT AROUSES Talk of New Taxes."—La Trib. A federal deficit which is expected to amount to six hundred million dollars this week naturally leads to conversation touching on and appertaining to new taxation. But what is there left to tax? Well, for one thing, why not tax white collars? White collars are only vanity anyhow; they don't give warmth or protection to the wearer and they're not even comfortable. If a man wants to wear white collars he ought to pay a tax for the privilege. And all debutantes and society people should be taxed every time their pictures are published; and gosh knows the papers are full of 'em. And there's a tax that would work no hardship, for it would be gladly and willingly paid. And why not lay a tax on the use of such expressions, "Good Nightie," "All Rightie," "Hunkie Dorie," and "O Kay"? People not only love to say those things, but they're so in the habit of doing it that they can't stop, and the tax returns from this source would be very large. Straw voting, which is one of our most popular indoor and outdoor sports, would also yield a handsome return to the government if taxed, and so would a tax on whistlers. There's really lots of things around that the government hasn't taxed yet that should be looked into at once. Write to your congressman today!

This is one dream I
Cannot let go
As the others went—
That much I know.

This one has been far
Too long in me
And too close to lose

Torn lengthwise in Such sorry shreds,
It is now a mess
Of sagging threads.

Can I mend it, piece
By piece, today?
Mended things are weak
In spots, they say.

New dreams may be had Just for the taking
Why should I go through
This sad remaking?

But however weak,
However old,
This is one dream I

THE SOVIETS are in great glee because they've discovered how to make rubber from dandelions. That seems a good idea and if the party that gets in power as a result of the November election renders it unnecessary for us to use dandelions any more for making wine maybe our inventors can see what we can do with them in the way of turning them into auto tires and raincoats.

YOUNG CORLISS LAMONT, son of Thomas, tells a meeting of the Society of Free Thinkers in New York the theory of immortality is false and that surrendering the belief will be a good thing for the world since people will then concentrate on getting the best possible out of this life instead of concentrating on the hereafter. Not that such a great number of us spent much time in concentrating on the hereafter, but what would have happened to young Corliss if he had come out a few generations agone and said there were no heaven with pearly gates and streets lined with gold and structures of alabaster and great flocks of angels fluttering around on snow white wings and playing on harps? What young Mr. Lamont would have got would have been a plenty—the rack, the Iron Maiden, slow dismemberment, burning at the stake. But now he gets only three or four lines of type in the public press and he gets that not so much because he says there is no heaven but because he is Corliss Lamont, son of Thomas.

AND NOW it comes out. The full name of the Republican candidate for mayor of New York is Lewis H. Pounds. We felt certain the Republicans were not going to be able to keep their candidate's name a secret until after the election, no matter how hard they tried. But now that the fact is known, what of it? you ask. Oh, nothing, except that the name of the Republican candidate for mayor of New York is Lewis H. Pounds. Only that and nothing more!

IT'S NAVY-ROOSEVELT day Thursday and the Republicans are in an awful dilemma. They want to honor the birthday of one of their greatest men, but the more hullabaloo and noise they make the more of the sovereign voters who will resolve to vote for him in November. What to do? Of course they might lay stress that the man they are speaking about is no longer in the world, but what will the sovereign voter say to that? Why, he'll simply say he's not going to be fooled by any campaign trick like that. It's the baloney.

THREE PLAYERS killed Saturday in football games! And the wise men of football came out of a huddle and told us that the new rules this year outlawing piling on would prevent fatalities. The wise men should go into another huddle.

A CHINESE ARMY has laid siege to Yangchow, held by another Chinese army. It must be really embarrassing to the Chinese to have the Japanese invading their country; they have to leave off fighting among themselves and do a little plain and fancy shooting at the Japs. R. H. L.

CHANGING YOUTH.

DURING the course of his rather brief life Abraham Lincoln underwent several marked transformations—physical, mental, and emotional. Although they did not understand the meaning of these changes, his playmates and companions were so impressed by them that, years afterward, in recalling their old associate, they nearly always made some reference to them.

Barton fixes the age at which his pubertal spurt of growth began as in his eleventh year. This is rather an early age, even if we assume that the change begins earlier south than north, and we wonder if Dr. Barton had enough proof on that point.

Although Lincoln's grandfather was tall and rangy, his father was short and stocky. Abraham had reached his full growth in stature by his 17th year, we are told by Mrs. Allen Gentry and others. As a rule growth in height is completed by that age. Lincoln, therefore, was running on schedule or a little bit ahead.

He is described as having been 6 feet 4 inches tall and weighing 160 pounds; slender body and small head; extraordinarily long arms and legs; large hands and feet. Probably his ductless glands outweighed inheritance in causing him to shoot up suddenly to such a great height, as they did in causing him to have unusually long arms and legs, a shriveled and yellow skin, very little face beard, and a high pitched voice. Although it is natural for the legs, arms, hands, and feet to grow disproportionately at that age, Abraham's members rather overdid the rule.

The testimony as to his change in mental characteristics is fairly clear, although it was not given by his youthful associates until about forty years later. Between 11 and 17, Barton says, his rapid growth made him tired. After that he was more deliberate in his mental processes. David Turnham wrote Herndon: "As he shot up he seemed to change in appearance and action. He began to exhibit deep thoughtfulness and was often lost in studied reflection. We could not help noticing the strange turn in his actions. He disclosed rare timidity and sensitiveness, especially in the presence of men and women, and, although cheerful enough in the presence of boys, he apparently did not seek our company as earnestly as before."

We wonder if Thomas Lincoln and Sally wondered what was the meaning of the moods observed in the growing boy. If they did not they were not like the parents of today. The record is too incomplete and our knowledge of the subject is too scanty for us to even guess whether Abraham Lincoln in this period was on time, or late, or premature in following the schedule of mental and emotional growth of pubertal and adolescent children.

DUODENAL ULCER.

A. H. writes:

1. I have a duodenal ulcer. What is that in plain English?
2. What causes ulcers?
3. Can they be completely cured without operating?
4. Are they liable to come back?

REPLY.

1. Ulcer of the small intestine near the stomach.
2. Nobody knows, though many speculate.
3. Most cases can be cured by prolonged use of a prescribed diet and by regulated living.
4. Very.

WARTS ON THE HANDS.

Mrs. C. D. W. writes: How can I get rid of warts on the hands?

REPLY.

There are scores of wart removers, from "spunk water" up, and most of them work. Among them are: Deep burning with a hot needle, with a caustic, or with an electric spark; continued greasing with castor oil or calomel ointment; and many others.

MILD FORM OF LAXATIVE.

J. F. F. writes: Tell us something about psyllium seed.

REPLY.

Psyllium seed acts much like flaxseed. Both produce a mucilaginous fluid and thereby cause a mild laxative action.

HEAVY TRAFFIC RESPONSIBLE.

Chicago, Oct. 16.—[Friend of the People.]—One Hundred Thirty-fourth street between Torrence avenue and the Nickel Plate railroad, a distance of two or three blocks, has been repaired several times within a year, and is always in bad condition. They start at the railroad and work west. When they finish at Torrence avenue the street is in just as bad shape at the railroad as it was before they started. J. R.

Report is made that 134th street from Torrence avenue to the Nickel Plate railroad is an improved thoroughfare, never having been paved. The present roadway was made by dumping ashes and other suitable filling from time to time. In July, 1930, 130th street was closed because of the paving of Torrence avenue. As 134th street was the only entrance to Hegewisch from the west it was topped off with slag screenings, as a measure of public expediency, at small cost. This year it was graded and oiled, the work being done by men paid by the unemployment relief commission. There is a large volume of traffic on 134th street since Avenue O was paved from 134th street to 106th street as it is a direct route to the east side of South Chicago and we grade it when necessary. There should be no criticism of above work as it was done at a minimum of cost to the city and was imperatively needed by traffic in this section of the city.

APARTMENT LEASE.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I leased an apartment in Chicago for one year. After living in the apartment three months I was released from my position. The landlady allowed us to stay one month without paying rent and then I found a party who would take the apartment under a new lease for nine months, using my furniture. 1. The landlady canceled my lease. This party lived in the apartment for seven months and then lost his job, necessitating his moving from the apartment. This party signed a note covering the balance of his lease. 2. The landlady now insists that she can hold my furniture and rent the apartment, using my furniture, because I owe her a month's rent, although she canceled my lease. 3. How can I gain entrance to the flat to move my furniture? J. F. J.

1. We cannot advise to advantage without knowing just what you mean by this statement. If you mean that she wrote "canceled" across the face of it, then we would agree that you are not liable for subsequently accruing rent.

2. If the facts are such that you owe her additional rent, then by appropriate court proceedings she could hold your personal property in excess of the $400 worth that is allowed in exemption to the head of a family. Without court proceedings she is not entitled to hold your furniture without your consent. It is not entirely clear whether when you negotiated the lease for your successor you consented that the furniture should be used through the balance of your term.

3. It would be illegal for you to make an entrance by force. You should employ an attorney.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

OCTOBER 25, 1916.

PARIS.—After intense artillery preparation the French this morning launched a terrific attack against the Germans at Verdun. When the smoke of battle had cleared away after the infantry completed its work, the village and fort of Douaumont were in the hands of the French, who had advanced beyond Thiaumont works and farm and also occupied the Haudromont quarries, north of Verdun. The attack was made on a front of four and one-third miles. The entire enemy line was broken and at some points, particularly in the center, the French attained a gain of nearly two miles.

BERLIN.—In an attempt to break through the German lines on the Somme at any cost the British and French yesterday used great numbers of troops in repeated attacks, the war office announced today. Their assaults broke down with heavy losses. The defeat of the allies was so severe, the statement says, that all along the front the dead are lying in one row after another. South of the Somme a French attack met with similar results.

LONDON.—The German steam roller is slowly but surely crushing Rumania, official reports from all sources indicate. Berlin announces the capture of Predeal and 600 prisoners in the mountains south of Kronstadt, Transylvania, while in Dobrudja, Field Marshal von Mackensen has taken Rashova on the Danube and Medjidie on the Tchnervadoo-Constanza railroad. In these advances 6,700 Rumanians and Russians were captured.

LONDON.—Five Norwegian ships have been sunk and one seized as a prize by the Germans. In addition, Lloyd's reports the loss of two British ships and two Danish vessels.

SANTO DOMINGO.—Two American officers were killed and one wounded today during an engagement between United States troops and rebels under Gen. Ramon Batisti. The latter also was killed. The total number of casualties on both sides is not known. The American officers killed are Capts. William W. Low and Atwood. Lieut. Morrison was wounded. The American commander attempted to arrest Gen. Batisti, who resisted and ordered an attack on the American forces. Fighting continued for a considerable time, but the rebels were eventually defeated.

CHICAGO.—Indictments against four police captains will be asked by State's Attorney Hoyne when the October grand jury renews its inquiry into allegations of city hall and police graft today. The information percolated from an official source after Chief Justice Harry Olson had ended the hearing of evidence on Mr. Hoyne's application for malfeasance and conspiracy warrants against Chief Charles C. Healey and William Lutbardt, Healey's secretary.

CHICAGO.—The roundup of the cabinet members in Chicago continues. Yesterday Postmaster General Burleson arrived in Chicago for conferences with Democratic chiefs before resuming his stump campaign. All the cabinet secretaries except Lansing and Lane are on the stump now and all have been making for Chicago within the last few days.

WOMEN ON THE COUNTY BOARD.

Chicago, Oct. 19.—Tuesday I had my first intimate experience with women in responsible political office. If County Commissioners Mrs. Edward J. Fleming and Miss Amelia Sears are typical then it is my opinion that women still have a number of years ahead of them before they are competent in political office to judge even minor issues and should confine themselves to work at the polls.

I attended the meeting, being particularly interested in a matter that affected my company and a client of ours who was the high bidder for the purchase of one of the forest preserve houses twice advertised for sale by the board. The bidding was done as required by law and a deposit accompanied the proposal. The bids were opened about four weeks ago and until Tuesday no action was taken.

At Tuesday's meeting members of the board seemed to favor awarding the house to our client on his high bid. Supt. Sauers of the forest preserve, who, I understand, is capable, honest, and fearless, recommended the sale, stating that the buildings depreciated rapidly under rental. Rents, he further stated, were uncertain, almost half of their one hundred and fifty tenants being partially or totally delinquent, and that the board would get more for the house today than a year or two from now. It appeared that the majority of the board members agreed with Mr. Sauers in his views. Not so with Members Fleming and Sears. "Could not the house be rented?" "Put in two or three families" (all in a one family dwelling; I wonder how many families live in Mrs. Fleming's home with her). "This is a poor market in which to sell," and further such argument was their contribution to the discussion. All this after the board had twice advertised and offered this property for sale.

The matter was trivial compared to the $1,300,000 R. F. C. loan for completing the nurses' home previously discussed. The male members of the board, evidently tired of the female chatter, acquiesced and all bids were rejected. Why does the board advertise for bids, not once, but on two separate occasions within ninety days, if they do not care to sell? It costs a contractor over $100 in time and expense to estimate a job of this character and find a suitable location upon which to move the building. All this is an unnecessary economic loss.

Now, what would have been the result if the bid was accepted? The county would have received $705 in cash. That sum would pay some one's back salary for a few months. Our client would have authorized us to proceed with our contract, involving over $3,300. We would have paid out the major portion of that in wages to building mechanics and laborers; in fact, over 90 per cent of the contract price represents labor in one form or another. Over $3,000 in wages would give thirty men work for one month at $100 each. This is a factor in these times. Ordinarily a $3,300 job is small potatoes, but these are not ordinary times. WILLIAM C. KRUEGER.

THE SCHOOLBOY PATROLS.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—As a mother of a patrol boy who lost his life while on duty, I wonder if your correspondent, Mrs. Clara Hauser, realizes those boys are sent out to probable death soon enough without dismissing them forty minutes earlier than is expected of them. I attended a P.-T. A. meeting, and one of the mothers suggested the patrol boys be dismissed five minutes earlier than classes and go down and hold the doors open for the children so there would be no danger of them slamming shut and hurting the children. Her boy didn't happen to be a patrol boy, so that was a good suggestion. There surely is an awful lot expected of those innocent victims and no protection in return. In case they meet with an accident while on duty no one is held responsible. One child's life means nothing to this beautiful city of Chicago. He is just another hero gone—if that is any consolation to you.

The city or board of education does nothing to see that you get justice; so you parents of patrol boys, if you think as much of your boys as the parents of the children whose lives they protect, go down to the board of education and have them inform you of the rules and regulations of the patrol boys. As you know that that work is done voluntarily, no one is held responsible but the child himself for being on the street, your child has no chance to protect himself with all the crazy, reckless drivers who are allowed to drive cars 15 years old, without brakes or horn, and who pay no attention to traffic lights—or little 10 and 12 year old boys. Just try to get justice if you can, especially where a city hall employé is responsible.

MRS. RALPH CLEMMONS.

JUST ONE MAJOR LEAGUE.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—A combination of eight teams is, in my opinion, too small a number to comprise a league in either the American or National baseball circuit, there being a monotony in the same teams meeting so often during a season. Why not combine the two and form a National-American league of sixteen teams? This would make keener competition and would bring together nines that never met before. The trifling matter of world's series money could be taken care of by a competition of the knock 'em down and drag 'em out variety—one defeat and a team is eliminated and so on down to the final between the two survivors. The take from the resulting fifteen games might equal if not surpass the average receipts for world's series games, and the winners would still be considered the world's champions. JOHN P. WARD.

EVANS.

Chicago, Oct. 18.—Does one have to be named Evans to get a job on THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE? At present you have William, Maude, Arthur, and John. And then there's Gladys Evans, simply a variation of the same old name. As far as I can find out, no one of them is related to the other or to the editor. How come, then? M. D.

DEBATE IS OVER; HYMIE AT LAST IS PRISON BOUND

Hymie [The Slob] Leiberman, west side hoodlum who has been walking the streets unmolested for several months although the Illinois Supreme court has affirmed his conviction on a charge of burglary and his sentence of one year to life in prison, was arrested yesterday.

Deputy sheriffs locked him in the county jail and he is to be sent at once to Joliet.

An interesting controversy developed between the state's attorney's office and that of George Seif, clerk of the Criminal court, over the hitch that prevented the burglar from going earlier to his imprisonment.

Decision Given in Summer.

Three weeks ago the Chicago Crime commission called attention to the fact that the higher court's decision was handed down during the summer. The commission added that it was informed the state's attorney's office had not written to the Criminal court clerk the required letter requesting that a mittimus be issued.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles Bellows, who had prosecuted Leiberman and several associates, declared that the letter of request had been sent to Clerk Seif's office. He produced a copy of the letter.

It was asserted by the clerk's office that there had been no such letter received. Last Thursday Chief Justice Prystalski of the Criminal court signed a duplicate of the letter and sent it to the clerk. Again the letter was misplaced.

New Difference Develops.

Attention was called to this poor delivery service yesterday. From the clerk's office there was a statement to the effect that the letter had not been delivered there and that Assistant State's Attorney Robert Donigan had been responsible for its non-delivery. Mr. Donigan promptly declared that he had seen the letter in Mr. Seif's office.

Chief Justice Prystalski then signed a third request for the mittimus to issue and had the document delivered without a possibility of doubt to the clerk. The mittimus was then issued and within a short time Leiberman was arrested at 27th street and Ashland avenue.

Scotch Weaver Works His Loom in Downtown Window

Crowds were attracted yesterday to a window display at 324 South Michigan avenue where Donald Morrisson, a Scotch weaver from the Isles of Harris and Lewis, off the coast of Scotland, operated a hand loom centuries old, which turned out a famous brand of Scotch tweed. Exhibits in the window, which were arranged by the Jerrems store at that address, revealed how the wool is sheared from black face Cheviot sheep, washed and carded, spun into yarn by women, and then woven into cloth by the island folk in their homes.

BRITISH AVIATRIX ELUDES LONDON CROWDS BY RUSE

Mrs. Keith-Miller Slips Off Ship.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—(AP)—Mrs. J. M. Keith-Miller, one of the principal witnesses in the recent murder trial at Miami, Fla., of Capt. William N. Lancaster, eluded crowds of curious persons today when she came back to England from the United States.

She was aboard the steamer American Banker, which was moored at King George V. dock. But she went over the side while the vessel was negotiating the lock, and was ashore an hour before the other passengers.

Lancaster Also Lands.

Capt. Lancaster, who was acquitted in Miami of the murder of Hayden Clark, a companion of Mrs. Keith-Miller's, arrived earlier in the day in Liverpool. He was in London when the American Banker came in and he assisted her in getting away from the crowds.

"The ship was some time getting through the lock," one of the passengers aboard the American Banker explained. "We knew Mrs. Keith-Miller was dreading meeting the crowd, but we were surprised when—while the boat was still in the lock—a ladder was put over the side and she left.

"Most of her luggage was still aboard. She took only two or three small cases. A tall, hatless man, wearing a heavy overcoat, was waiting with a car on the bridge above the lock. She entered the car and was driven quickly away."

Anxious to Avoid Publicity.

The tall, hatless man was Capt. Lancaster. Only two or three persons ashore recognized either him or Mrs. Keith-Miller.

"They were extremely anxious to avoid publicity," an official of the steamship line explained. "It was arranged that Capt. Lancaster should be waiting with a car on the bridge above the lock."

On his arrival earlier in the day in Liverpool aboard the liner Scynthia the captain said he intended to make another long distance flying trip and would have no other pilot than Mrs. Keith-Miller.

SON-IN-LAW QUITS POLITICS; CALLS MACHADO UNFAIR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, Oct. 24.—Charging his father-in-law, President Machado, with unfair electoral control, José Emilio Obregon, Conservative candidate for governor of Havana province in the Nov. 1 elections, today withdrew from the race.

Obregon charged President Machado with "establishing an unfair and partial electoral machinery, bringing about a political monopoly in favor of the Liberal party throughout the island, with the result that candidates of parties not belonging to the president's Liberals cannot be elected.

"It is not a question of risking my life and wealth, as I am now doing, in fighting the Liberals, but the fact that the government's guarantee of fair, free and impartial electoral opportunities for opposition candidates and voters is jeopardized by the president's administration."

Obregon was a former manager of the Havana branch of the Chase National bank of New York. He was married on May 31, 1926, to Angela Elvira, eldest daughter of the president.

SUE TO PROTECT UNBORN BABY OF LIBBY REYNOLDS

Court Is Asked to Halt Probating of Will.

New York, Oct. 24.—[Special.]—The executor of the estate of the late Smith Reynolds, variously estimated between 15 and 20 million dollars, moved today to protect the interests of the unborn child of Reynolds' marriage with Libby Holman, the former torch singer, who is charged with his murder.

The Guaranty Trust company, named by Reynolds to execute the provisions of his will—excluding his widow from the estate—sued in Surrogate's court today to halt probate proceedings pending the birth of the child. The trust company's attorneys asked temporary letters of administration.

The lawyers pointed out that, should the will be probated now, it might be reopened and contested after the birth of the child.

Petition Is Quoted.

The will, which was made in August, 1931, before his marirage, divides the vast tobacco fortune between his brother, Richard J. Reynolds, and two sisters. Mrs. Reynolds' attorneys filed a notice of appearance in today's suit, but made no other move.

The petition to stay probate proceedings said in part:

"The petitioner is advised and alleges that there may be born hereafter to the aforesaid Elizabeth Holman Reynolds a posthumous child of the deceased and that such child, in the normal course of events, will not be born for several months. Pending the birth of such posthumous child, or the definite determination that the possibility of birth no longer exists, the petitioner believes that further proceedings in connection with the probate of decedent's will should be held in abeyance in order that such child, if properly born, may be properly represented in and bound by any decree in such proceedings and in order that the possibility of having to reopen the probate proceedings and the probate of said will may be avoided."

Lease Held on Apartment.

The trust company stated that Reynolds held a fourteen months' lease on an apartment at 7 Gracie square dating from Aug. 1, at a monthly rental of $500. The petition asked that the administrator be appointed to sublet the apartment if possible. It also stated that Reynolds had other property in New York to the extent of more than $10,000.

PARISH TO FIGHT BISHOP; FORCED DOOR OF CHURCH

New York, Oct. 24.—[Special.]—Three members of the vestry of All Souls Protestant Episcopal church in Harlem today sought to persuade a Wall street lawyer, understood to be George W. Wickersham, to take their case against Bishop William T. Manning for ordering a locksmith to break a lock on the church and then entering it and holding services.

"The bishop had no right to enter the church," declared Manual Jesus Roure, clerk of the vestry, leader of the recalcitrants, who insisted that the racial controversy now raging in the parish is only incidental to a larger issue—an attempt by the rector, the Rev. Rollin Dodd, backed by Bishop Manning, "to convert a Protestant Episcopal parish into an Anglo-Catholic communion."

Plan Action on Bishop.

"Until Bishop Manning came," Roure said, "there never was this controversy in the church. Since he assumed authority the strife has been continual, for he has fostered a division and has tried to turn an American Protestant church into an Anglo-Catholic communion. What does he do? Why, whenever a rector resigns he seeks to have him succeeded by one whose sympathies are Anglo-Catholic."

The spokesman for the "dissenters" charged that the rector—with the backing of Bishop Manning—had sought to introduce the Gregorian chant and "when he saw the white members would not accept his ways he told me he would punish us by making the church as black as coal."

Deny Bishop's Charges.

According to the rector, the hostile members of the vestry locked the church against him because he insisted that Negroes and whites should worship there together. Mr. Roure, however, insists that the white members, who built the church and have supplied most of the money, are only protesting against a new Negro dominance, due to a shift in population.

"In June," he said, "we told the bishop that we would go in peace and have our own church if the Negroes would recompense us for our investment. The bishop said this was impossible, that the Negroes were too poor, and that the present situation must continue."

Bishop Manning had a padlock placed on the doors of the church broken to enter with the rector and conduct services.

ADDITIONAL MINE TO BE REOPENED AT TAYLORVILLE

Taylorville, Ill., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—It was announced today that the Peabody Coal company will reopen Mine No. 7 at Kincaid Tuesday morning. This will be the third mine to operate in the Midland zone under the $5 pay day wage scale of the United Mine Workers of America. Two hundred men were signed up today who have pledged themselves to stand by the U. M. W. of A. and who will report for work at 7 o'clock tomorrow morning.

More than 700 men are now reported to be working at Mines 9 and 53, with a full crew at 9 and lacking about 40 of a full crew at Mine 53.

This mine normally employs about 400 men and it is the third of the Midland mines to be reopened since the troops were called to this county to quell disturbances between the progressive miners and the miners who chose to remain loyal to the United Mine Workers.

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—Harry Taylor, deputy attorney general of Indiana, today blocked an immediate hearing on D. C. Stephenson's petition for a writ of habeas corpus before Judge Thomas W. Slick. He filed a motion to strike out the important points of the petition and also a motion to dismiss the petition. Judge Slick determined to hear arguments concurrently on both motions, but indicated that he would require some time for a ruling.

Stephenson, supreme power in the Ku Klux Klan in Indiana before he was sentenced for life in state prison in 1925 for the murder of an Indianapolis young woman, entered the federal court room in company with Walter H. Daly, prison warden. Stephenson appeared to be thinner, but did not seem to be in bad health.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—Opposition to the Los Angeles-Southern California Boulder dam program, particularly the Colorado river aqueduct portion of the project, has been gaining momentum in the courts and in political and other channels in this section.

This opposition has resulted in the filing of taxpayers' suits in California courts and the federal courts in Washington, D. C., to block the use of federal funds for construction of the Imperial valley sand dune canal and the aqueduct which has been planned to convey stored up Boulder dam water 250 miles from the Colorado river to the coastal plain.

Fear Heavy Burden.

Taxpayers' bodies in Los Angeles and nearby communities are being enrolled in the fight and are using lecturers, pamphlets and other means at their control to oppose a program they fear will mean a heavier tax burden than they can attempt to carry.

Californians now are being given a new picture of the projects for which California's political leaders for years from United States Senator Hiram W. Johnson down have been making rosy prophecies. The voting rank and file has been led to believe that Uncle Sam would provide the money, and then, somehow, providentially would be repaid without adding to the burden of California taxpayers.

Now come inquisitive taxpayers' bodies, which have in their ranks students of economics, civil engineers and other experts, forward looking politicians, bankers, and business men with big stakes in tax paying property.

As a result the 220 million dollar metropolitan water district aqueduct project has been subjected to telling attack.

Formed to Vote Bonds.

This water district includes southern California cities and unincorporated communities under the leadership of Los Angeles. It was formed to vote 200 million dollars in bonds to build the viaduct. In 1930 and 1931 the following cities voted to join the district: Los Angeles, Long Beach, Pasadena, San Bernardino, Santa Monica, Santa Ana, Colton, Fullerton, Anaheim, Torrance, Beverly Hills, and San Marino, among others.

But after the water district was formed and about the time the election was held to legalize the bonds hitch number one developed. San Bernardino voted to quit the district. Colton, a smaller city, seceded in its wake. Taxpayers of these two cities had misgivings over the ultimate cost to them of a project calling for a 250 mile water ditch over a mountain range a third of a mile high.

A San Bernardina publisher, who had originally backed the project, resigned as a director of the district with the announcement that he had concluded that the cost of bringing water such a distance over such obstacles would be prohibitive, and that property owners could not afford to obligate themselves for the amount they would be required to pay for the water.

Long Beach May Quit.

There is a campaign on in Long Beach to force a city election on the proposal to withdraw from the district. Long Beach was presented with a bill for $186,000 as its share of water district expenses to date. The citizens had expected the government would bear the cost. Now the election petition is in the California State Supreme court.

Pasadena called an election for Oct. 1 on the proposal to withdraw. The city council was persuaded to postpone the election, but it is reported the sentiment for withdrawal is growing. Santa Monica also has a campaign on for a vote on secession. Only this month Flintridge and La Canyada, Los Angeles suburbs, voted against joining the district, and the city of Ontario has turned thumbs down on the project.

Los Angeles Pays Bulk.

A telling argument against the project in Los Angeles is the fact that under the water district enabling act, Los Angeles and its taxpayers are bound to pay 73 per cent of the cost of constructing and maintaining the 200 million dollar aqueduct, but is limited to receiving 27 per cent of the available water. This city also is prohibited from naming more than half of the district's directors.

"It is evident that under these provisions Los Angeles taxpayers are going to pay a proportionally heavier burden of Colorado aqueduct costs than the taxpayers of any other community," asserts Ross Grant, secretary of the Los Angeles Building Owners and Managers' association. "Even more threatening is the fact that every time some other community quits the district it throws an additional burden on the already overtaxed Los Angeles man."

Oppose $40,000,000 Loan.

Mr. Grant is one of the coplaintiffs in the suit pending in Washington, D. C., which seeks to prevent the Reconstruction Finance corporation from advancing $40,000,000 for the purchase of aqueduct bonds on the grounds that the project is not "self-liquidating."

The plaintiffs in this suit are hammering away on the contention that taxes will have to be levied to repay the $40,000,000 to the federal treasury, and that the project, therefore, is not a self-liquidating one.

Among the organizations leading the fight against the attempt to tap the federal till for the aqueduct project are the Los Angeles Building Owners and Managers' association, whose members own some 150 million dollars' worth of Los Angeles real estate; the California Taxpayers' association, the Long Beach Taxpayers' league and the Los Angeles Tax Reduction club.

Fear "Further Losses."

The California Taxpayers' association at a recent meeting urged that the aqueduct project be delayed, on the ground, among others, that such an undertaking now "will only serve to increase tax delinquencies and still further increase the distress and losses of the public."

The other organizations involved are waging militant campaigns against the program.

Another active group, whose policies by some have been dubbed "semi-radical," the Southwest Water league, also has been fighting the entire Boulder dam project for the last three years.

Dies of Wound Received While Protecting Woman

Lester Moberg, 34 years old, an attendant at the North Chicago Veterans' hospital, who was shot protecting a woman from a bandit on Oct. 17, died yesterday in the Great Lakes Naval Training Station hospital. The shooting occurred when Moberg and Mrs. Ethel Miller, a nurse at the North Chicago hospital, were returning to North Chicago from Waukegan, where they had attended a theater.

AH! Pain Stops

Ingrown Nail Turns Right Out!

A few drops of "Outgro" in the crevice of the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

DEPARTED OPERA PROMOTER SAYS HE WILL RETURN

Alfredo Salmaggi, impresario of the Chicago Opera company, who disappeared last week on the day scheduled for the opening performance in the Studebaker theater, wired the state's attorney's office yesterday from Brooklyn that he would return to Chicago next week.

"I came east to secure additional funds to carry on my opera season," said the telegram. "I deny emphatically taking box office receipts. The $100 for which I left my I. O. U. is the only amount I received. Regarding checks I start in a few days to make them good. I expect to be in Chicago next week. I will call on you."

Assistant State's Attorney Edwin C. Duffey said the checks mentioned were $160 in personal checks which Salmaggi gave to loop hotels and which proved valueless. No complaints had been made, the prosecutor said, and hotel officials expressed belief that they would get their money.

Approximately $123 a year in direct and indirect taxes for every man, woman and child in the United States is now being paid in this country because of the high cost of government, according to the National Organization to Reduce Public Expenditures.

The organization is circulating all over the country a pamphlet prepared by George W. Rossetter, general chairman and president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, in which he states:

"The average family is paying $500 yearly for government. Population has grown, but America's tax bill has grown eight times as fast. Even at the peak of prosperity government expenditures were increasing twice as rapidly as the income of the people.

Goverment Debts Heavy.

"Now that the national income has been cut practically in two, expenditures are even higher, higher, in fact, than they have ever been except in time of war. Besides exhausting current revenue, nearly every department of government with borrowing power has used its credit to the limit—mortgaging the future while tax money was plentiful—with obligations that must be carried and repaid when revenues are down.

"These plan facts explain very simply the difficulties—and distress—that beset some of our communities; and reflect the tax load that overburdens industry, farms, and wage earners alike."

Mr. Rossetter calls attention to the fact that while demands for reduction in the cost of government and lower taxes have swept the country from coast to coast, the last congress reduced the regular operating costs of the federal government by only $187,138,971.

"While the 1933 budget shows a reduction of $783,238,855," Mr. Rossetter explains, "this item is limited entirely to emergency and nonrecurring appropriations, such as funds assigned to the Reconstruction Finance corporation in the 1932 budget, and does not indicate any savings by Washington in the regular year to year charges of the federal government."

In stressing the need for immediate economy in governmental operations, Mr. Rossetter says:

"Of all the measures that give promise of ending the depression, insuring the return of normal business activity, and restoring the earning power of the individual worker, the fundamental requisite is reduction of the cost of government.

"Village, city, state, nation—one and all must learn to live within their means."

FIND CENSOR HID TRUTH OF QUAKE IN NEW ZEALAND

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WELLINGTON, N. Z., Oct. 4.—[By Mail to Avoid Censor.]—Censorship, which has ruled in New Zealand for the last eight months, has at last provoked an explosion within the country.

A series of violent earthquakes struck the Gisborne-Wairoa area on the east coast of the North island on Sept. 16. Rich communities which had suffered severely in the disastrous quake of 1931, when Napier and Hastings were laid waste and more than 3,000 persons were killed or injured, were once more desolated. In Gisborne no one knows how much damage was done, but reliable estimates place it at more than $1,000,000. In Wairoa the damage was so widespread that to begin to calculate the cost is impossible. Every dwelling on one street was wrecked. Water and electricity were difficult to obtain and main lines of communication were broken. A 600,000 ton landslide blocked one road.

The mere handful of casualties was due to the fact that the quake occurred at 1:20 a. m. when the township was deserted and the people were in the comparative safety of wooden one story houses.

Runs Into Censor.

Press association messages from the scene of disturbance claimed that the quake was 50 per cent of greater intensity than the tragedy of February, 1931. When this was questioned by government officials, the fact was repeated by local newspapers with signs of annoyance. The newspaper men were on the job and at the scene. It was annoying to be challenged by persons hundreds of miles away and who had not even felt a quiver.

When this correspondent attempted to transmit the facts to the United States he ran full tilt into the censor. It was not, he was informed, a "very bad affair."

"The intensity of the temblor was not as great as last year," the censor added.

Damage Is Minimized.

"Every house in one street has been damaged," the correspondent protested.

"Just a few chimneys fell," said the censor.

"Well, what of it?" asked the censor.

The censorship office made it clear that it did not want messages of this kind sent. They did the country no good, it was stated, and officials argued that there should be an international agreement to permit the stoppage of any message which was detrimental to any country.

That was that. But the government took a hand in the affair. What was sent out was mild enough when set beside the reports from the earthquake areas. But when these reports were printed in the Australian and other newspapers they carried alongside them the following statement:

"Mr. L. J. Schmitt, New Zealand government agent in Australia, has received the following official message from his government:

"'An earthquake in the Gisborne region last night. Slight damage to the town only. None elsewhere. No casualties. Matter not serious.'"

One True Statement.

The only true statement in this message was in the first sentence. And when the Australian newspapers which printed this statement reached New Zealand things began to happen.

The first step, taken by Mayor Harker of Wairoa, the center of the disturbance, was to forward to all members of parliament for the district this message:

"If the report is correct that the government sent out this message we consider matter scandalous. This explains public apathy to our appeal for national relief which was only issued out of absolute necessity. Please investigate and endeavor to persuade the government to grant urgent additional assistance."

The matter is certain to form an issue in the house of representatives and may be used to embarrass the government which permitted such flagrant untruths to be sent overseas.

New York, Oct. 24.—[Special.]—Anna Kleinhandler, the 8 year old daughter of a Newark grocer, who was kidnaped from in front of her father's store last night, was found today at an isolated farmhouse near Springfield, N. J. She was brought to Newark police headquarters, where she identified a suspect as the man who took her into the woods and attempted to attack her.

The suspect was Samuel Morris, a tanner in a leather factory, who was taken into custody by the police today when he came to work after having been absent from his house all night. When he was mentioned as a possible suspect last night by the girl's mother, Mrs. Julia Kleinhandler, the police placed a guard around his house after having searched it and discovered he was not at home.

The taxicab driver who drove the girl and her kidnaper along the wooded Baltusrol road near Springfield also identified Morris as the kidnaper, according to the police.

Bruised and hysterical, the girl stumbled into the farmhouse of George Moschutz about 6 o'clock this morning. Her throat had been cut slightly and there was a superficial stab wound above her heart. She told her story to Eugene Murphy, a farm hand, who drove her to Springfield police headquarters. There she was picked up by Newark detectives.

She was removed to Newark city hospital.

Boy Testifies in $50,000 Suit; Swears He Was Shot

Edward Mooney, 10 years old, of Alton, testified before Judge George W. Bristow in the Superior court yesterday that he was peppered with shot from a shotgun fired by David F. Schmalzreid, 805 South 6th avenue, Maywood, while getting a willow branch to make a whistle on Schmalzreid's property. The boy's father, John, is suing Schmalzreid for $50,000 as a result of the shooting which occurred three years ago when the Mooneys lived in Maywood.

LEND A HAND, FOLKS, TO HELP HUNGRY PUPILS

Whatever You Can Give Is Welcomed by Fund.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

There are a lot of children in this city who are depending on TRIBUNE readers for their hot lunch every day in their school lunchrooms. Last year these readers realized that children must be fed if they are to grow up to be useful citizens later on and didn't quit with the job until 10,000 were being fed daily in 209 public schools. It took $43,000 of these donors' money to do it, but they were glad of the chance.

And this year the Hungry School Children's fund is asking all who can to lend us a hand and give what they can spare. Every cent given will be used to buy hot, nourishing lunches for a deserving child and none will be used for overhead expenses.

Increase in Donations.

Yesterday the gifts showed a slight increase from the preceding day, the total being $105.75. The "Mobbet Puppets" at the Hotel Shoreland sent $8.50, which was the amount above their expenses of the show, and the same group promised more from the next performance. The Ladies' Bridge club of the Bon Villa Apartment hotel in Oak Park collected $3 for the lunch fund.

Five cents pays for a child's lunch in the elementary grade schools and 15 cents will feed the older boy and girl in the high school and junior high. The following gifts were received yesterday:

$5—Elizabeth Rogge, S. Glassenberg, Isabel Carnal, Anonymous, E. C. Olsen, Flora D. Porter, Mrs. A. M. Barrett.
25c—Anonymous.

Total	$ 105.75
Previously acknowledged	8,967.50
Grand total	$9,073.25

Checks should be made payable to the Hungry School Children's fund and sent to the cashier of THE TRIBUNE, Tribune Tower, with the coupon printed on this page.

TWO YOUTHS HELD AS ROBBERS.

Two youths, alleged to have robbed a number of motorists at street intersections, were held to the grand jury yesterday. They are Casimir Ostapa, 19 years old, 2403 North Hamlin avenue, and Stanley Bassa, 19, of 1350 Holt street.

MARRIED MAN AND MINISTER'S DAUGHTER SLAIN

Gadsden, Ala., Oct. 24.—(AP)—An unidentified Negro was sought in Birmingham tonight as the slayer of Tom Russell, 50 years old, married furniture salesman, and his companion, Miss Thelma Groover, 29 year old daughter of a minister, in a field near here last night.

The search switched from a probable "revenge" theory to one of robbery after authorities traced the ownership of a single barrel shotgun found near the bodies to W. D. Jones, who had reported theft of the weapon. A Negro had been seen leaving the Jones place with the weapon.

Russell was shot in the chest with a shotgun and Miss Groover's skull was crushed. The gun stock was splintered by the blows.

In addition to his widow, three children survive Russell. Miss Groover is survived by her father, the Rev. W. L. Groover, a Methodist pastor in East Gadsden, several brothers, and a sister.

Now $1 equals $3 in buying protection against colds

PEPSODENT ANTISEPTIC is 3 times as powerful as other leading mouth antiseptics. Hence it goes 3 times as far. And whether you buy the 25c, 50c, or $1 size, you still get 3 times as much for your money.

YOU may be attracted by price-cuts on ordinary antiseptics. But don't be confused. No price-cut can equal the saving Pepsodent Antiseptic brings you. For Pepsodent is three times as powerful as other leading mouth antiseptics—by adding water you make it go three times as far—get three times as much for your money and greater assurance of escaping colds.

Two kinds of antiseptics

Remember, there are really only two leading kinds of mouth antiseptics on the market. In one group is the mouth wash that must be used full strength to be effective. In the other group is Pepsodent Antiseptic, utterly safe if used full strength, yet powerful enough to be diluted with two parts of water and still kill germs in less than 10 seconds.

Use Pepsodent for safety

Don't fool yourself by diluting old-type antiseptics. Your health is too important—also, consider the importance of a pure, sweet breath. Choose the antiseptic that kills germs even when it is diluted. Insist on Pepsodent Antiseptic. Be sure! Be safe and save money!

IMPURE BREATH (Halitosis)
The amazing results of Pepsodent Antiseptic in fighting sore throat colds prove its effectiveness in checking Bad Breath (Halitosis). Remember, Pepsodent is 3 times more powerful in killing germs than other leading mouth antiseptics. Remember, even when diluted with water it still kills germs.

The Murder of Caroline Bundy

By ALICE CAMPBELL.

SYNOPSIS.

Neil Starkey, American biographer, is engaged by Caroline Bundy to compile the life and letters of her late father, a famous English biologist. Miss Bundy is in poor health and acting peculiarly. She had hired a photographer, named Tilbury, as bailiff, and he and his wife, an ill-bred pair, hold a strange influence over her. Natasha Andreyev, Caroline's half Russian niece, acts as her aunt's secretary. She detests the Tilburys. Caroline tells Neil that her father, a man of science, was also a mystic. Caroline and the Tilburys hold nightly seances in the library. Giles Gisborne, vicar of a nearby parish, and his sister, Rachel, are friends of Neil's. Neil is attracted to Natasha, but is baffled by her odd behavior. She is giving money to a man she meets secretly. Caroline promises to visit Emily Bracelton, an old friend, in Paris. Natasha drives her to London. Natasha returns a few days later and tells Neil that her aunt gave her a pearl necklace, which she sold. She receives a wire which Caroline sent from London, asking her to look for an alligator bag left in the car. The bag is not found. Caroline doesn't reach Paris. The police are notified. Her body is found in a ditch near her estate. She'd been brutally murdered. The Tilburys are left Caroline's fortune, on condition they search for the Holy Grail in the ruin of an ancient abbey on the estate, which Caroline believed to be her father's wish. Natasha is arrested. It is learned that the man she'd been meeting secretly was her wastrel brother, Michael, who has fled the country. Natasha is brought to trial.

INSTALLMENT XXXVIII.

THE ADDRESS TO THE JURY.

Sir Henry Challenge paused and let his deceptively torpid eyes run slowly over the crowded room. His coarse wig rested slightly askew, showing the pendulous lobes of his ears; his loose, dried skin was like the overlapping armor plates of some prehistoric saurian. In marked contrast to his desiccated appearance, his voice was full and resonant. For half an hour it had held his audience charmed, even those who were most antagonistic. It continued after a brief stock taking, with even greater assurance and the power which comes from direct simplicity.

"Gentlemen of the jury, I ask you to dismiss from your minds anything you may have heard or thought on the subject of this case. I ask you to be influenced solely by the facts about to be placed before you. Do not forget that the annals of crime hold many instances of women who, though endowed with beauty and attraction, have none the less shown themselves capable of greed, callousness, and insensate cruelty. It is for you to decide, having considered the evidence, whether Natasha Andreyev's name can be added to the list.

"Has any one of you ever seen a woman kill a rat?"

"I ask you to weigh the fact that in over five weeks' time the united efforts of the Somerset police and Scotland Yard have failed to discover any other person to whom suspicion may attach. The blameless life of the victim so foully butchered can show among countless acts of public and private benefaction not one calculated to rouse hatred or enmity. The very manner in which Caroline Bundy befriended her niece, removing her from hardship to ease and security, speaks for itself.

"Would you not expect the recipient of such favors to respond by affection, by warmhearted gratitude? I shall prove to you that on many occasions Natasha Andreyev showed herself unsettled, resentful, arrogant. Frequently she expressed a desire to get away."

The speaker halted a moment to let this sink in. He resumed in tones coldly judicial:

"On Friday, 20th March, having driven the deceased from Somerset to London, the prisoner parted from her at St. James' square. She declared that her aunt refused to be accompanied the following morning to her train. Do you or do you not consider this likely? You may perhaps incline to the belief that Miss Bundy gave instructions to be picked up later in the afternoon, conducted to her friend's flat, and called for next day. If so, your assumption will be a reasonable one.

"You will note that the deceased carried two bags—one of black leather, said to contain money, traveler's checks, and personal belongings; the other, brown alligator skin, remains a mystery to us. It was locked and the key worn on a chain round the owner's neck. Both bags have disappeared, but it is with the second one we have now to deal. That bag, gentlemen, was missed directly after the separation in St. James' square. That it was valuable is clearly shown by the fact that Miss Bundy turned back at once, followed her niece by taxi to two places where she hoped to overtake her, mentioning her loss to various witnesses and betraying marked agitation.

"You may say that these actions confirm the prisoner's statement of a final parting. Is it not conceivable, on the other hand, that Miss Bundy had a lurking fear that her niece was not to be trusted? That she did succeed in catching the young woman, only to find her bag rifled and a pearl necklace gone? That just accusations and threats of exposure led to the assault which cost her her life?"

A ripple passed over the closely packed courtroom. It was quickly stilled, and the steady voice pursued its inexorable course.

"Consider what followed. Six hours elapse, during which we know nothing of either victim or accused. Meanwhile we have to deal with the statement of an eyewitness on the subject of a car with two women occupants seen near this city between 8:30 and 8:45. The younger of these two women strongly suggests Natasha Andreyev. The other, inside, leaning in the corner in a stiff and unnatural attitude, had her head concealed in a scarf or muffler. There is much to indicate that this hidden figure was the murdered corpse of Caroline Bundy."

"I have purposely omitted till now the evidence relating to the accused's brother, Michael Boris Andreyev. That evidence, you will agree with me, is of a distinctly unsavory character. I will mention first of all that on three occasions he applied to the deceased for financial help, that in one instance Miss Bundy responded generously, but, after acquainting herself with her nephew's unstable habits, she declined further assistance. Soon after the third demand, four and a half months ago, Michael Andreyev quitted Paris for London, later removing to Bath. In this country he went under the name of Maurice Addison, and, although in constant communication with the accused, kept his aunt in ignorance of his proximity.

"Why? Simply because in Paris he had been guilty of an intrigue with his employer's wife, had inflicted personal violence when discovered, and had defrauded the firm for which he worked of a considerable sum of money. In short, he was in danger of arrest and imprisonment."

Renewed sensation. The tension throughout the court grew more acute.

"It does not enter into my province to speculate on the part Michael Andreyev may have played in this drama of brutal crime. The accused refuses to reveal his present hiding place, or to shed any light on his movements prior to his arrival at the obscure hotel where, in her company, he spent the two nights following the murder. However, the fact that he left his lodgings in Bath at about 7:45 p. m., was partly intoxicated at the time, and was seen no more till he reached his final destination in a state of sodden inebriety may strike you as significant. You may even form the opinion that by just rights he should be standing in the dock beside the woman undergoing trial. . . .

"If you are satisfied that in sending her brother away while she herself remained behind the prisoner was serving her best interests you will have gone a long way towards being convinced of her guilt. She would show wisdom in staying where she was till a later date, knowing that there was an excellent chance of eluding discovery, whereas if it became known that she was harboring one already a criminal any statement she made was likely to be discredited. Remember that she did not at first know where her aunt's pearl necklace had been kept, or even that any living person was aware of its existence. In regard to this matter she committed her initial mistake. The second, and even more serious, one was her self-condemnatory attempt to flee the country. . . ."

The room had grown insufferably close and hot. The mingled hues of women's headgear swam against the sickly drab walls; a shaft of sunshine streamed through a window full upon the judge's heavy wig. Neil found his attention wandering, his strained eyes taking note of first one irrelevant detail, then another—but suddenly he was recalled to acute awareness by the following sentences uttered with arresting clarity:

"Doubtless you will be told that a crime of this kind is incompatible with a woman's physical strength and nature. Your attention will be called to the savage brutality of the attack, to the needless number of blows literally rained upon the victim's skull, and to the fact that three of these blows caused deep fractures. Let me remind you first that the prisoner is a young woman of superior muscular force, good at tennis and golf, and accustomed to handling heavy cars. The very way in which the murderer struck and struck again indicates that touch of hysteria so often met with in the emotional crises of women."

"Has any one of you ever seen a woman kill a rat? I have. In a village in Dalmatia I saw a peasant woman slay a rat with an iron bar. She felled it instantly, but before her insane panic had spent itself she had battered the animal to a pulp. . . . In such manner was Caroline Bundy slain. Bear in mind what you yourselves know of feminine attributes before deciding whether the action in this case was that of a man or a woman."

The entire room shuddered. Neil himself was so paralyzed with horror over the picture presented to him that he registered nothing more till the concluding words jarred him out of his stupor.

"If, having heard the evidence, you consider the summarized facts as satisfactorily established, it will be my duty to ask you for a verdict that Natasha Andreyev is guilty of the willful murder of Caroline Bundy."

Fashion Now Available at Modest Price

BY RHEA SEEGER.

THERE have been years when a clothes hungry young person was almost forced to dabble lightly with food, and deny herself a lot of fancies that she might stretch a weary over-worked, under-nourished clothes allowance all out of shape for a few necessities to clothe her vanity to say nothing about her shadow-thin silhouette. Those shopping seas have calmed down so nicely that the working gal has lately sailed into a season of many unbelievable prices and so many beguilingly beautiful clothes that the gal is well nigh gasping with stunned astonishment.

Practically everything this year has been designed and planned, as well as priced, for the staunch buying public comprised of these busy shopping females who earn their money and then have a grand time sending it back into circulation.

Reasonably priced clothes are at last unusual and exciting things that stay that way for weeks after you lug them home . . . you can buy a fur trimmed coat for a modest sum. One shop has a collection of remarkable coats with low price tags snuggled under the sleeves, that will cause you to rave deliriously. The collection includes smart, swagger, snappy models of black or blue or brown or deep green with tricky flat fur collarette collars, and puffed sleeves, with a moderation that pleases.

One stunning affair is made of black wool with a slim fitted body line, with chic wide shoulders and some buttons that hold all this formation snugly around your shape with distinction that used to be available in only sky priced apparel.

Silky flat, shaded, gray kidskin and spotted leopard are two knockout contrasts used on some of these convincing coats. And there are some others that are perfect with bands and cuffs and collars of Persian lamb and the brown and black combinations that are eye filling. In the same collection are the black coats with cinnamon brown fur trimmings, top puffed sleeves of sablized kolinsky that will fool a mink expert, or models with marten collars and cape effects.

Inexpensive sports clothes with all the casual smartness and rough out of doors effects can be hung in your wardrobe for trifling little sums that leave even a hardened shopper weak from the shock. Top coats of tweed that look as English as crumpets and strong tea . . . double chested rough wool suits that reach the new high altitude for collars and throat lines . . . good looking new gray sports dresses with a nice and neat contrast of chartreuse green or the new cabbage red or madonna blue velvet ascot tie scarfs and some new green colored clothes that will make friend or foes at the first sight . . . all tagged with low price marks that shout for themselves.

All kinds of festive frocks . . . slithery, slim dance numbers with miles of circular sections careening around the ankles in a most devastating manner . . . flighty, frivolous things, made of lots of silk in the skirt sections and straps made from the scraps wound in a complicated manner for a bodice top . . . there are pale blue silk topped with deep blue coq feather shoulder caps . . . crinkled white crêpe tied up with wide Prussian blue velvet ribbon and two floor trailing sash ends . . . picturesque velveteens in all the Christmas card colors, of red, mustard green, madonna blue, and heavenly shades of rose and vermilion and old gold.

Grab these things while you can, other shoppers are daily picking the best plums of all the best collections.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—The Dominican minister, Roberto Despradel, gave a large reception this afternoon at the Mayflower in celebration of the forty-first anniversary of the birth of the president of that republic, Rafael L. Trujillo. Senora de Espaillat, wife of the secretary of the legation, was hostess for the minister and the guests included members of the diplomatic corps and official and smart resident society.

Mrs. Henry B. Joy of Detroit is in Washington this week attending meetings of the national board of the D. A. R. and the executive board. The latter met today with the president general, Mrs. Russell William Magna, presiding.

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. George Richards have announced the marriage of their daughter, Ruth, to Edward Winslow Comin Devereux, son of Dr. J. Ryan Devereux, Oct. 22 in the home of the bride's parents. The engagement was announced several months ago, but the date of the wedding was not divulged in advance.

Mrs. Walter Tuckerman entertained a company of debutantes of this season at luncheon today for her debutante daughter, Miss Ruth Tuckerman, who will be presented at a tea here and at a ball at Tuxedo later in the season.

Frau Leitner, wife of the counselor of the German embassy, and their children have returned to the embassy from Europe, where they have spent the summer. The counselor went to New York to greet them on their arrival.

'LonesomeMac' Too Bashful to Date a Maiden

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"I'm 22 and I have never taken a girl out. But there is a girl in my place of business I would like to know. I haven't asked her to go out with me yet because I am in a fog about where to take her. I am a poor dancer. What should I do—jump in a river or what?"

It takes courage to jump in a river, "Mac." Courage that you could turn to account in a brighter way. What's the matter, boy, that you haven't taken a girl out yet? Have you always been scared of them?

They honestly don't bite! And they like being invited by a boy whose appearance is good, who is on to the little niceties prescribed by our etiquette authorities, a boy who can dance and a boy who isn't too tongue tied to be a bore! But first you need courage, "Mac!" You want to get to thinking that you're a pretty nice young man, that you can show a girl as good a time as the next boy!

But then, you must be qualified to do this, too. You have to get over the shyness first. Go into a huddle with yourself and find out just what it is about you that deflates your stock in your own mind. A boy isn't much of a prize exhibit for a girl who thinks of himself in humble terms.

You want to look smart. It isn't a matter of great expense for a youth to keep himself looking presentable. Whether or not you think it fair to judge a man by his appearance, the girls are finicky on this point. And why shouldn't they be, with boys exacting a snappy appearance in their preferred women? Then, Mac, you should learn to dance well!

As for taking the girl somewhere, what's the matter with the movies as a starter? Let the girl suggest what she would like to see. Then, after the movies.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Quite apart from the fact of the bill being "The Mikado," there is an extra-special reason for going to the Chicago Woman's Club theater this week. It is that De Wolf Hopper is there, as guest star just for this week, in the part of Ko-Ko. A great comic actor meets a great comic rôle, and the two blend perfectly.

It has been quite a number of years since he last appeared in the part here, but last night he was up on every syllable of the lines and every detail of the acting. Of all those who have made public their demonstrations of it, he is by many rods and miles the most amusing and the most complete.

He made a curtain speech at the end of the first act, announcing that he and the rest of the company were having a bully time and hoping that we were, too. We were.

Not the least astonishing part of this eager company is the way that Director Howard has organized a group, several straight from the concert stage, and given them the tempo and rhythm of Gilbert and Sullivan. For it is not enough to have a good voice to sing these songs and speak these lines. They must be sung and spoken in a certain manner. This company is in a fair way to acquire that manner. Some of them have already acquired it. Mr. Koch, for example, has taken on all the awesome dignity of Pooh-Bah, and gives a performance that stands up well alongside Mr. Hopper's Ko-Ko. Mr. Dressler came in to do Nanki-Poo in place of Edwin Kemp, who was indisposed, and went through the part as though he had been doing it for months. Of Mrs. Hopper it is hardly necessary to speak. A more radiant, sparkling Yum-Yum it would be hard to find.

Dr. Fishbein Writes Book on "Fads and Quackery in Healing"

A new book by Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical association, has just been published under the title: "Fads and Quackery in Healing."

In this work Dr. Fishbein, in detail, reviews medical fakers from ancient times to the present, devoting most of his writing, however, to the various cults and foibles now in more or less favor with the American public. He even describes the rise of religions which claim medical or quasi-medical powers.

Diet fads and those involved in the beauty culture business are treated by Dr. Fishbein from the standpoint of a calm and scientific de-bunker. Noted charlatans, including some of the plastic surgeons, are discussed. In his chapter on birth control Dr. Fishbein asserts that scientific medicine has so far found no satisfactory solution of the problem.

Relatives of Mata Hari Lose Fight Against Film

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

THE HAGUE, Oct. 24.—[Special.]—The Rotterdam courts today dismissed the claim of Dutch relatives of Mata Hari seeking to prevent a further showing of the Metro-Goldwyn movie of the famous German world war spy in Dutch theaters on the ground that the film is not true to life. The court concluded that the film is not a reflection on the memory of Mata Hari and ordered the relatives to pay the costs of the suit.

Request for Stove.

"I wonder if one of your readers has a cook stove he would be willing to give us. Our stove is so broken I am afraid it will not last much longer. I am unable to buy one as my husband has had no work for three years. We have four children and it is hard to manage without a stove. MRS. A. J."

One of our greatest needs these days is that of stoves. In this case, a cook stove would provide heat as well as a means of cooking and if you have one to give, your gift would perform a double duty.

Rossetti Era Told in Life Story of Wife

SURELY "The Wife of Rossetti" is one of the most fascinating accounts of that darkly luminous period in English art history that has ever been written. The author grew up in the subsiding winds of the cyclone of the pre-Raphaelite movement. She met and had many contacts with the living men and women who had weathered the storm from its beginning. Dante Gabriel Rossetti, unkempt, fierce and morose at the time of her childhood, was being hounded to death by drugs and his own dark visions. From this atmosphere, from talks and observations, from diaries and letters, and from later records of the movement, Violet Hunt has reconstructed a picture, new, significant, and objective, of the pre-Raphaelites and their women.

VIOLET HUNT.

With this preface she presents her portrait. "The truth about Rossetti has been told, more or less; the truth about the woman he married, never. For the first time, brushing away the decent coverlet of leaves with which Rossetti's admirers have covered his reputation, I seem to have laid bare much that is painful, wild, and unexpected, but at the same time something beautiful, heroic even, and all that is pitiful. For surely the struggle of youth, avid of honors and joy, to do good work whether one lives or dies—preferably lives—is implicit in the stories of Eleanor Elizabeth Siddal and her husband. . . ."

The founders of the pre-Raphaelite movement were Rossetti, John Millais, and Holman Hunt, who, with the shining optimism of youth felt that their lofty visions would permanently change and purify art. One of their first models was Eleanor Elizabeth Siddal, who worked in a milliner's shop. She was tall, willowy, with abundant pale red-gold hair, curious pale prominent eyes, a long sweeping upper lip that was obstinate, vicious, and sweet, and a long neck like a Greek column. It was the sort of beauty over which doom hovered.

After seeing Rossetti her fate was sealed. They became engaged when she was 19 and married when she was 28. At 30 she was in the grave. The two years of their married life contains all the tragedy of hatred that is the other side of a fatal love, frustration, bitterness, and terrible disease. The record of their love might be a chapter out of Dante's hell. Forced into the habit of drugs to ease pain, suffering with tuberculosis, saddened by her inability to bear children, driven within herself by Rossetti's neglect and infidelities, she took one night, after a violent quarrel, an overdose of a drug and pinned upon her breast this note, "My life is so miserable I wish for no more of it."

But the blame, if tragedy must find solace in blame, falls equally upon them both. Her long cruel engagement to Rossetti, in which she resolutely denied him physically, with the stubbornness of a woman with a purpose, was spent innocently with him in his rooms, traveling over England and France in a vain effort to stop the progress of her disease, attempting with a curious sort of listlessness to make him marry her (though they both knew marriage would never give them what they were seeking), writing and painting poems and pictures that were of indifferent merit though they afforded a surcease in ambition from the agony of illness and waiting. Finally after nine years, when Eleanor Siddal seemed to be on her death bed, Rossetti fulfilled her lifelong desire—he asked her to marry him.

Nothing changed. She continued to pose for him, to attract him and repel him. In her attempt to bear children she revealed her anxiety to justify herself. When each time she failed she perversely blamed Rossetti, taunting him with his infidelities, his selfishness and indifference. She slowly wasted away, melancholy, stubborn, melodramatic, her life lost in a physical coldness she could not control, but which was a part of her otherworldliness and her strange frustrate sensuality.

"Wife of Rossetti" is a biography of unusual merit. Across the pages stream many of the distinguished persons of the day. John Ruskin, Swinburne, William Rossetti and his sister Christina, who is not in this biography as saint-like as history has made her, Millais, Holman Hunt, Burne-Jones, William Morris, Ford Maddox Brown, surely one of the noblest and kindest men of his generation, all are portrayed with extraordinary vividness and insight. The book is a brilliant recreation of the lives of men and women with their visions and dreams, who lived by strange bonds in an age entirely inimical to their ways of living and thinking. Standing out from this tapestry in colors of a never forgetful doom are the figures of Dante Gabriel Rossetti and Elizabeth Eleanor Siddal in the throes of one of the strangest loves ever written, falling together in the dusk, accursed and blessed.

A Job a Day

Every little improvement we make in our home right now helps us—and the other fellow, too.

A house is more amenable to reason and adjustable to change than we sometimes think. If we have a room arrangement that is awkward and a bit old fashioned; if we have two rooms, perhaps, where we have always wanted one big, glorious room, we may find on investigation that removing partitions or changing them is not so difficult nor so expensive as we imagined. A good contractor can give us estimates as to methods and costs and start us on a small piece of remodeling which will bring us happy results for the holiday season ahead.

MINUTE MYSTERY CAN YOU SOLVE IT?

BY H. A. RIDLEY

Dr. Fordney is professor of criminology at a famous university. His advice is often sought by the police of many cities when confronted with particularly baffling cases. This problem has been taken from his casebook covering hundreds of criminal investigations.

Try your wits on it! It takes but ONE MINUTE to read! Every fact and every clew necessary to its solution are in the story itself—and there is only one answer. How good a detective are you?

THE MIGHTY ARE FALLEN.

"I understand you're working on the Barrow affair, professor," said Bill Estey as the two sank into easy chairs at the Stuyvesant club. "He was a remarkable character; I used to know him well. Tell me about it, won't you?"

"Well, it was indeed a shock to find the once brilliant and redoubtable Barrow, for whom the best was hardly good enough, dead in a dreary, desolate room at a cheap boarding house. How he had loved life once! At the height of his success no one lived it more fully. Ah, well, but to get on.

"Penned to his rather lengthy confession of embezzlement, dated the day of his death, was a postcript absolving his partner, Reyburn, from any knowledge of or complicity in his dereliction. It also stated his suicidal intent.

"Aside from the meager furnishings of the room, all we found was twenty eight cents in his pocket, an old fashion penholder with a stub point, a half empty package of cigarets, an expensive lighter—a remnant of his prosperous days—and a photograph torn to such tiny bits we couldn't piece it together. On the table stood a half empty whisky bottle which had been poisoned.

"The landlady said he had not been out of his room for twenty-four hours and that he had refused to open the door even to her. Also that she heard him talking to himself.

"The police are confident it's suicide, but I believe it's murder."

Good Morning!

Pago Pago is still all wet and so, in most respects, is the sound version of "Rain."

In other words, the old gray mare (meaning "Rain") ain't what she used to be when the late Jeanne Eagels contributed her unforgettable portrayal to the drama, or Gloria Swanson sinned, swaggered, and suffered through the silent screen version of Somerset Maugham's stage success.

Robbed of psychological significance by censorship which has turned its minister into a professional reformer and deleted all lines indicative of the inhibitions which make the unpleasant chap the Freudian specimen he is, "Rain" has become just another South sea island movie.

True, the silent version was similarly treated—but it WAS silent. This numbe talks and talks and talks and says nothing. The former had Lionel Barrymore, who can always convey meaning without words. It had Gloria Swanson, who, though not so great as Jeanne Eagels, still completely comprehended her heroine and made you do likewise.

Now comes Walter Huston in the only rôle I've ever seen him bungle. Comes Walter Huston to send audiences into spasms of mirth when, by all rights, they should have been quaking or crying! When he backs up and hurls the Lord's Prayer at poor Sadie he's funnier than a Marx brother.

As for Miss Crawford—she is sincere, but, I thought, inadequate. As usual, her lips are painted to resemble nothing so much as lumps of raw liver. But at that her makeup is not inappropriate to her present rôle.

Matt Moore and Kendall Lee as Dr. and Mrs. MacPhail give wooden performances. Guy Kibbee qualifies all right as the storekeeper. William Gargan as young Sergeant O'Hara is likable. Somehow Beulah Bondi does not convince as did Blanche Frederici in the rôle of the reformer's whalebone wife.

The staging is a faithful copy of the "legitimate" sets. Direction—Well, let's end it all by saying that everybody AND the rain work very, very hard in this picture.

SCENERY: Gorgeous! Makes you yearn for summer and vacation.

STORY: Melodrama concerned with the pure and the pesky—as all melodramas are—and the sort of justice vigilantes measured out in the good old days.

ACTING: Yes and no. Joan Bennett is sweet as the maiden in distress. Calling her "wild" is stretching points. She only lives in the wilds. Charles Farrell is pleasing but unimpressive in the romantic lead. Irving Pichel is punk as a snake in the grass. Morgan Wallace plays a hypocritical villain in ten, twent', thirt' fashion. Eugene Pallette as a fat, good natured stage driver does the best he's permitted to—which isn't saying much. In one place they make him tell a story during the narration of which he neighs like several sorts of horses. That's terrible! You'll love a little boy named Delmar Watson and get a laugh out of the scene in which he says to his sister:

"Don't touch me! Yes, you are, TOO, touchin' me! Well, anyhow, you're breathin' on me. DON'T breathe on me. You're all the time breathin' on me! . . ."

PHOTOGRAPHY: Excellent.

DIRECTION: Fair.

SOUND, SETS, COSTUMES, etc.: Oke.

AUDIENCE APPEAL: For those who like westerns dealing with an earlier day in our country's history I'd say "Wild Girl" might prove attractive movie fare.

See you tomorrow.

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

Mr. Lunt and Miss Fontanne, stars of the Theater Guild's theoretically starless system, returned to Chicago last night in their latest tandem vehicle, "Reunion in Vienna," and the subscribers to the American Theater society are in something that resembles a state of ecstasy. This brilliant pair of perfectly matched artists are in their happiest vein in this gay, erotic comedy by Robert E. Sherwood, a clever follower of the minor impertinences of Bernard Shaw.

They have rôles in which their physical glamour is enchantingly released and they frolic through an impish, suggestive tale that is part romance, part irony and part travesty. They have given many gleaming and adroit performances in the past, but they were never better than in this example of the Theater Guild's lightly indecent and frankly provocative vein of intellectual comedy.

I have seen New York critics quoted to the effect that "Reunion in Vienna" is the best play written by a living American, but I have no dispositon to toss my hat that far in the air about Mr. Sherwood's well-worded fantasy on the subject of Hapsburg grand dukes and their ex-mistresses.

It is, however, a choice bit of playwriting in the vein of sexly smartness and literate wit that is the current vogue among the advanced classes of theater-goers; and in the Lunts it possesses two of the best players among living Americans.

Miss Fontanne appears as Elena, in her youth the choicest nymph in the orgies of the imperial régime in Vienna, and now in her lovely thirties the faithful wife of a smug, infallible psycho-analyst. She is invited to a party in celebration of the old emperor's birthday, attended by a few pathetic fag ends of the vanished aristocracy; and there she encounters the partner of her laughing, immodest girlhood—the Grand Duke Rudolph, still young, handsome and impetuously lecherous.

He has the Hapsburg lip, the Hapsburg pride, the Hapsburg air of divine right; but his manners often resemble those of a drunken cowpuncher in a honky-tonk. You need not regard Sherwood's picture of this imperial bounder as an authentic study of the old Austrian nobility, although Mr. Lunt is persuasive in his graceful treatment of the author's caricature.

Between this frank, furious satyr, and her self-satisfied, psychological husband, Miss Fontanne stands as a variant on Shaw's Candida, cool, loyal and gently ironical. She resists, mocks at and escapes from the stormy wooing of the grand duke; but in the last act, after she has begun to feel sorry for him in defeat, she apparently succumbs to the mysterious temptations that are always implied when a playwright drops the curtain for a lapse of time. Sherwood leaves the facts in doubt, but his hints put the affair of Elena and Rudolph up to the active imaginations of the Guild's subscribers, who, I am sure, will believe the worst, and laugh at it. I am not altogether confident that this last act is the best one that could have been written for "Reunion in Vienna."

The excellent cast includes Helen Westley, favorite "character woman" of the Guild's productions, who seldom travels with its companies, in the rôle of a tough-minded lady hotel keeper. Frau Sacher of Vienna tradition, is said to have been the model for this rôle. Miss Westley hits the part with hard, dominating emphasis, and is a dynamic figure in the performance.

Evangelist Creates New Church Hymn in 4 Minutes

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 24.—(AP)—Robert Harkness, Scottish-American composer, tonight chose a passage of scripture—one of many suggested by a large audience—and created a new church hymn in four minutes. The congregation formed a chorus to sing it and then there were volunteer soloists. Harkness explained that his vain effort to confuse an evangelist with instrumental embellishments when he was an organist in Melbourne, Australia, had resulted in starting him out on an intended life's work of musical evangelism.

Engagement of Mrs. Tyner and L. M. Prince Confirmed

BY JUDITH CASS.

THE rumor that attractive Mrs. Lillian Wheeler Tyner and popular Leonard Morton Prince will be married this winter was verified yesterday by the announcement by Mrs. Tyner's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon B. Wheeler, of the engagement of their sister to Mr. Prince. The wedding is planned for December, but no date has been set yet. It will be very quiet, with just the families in attendance, and will be solemnized at the Hinsdale residence of the Wheelers.

Mrs. Tyner, who is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Dana Wheeler of Chicago and Lake Forest, and the niece of Miss Ellen Holt of Lake Forest, has lived in England and Hollywood for the past few years, and only recently moved back to Chicago. She and her little 4 year old daughter are living in an apartment at 63 East Division street, not far from where Mr. Prince lives with his stepfather and mother, Mr. and Mrs. George Halleck Taylor of 59 East Division street.

Amherst Graduate After Two Years in War.

Mr. Prince was graduated from Amherst in 1918, after returning from two years in France, the first of which was spent with the French army and the other in the United States forces.

He is one of society's most popular unattached men, and, along with other accomplishments, is noted for his banjo playing. Many are the charitable entertainments to which he and his great friend, Lambert Mullen, have contributed acts, for "Bert" is as good at the piano as "Stew" is on the banjo, and the two always have been in great demand. Mr. Mullen went to Mallorca last summer, however, and is finding life there so pleasant that he writes that he has no plans for coming home.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Irving Osborne Jr. of Lake Forest are being congratulated on the birth of a daughter at noon yesterday at the Alice Home hospital. Mrs. Osborne is the former Elsa Armour, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Watson Armour. Her wedding last December was one of the loveliest ever held at St. Chrysostom's and she was one of the most popular and attractive of the debutantes of the season before last.

Mrs. J. R. Winterbotham Jr. in Junior League Play.

There will be general rejoicing among the young drama lovers [and a lot of older ones, too], who constitute an enthusiastic public for Mrs. John R. Winterbotham Jr., when they learn that she is to play the rôle of "Colin," the sick little boy in the cast of "The Secret Garden," the play with which the Junior league's Children's theater will open its season a week from Saturday morning at the Playhouse theater. Mrs. Winterbotham has played little boy rôles for several seasons in the league plays and both the league members and audiences

Gandhi's London Hostess Tells of Voluntary Poverty

Miss Muriel Lester, head resident of Kingsley house, London, where she was hostess to Mahatma Gandhi when he attended the Indian round table conference, spoke last night at the Chicago Theological seminary. The subject of her address, delivered before students and faculty members of the seminary, was "Voluntary Poverty."

Miss Lester told of the growth of the movement toward poverty during the past 10 years, until now it reaches all classes in England. Miss Lester declared the new poverty movement is not a sort that demands monastic seclusion. On the other hand, the chief interest centers in the escape from "slavery to one's possessions." Poverty, she explained, does not mean destitution.

"Only poor people understand each other," said Miss Lester. "People with possessions share frankly with their closest friends all personal problems—even love affairs—except one, and that is money affairs. There is something sacredly secret about the size of salaries. Poor people do not have this barrier, and therefore have the satisfaction of really understanding each other and being understood."

Cheese Lends Tangy Snap to Colorless Dish

Versatility Assures It a Menu Welcome.

BY MARY MEADE.

Ever since the much storied herds boy some thousands of years ago discovered that his day's portion of goat's milk in its calf's stomach carrying bag had turned during the day to a thick delicious spread the like of which he had never before seen—cheese in one ferm or another has gladdened the hearts and piqued the palates of gourmets the world over. What the young puzzled herder did not know, that it was the substance rennin still remaining in the sheep's stomach that had curdled the milk into cheese, scientists many years later discovered; and it is still this discovery which many of our most delectable cheeses of today have to thank for their goodness.

One of the most willing and versatile workers we can enlist for promoting tasty, nutritious, and ever changing meals is cheese. It has a happy faculty of blending with the flavors of fruits, vegetables, cereals—almost every food one can name. With its generous contributions of minerals and vitamins—campaigners for growth, strong bones, and resistance to disease—it solves the worries of many a homemaker who just can't seem to serve the prescribed amount of milk. Whether it is bland and flattering to other more pronounced food flavors, harmonizing and cooperative with taste sensations of its own strength and prominence, or zestfully tangy to give life and zip to otherwise less characterful dishes, we love it.

But, as with all other good things, the better we like a food the more versatile we must be in serving it, lest it "die of its own too much." So, as ever, a new cheese dish is a matter for cheers—and here are four special tempters to hail the kitcheneer on to new adventures.

First for a new wrinkle in cheese luncheon dishes. It goes by the name of English monkey—perhaps you can tell us why. It has us guessing.

ENGLISH MONKEY.

Soak one cup of white bread crumbs in one cup of milk for half an hour. Add a beaten egg. Meanwhile melt one cup of grated peppy cheese in the top of a double boiler, add 1 teaspoon butter, and when smooth add the first mixture. Cook for five minutes, stirring constantly. Season with salt and pepper and serve very hot over hot toasted crackers.

CHEESE PATTY SOUFFLE.

Beat three eggs until fluffy, then combine with one cup of milk, one-third teaspoon salt, a dash of cayenne pepper, and three-fourths cup each of grated Swiss and Parmesan cheese. Combine thoroughly, turn into ramekin dishes which have been lined with puff paste, filling them two-thirds full. Bake in a moderately hot oven [375 degrees F.] in a shallow pan of water about twenty minutes or until set and browned on top. Serve at once.

CHEESE WAFERS MILANESE.

Here we have a new type of luncheon offering. Let it play opposite a generous fresh fruit salad and a glass of milk or cup of tea and you will have a luncheon to lure the most blasé:

1/3 cup melted butter,
1/3 cup cornstarch,
1/3 cup flour,
2½ cups milk,
½ teaspoon salt,
1 cup grated American cheese,
3 egg yolks, slightly beaten.

Blend the butter and sifted dry ingredients in the top of a double boiler. Add the milk slowly, stirring constantly. Cook five minutes, with frequent stirrings. Cool slightly, then add the egg yolks and two-thirds cup of cheese. Stir until melted, then turn out into a large greased pan and cool. Finally chill in the refrigerator. When set cut in two inch diamond shapes, sift with the remaining one-third cup of cheese, and place on a heat resistant serving platter. Brown quickly in the oven and serve at once.

Quite the newest thing out—as far as our information goes—is a novel cheese and ripe olive oven dish. Of course, if you don't like ripe olives make your Welsh rabbit. But if your taste buds long for the inimitable flavor of dark, meaty olives this should please you:

OLIVES AND CHEESE EN CASSEROLE.

2 cups canned tomatoes.
Dash of pepper.
1 teaspoon salt.
1 cup grated cheese.
3½ cups crumbled stale bread.
2/3 cups chopped ripe olives.

Brown the onions in the fat, add the tomatoes and seasoning, and simmer five minutes. Add the cheese and stir until the mixture is smooth. Grease a casserole and lay the crumbs, olives, and tomato mixture in layers until all are used. Top with crumbs, dot with butter, and bake in a moderate oven [350 degrees F.] twenty-five minutes.

Novarro Clan Rallies About Ramon of Films

Only Two Members Missing Are Cloistered Nuns.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—What might be called the Americanization of the Novarros has assembled all but two members of Ramon Novarro's family, the Samaniegos of Los Angeles and California, to do things the way the Americans do. The two who aren't here are two of Ramon's five sisters, and they are cloistered nuns, one in Spain, and one in Mexico, and they can't come.

Ramon was the first to strike out for America, and he came across the border in 1918 at the age of 18, with only $10 in his pocket after the revolution had wiped out the prosperous fortune of his father, Dr. Mariano Samaniego. Ramon got a job in a restaurant, he went to New York to try vaudeville and before his act broke in, he worked as bus boy in an automat. At that time he wanted to be a singer; had little idea of ever being a movie actor. Ferdinand Pinney Earle helped him break into films.

As Ramon climbed the rungs to film success, the Samaniego family began to rally round. Now one of his sisters, Carmen, is working as a dancer about Los Angeles. Another sister, Lupe, who had been a nun, laid aside her habit and has come to Hollywood to live with the family, and go about as the American girls do. She had been twelve years in convents in Spain and Mexico. Rosa is in a cloister in Spain, and Leonor in a convent in Mexico. The fifth sister, Luz, is the wife of Señor Gustavo Faist Moran, a broadcaster of Spanish language and music programs in Los Angeles, who blends the Teutonic and Hibernian racial elements with his Spanish.

All Ramon's living brothers, Mariano Jr., Antonio, Eduardo, and Angelo, are living in Los Angeles. The sixth brother, José, died here two years ago. The youngest, Eduardo and Angelo are in preparatory schools in Los Angeles. Antonio studied engineering for a while at Berkeley, Cal., Mariano Jr. tried to follow his brother into the movies, but after a succession of bits in the silent days of film, he yielded his movie ambitions for a business career in Los Angeles. Most of the clan, including Ramon, live with their mother, Mrs. Leonora Gavilan Samaniego, and their father, the doctor, in a rambling comfortable place at 2265 West 22d street, Los Angeles. Novarro never has lived in Hollywood proper, and never expects to; he doesn't like to be steeped too deeply in the kind of social affairs that are popular there, and he doesn't want to break his and his family's links with a lot of exiled and former professional friends from Mexico.

Here's a Hint a Stepmother May Well Use

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

When the mother of a little girl or boy dies, aside from his grief, the father often finds himself in a dilemma as to the practical working out of his affairs. Often he cannot afford to establish a home with a housekeeper, or he does not want to trust his small child to a stranger for all of every day. So his or his wife's people take the little grandchild and, in pity and affection, indulge it to an extreme degree.

Then, perhaps a little later for some reason, an aunt of the little boy or girl has charge of the child in her own family. She perhaps does not understand children. And the father, feeling sorry, can refuse the child nothing and relaxes all his own discipline. With the result that the poor little thing is spoiled and perhaps even becomes a trial to every one around her.

Then the man meets some one he loves and wants to marry. And his future young wife beholds with mixed emotions the child of 4 or 5 or 6 that she will suddenly have to care for and guide. And sometimes the chief emotion she feels is one of dismay at the child's faults. "How can I correct them?" she asks.

Now, I will admit this is a difficult situation for any young woman to find herself in, and I might give her pages and pages of directions about management. As I can't quite do that I am going to give her one piece of advice. That is this: To win the child by every means within her power. Not to play the part of commanding mother, vested suddenly with full authority, but rather to make the child feel her friendliness and interest and affection. Without this she will get nowhere. This must be the foundation if she is to acquire a real power to guide her new little son or daughter.

For she must remember that a motherless baby who is managed by several people in turn is not to blame if she is disobedient, willful, or even disagreeable. The new mother's job is first to win the child—not by bribes or rewards—but by warm friendliness, a readiness to laugh and play with her, a real interest in her interests, unfailing patience and an attempt at understanding. The rest is built on this foundation. We have several booklets that will be of immediate and practical help in addition to this first achievement.

GOLD MEDAL FLOUR

Ida M. Chitwood, nationally known cooking authority, who will conduct the cooking school sponsored by the Chicago Tribune to be held at the Trianon Ballroom Oct. 25th thru 28th.

MRS. CHITWOOD will use Gold Medal Flour exclusively in her demonstrations because she knows it is always dependable. Gold Medal Flour is "Kitchen-tested"—that's an extra guarantee that the flour will always act the same satisfactory way. Samples from every batch have been used to bake rolls, cakes and breads in home ovens like yours to prove its dependable quality.

Eventually Gold Medal "Kitchen-tested" Flour—Why Not Now?

Free—15 new simplified recipes in every sack of Gold Medal "Kitchen-tested" Flour—recipes for new things easy to make and sure to appeal to your husband. These recipes are "Kitchen-tested" too. You'll get perfect bakings every time you use Gold Medal recipes and Gold Medal "Kitchen-tested" Flour.

Gold Medal "Kitchen-tested" Flour is the first all-purpose flour accepted by the Committee on Foods of the American Medical Association—proof of its purity.

REAL-LIFE TALKIES ★★★★★ ABOUT CUTICURA

"I COULD NOT SLEEP, my eczema itched and burned so. I must have inherited it, as father had it, too."

"I TOOK SERUM TREATMENTS which cost $10.00 each. They did me no good."

"SPENT MORE THAN $200.00 on medicines and treatments. Then I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment."

"ALL HEALED IN SIX MONTHS. Now father and I use Cuticura all the time."

If you suffer from any kind of skin trouble at all, especially pimples, you can't afford to miss trying Cuticura. The amazing record of this healing, soothing soap and ointment over half a century is obvious proof that Cuticura can and does afford satisfactory relief when many other treatments have failed.

FREE! Folder on the Care of the Skin. Remarkably helpful and practical suggestions. Write today for special folder X-9. Cuticura Laboratories, Malden, Mass.

Pencil Line Can Improve Too Short Brow

But Always Avoid Radical Changes.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

I've done some talking recently about the wisdom of not tampering with good eyebrow lines. But that is only where the natural line is good. My chief criticism is against taking a good pair and converting them into freak lines that throw the face out of focus, so to speak. You can do that, you know, when you begin monkeying with the brows with an inexpert eye and hand.

However, there are instances where eyebrows need help and can use it to excellent advantage. Take the young woman whose eyes and brows are close-set. This is not an asset and if any trick can be performed to give the illusion of wider set eyes, well and good.

I have just witnessed a most successful experiment along this line. The girl's eyebrows were very short, extending little beyond the center of the eye. They crowded up toward the nose. In a professional's expert hands more space was allotted between eyebrow and eye and again between both eyes. A heavy growth running down toward the lid was pruned out, the remaining hair being directed and arched into a neat crescent.

Over the bridge of the nose the hair again was pruned and the beginning of the eyebrow line widened on both sides over the bridge of the nose. And added to the line at the sides were, in this case, pencilled extensions so that the eyebrow appeared to reach a bit beyond the outer edge of the lid. Extending the line, which may be done with dye as well as pencil, giving the eye a trimmed, crescent shape, and separating the hair growth over the nose of the bridge made a vast improvement in this particular face.

Certain eyebrows, because they are straight, should not be influenced into arches. The arch does not harmonize so well with the shape of the face as the line nature supplied.

Only very young girls should ever indulge the thin line of brow. When you're looking your brows over with the urge to change them, remember that there's much of the facial expression involved in that line.

Guimpe Dresses Are Fashionable for Winter Wear

DOROTHY DULIN PARIS

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—When a particular style of coat of dress becomes popular it is usually dropped by the fashionable with a thud that can be heard across the Atlantic. Like the cinema star who leaps into the limelight overnight, its meteoric career is brief. The military coat and the triple-breasted suit that caused such a sensation when they first appeared are just a few of the styles that have gone the way of many fashions. But there is an exception to every rule, and even the most temperamental French ladies of fashion are wearing last spring's popular style—the guimpe dress.

In the sketch today is shown the kind of guimpe dress they are wearing, which is just a little bit different from its predecessors. It is in a black thin woolen, has a molded silhouette to the knees, and box plaits from there to the hem. Unbelted, it is fitted and has its waistline indicated by a seam. There is a panel gore in the center front of the skirt. There are two wide straps that hold the dress around the neckline.

The guimpe worn with this dress is in direct contrast to the frilly, summer ones, having a very high neck and long sleeves. These long sleeves have a huge puff at the elbows.

In the large sketch is shown the three-quarter length coat that completes the new guimpe ensemble. It is in black woolen and its collar and hem are of seal. The long sleeves are capped at the shoulders, and this coat has a side front closing, fastened at the waistline by a tab that buttons in the center front. This ensemble is from Heim.

Mrs. Cornwall to Speak.

Mrs. Guy Cornwall of the Illinois League of Women Voters will speak on "Political Adventures" this evening at the central branch of the Y. W. C. A. at 59 East Monroe street.

Engagement of Mrs. Tyner Is Confirmed

Miss Gloria Chandler is directing the play. Miss Marietta Gillette is working on costumes and Mrs. Walter P. Paepcke is designing the scenery. Plans are being made to transform the entire theater into a fantastic garden for the play's setting.

Every one in society has this afternoon or tonight checked on the social calendar, for the two performances of the fashion show by the woman's board of St. Luke's hospital will be given then in the grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel, and unless this year's show is different from the others that have been given, literally every one who keeps up with things social and smart, will be at one of the showings.

There are over one hundred well known names on the list of boxholders, including Mrs. John G. Shedd, whose two debutante granddaughters, Mary Reed and Jean Schweppe, will be among the mannequins, and Mr. and Mrs. Alden B. Swift, whose daughter, Lydia, also a debutante of this season, will model. Mrs. John W. Gary is general chairman of the show and president of the board.

This Year's Assembly Ball to Be Charity Affair.

The Assembly ball this year is to be a charity ball, and while it will be the same exclusive affair that an Assembly always has been, and while the invitation list will constitute again what is known as Chicago's "400," the prime motive of the board of governors is to raise funds for the needy and to give employment to those whose services will be called on in arrangements for the ball.

The affair will be held on Dec. 2 in the Tower room of the Drake hotel. Until last year, when they were discontinued, two Assemblies were held each season, one before Christmas and one in January, but this winter there is to be just the one. In the old days the wives of the older governors received at the first ball and the wives of the younger men at the second. It has not yet been decided whether there will be a line composed of members of both groups at this year's ball.

Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank gave a supper party last night at their residence for Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Lunt [Lynn Fontanne] following the opening of "Reunion in Vienna" which the two Theater Guild stars introduced to Chicago last evening at the Erlanger theater. The guests numbered less than 20, a comparatively small number for Mrs. Fairbank, who is famous for her informal entertaining of two score or more guests. While the Lunts are popular and much sought after by Chicago society, they seldom make social appearances during their engagements here.

Reception for Junior Henry Kitchell Websters.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kitchell Webster have cards out for a reception for their son, Henry Kitchell Webster Jr., and his bride, the former Miss Madeline Clapp of Brookline, Mass., to be held on Sunday from 3 until 7 o'clock at their residence at 1411 Maple avenue. Miss Clapp and Mr. Webster were married on Oct. 17 at Brookline.

The third of the weddings that have taken the Porter brothers from the ranks of bachelors into those of the benedicts in less than a month, will take place this afternoon in Kansas City, Mo., when Mrs. Mary Alexander Brumback will become the bride of John Pierrepont Porter. The service is to be read at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Brumback's cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Christy Sharon.

Among the guests will be the bridegroom's mother and sister, Mrs. Henry Homes Porter and Miss Mary Porter; his cousin, Ralph N. Isham, who will serve as best man, and Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Hill [Helen Isham] of Boston, who have been visiting Mr. Isham in Chicago since the marriages of Miss Elinor Durbin and Sartell Prentice Porter on Sept. 2 and of Miss Mary Kinney and Henry H. Porter Jr. on Oct. 7. Mr. Porter and his bride will fly to California on their honeymoon.

Tuesday Symphony Concerts Are Popular.

We write and one hears so much of the Thursday night and Friday afternoon symphony concerts that one is apt to forget the Tuesday afternoon ones which are given fortnightly instead of weekly, but they, too, are popular with society and there are box parties at every concert, usually preceded by luncheon parties. The boxholders for this series, which starts this afternoon, are Cecil Barnes, Mrs. John Jay Borland, Mrs. Emery H. Fahrney, Mrs. John V. Farwell, Wade Fetzer, Mrs. Stanley Field, John J. Glessner, Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed, Charles H. Hamill, Mrs. James O. Heyworth, Mrs. Louis E. Laflin, Mrs. Thomas M. Longcope Jr., Mrs. Robert R. McCormick, Mrs. Potter Palmer, Mrs. Oliver S. Picher, Mrs. John T. Pirie, Mrs. Albert A. Sprague, Mrs. Frederick A. Stock, Alden B. Swift, Mrs. Leverett Thompson, Mrs. Henry N. Tuttle, Mr. Frederic W. Upham, and Mrs. F. Edson White.

Mrs. Milan H. Hulbert and her large and interesting family of four daughters and one son came to town on Sunday from Oconomowoc, Wis., where they had a house for the summer, but Mrs. Hulbert and Helen and Adele won't linger long in Chicago, for they are leaving on Wednesday to motor east. Miss Olive Hulbert already is in the east, having been in Rye for the last six weeks, and she plans to take an apartment in New York this winter, but Mrs. Hulbert and Helen and Adele are planning to go abroad soon after the Christmas holidays. Miss Ethel Hulbert and her brother, Milan, have taken an apartment on Bellevue place for the winter.

The Harry C. Holloways of Glencoe are expected to return in about a fortnight from their estate at Tyringham, Mass., not far from the summer residences of the Metzes and Mrs. Salisbury.

Cards are out for the debut reception of Miss Lady Eleanor Litsinger who will receive with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Litsinger, from 4 to 7 o'clock on Friday, Nov. 4, at their residence, 1400 State parkway.

Also received yesterday were cards to the reception that Mr. and Mrs. Seaborn T. Whatley will give on Saturday, Nov. 5, from 4 to 7 o'clock at their residence, 239 Lake Shore drive, to introduce formally their daughter, Betty.

Arts Club to Give Lecture on Africa.

The first of the many pleasant affairs arranged during the season for the members of the Arts club will be a lecture to be given by Laura C. Boulton on "Africa, the Cradle of Art: Art and Music in the Life of an African Native" tomorrow morning at 11:30. The lecture will be illustrated with moving pictures, colored slides and music records.

The White Elephant Rummage shop is having a home dressmakers' sale on Thursday of this week. Mrs. D. Mark Cummings will be in charge.

The Woman's City club members are all keenly interested in the rummage sale the club is to hold today and tomorrow at 159 North Wabash avenue. Donations for the sale have been coming in to the club at a generous rate and prospective purchasers will be able to choose from an imposing array of clothing, accessories, novelties, and books.

Mrs. Clarence S. Funk of Oak Park is general chairman of the sale, and among those who are assisting her are Mrs. Murry Nelson, president of the club; Miss Florence Dibell Bartlett, Mrs. Augustus A. Carpenter, Mrs. Clair E. More, Mrs. Herbert F. Perkins, Mrs. Thomas O. Baxter, and Mrs. John L. Shortall. Proceeds of the sale will provide the means to continue the club's work, to which many civic minded women give a great deal of time.

Mrs. Peyton Gives Bridge Lesson Today.

The first of three bridge lessons by Mrs. Richard F. Peyton will be given this morning at the Woman's Athletic club at 11 o'clock. This morning the members will learn about "Honor Tricks Versus Playing Tricks." A special luncheon will be served after the lesson.

Dr. Horace J. Bridges will give the first of five lectures at the Fortnightly this morning at 11 o'clock. "Human Stupidity; Its Causes and Cure" will be discussed. Mrs. Wilhelm L. Baum, Mrs. D. Mark Cummings, Mrs. Frederick T. Haskell, Mrs. William C. Niblack, Mrs. Frederic W. Upham, Mrs. Charles H. Schweppe, and Mrs. J. Ogden Armour are among those who have taken tickets for the course.

FIFTY AND FIT

At fifty, you can be in your prime.

Why go along with "fairly good health" when you might be enjoying vigor you haven't felt for years?

There's a simple little thing anyone can do to keep the vital organs stimulated, and feel fit all the time. People don't realize how sluggish they've grown until they've tried it. The stimulant that will stir your system to new life is Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. It will make a most amazing difference in many ways.

This famous doctor's prescription is a delicious syrup made with fresh herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. It starts its good work with the first spoonful. That's all you need to drive away the dullness, and headache of a bilious spell, and rid the system of that slow poison that saps your strength. It's better than a tonic for tired bowels, and unlike habit-forming laxatives you can take it freely or give it to any child. And it isn't expensive.

Get some syrup pepsin today, and take a little tonight. Don't wait until you're sick to give your system this wonderful help. You can avoid those spells of biliousness or constipation. A spoonful every now and then is better than constant worry about the condition of your bowels, or fear of auto-intoxication as you grow older. Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin protects the system. All druggists keep this prescriptional preparation.

EXPERTS ENDORSE
Successor to Whole Wheat Bread

"Wonder-Cut Wheat Bread easier to digest, far more delicious," they say. Praise Balanced-Blend.

WOMEN by thousands are acclaiming Wonder-Cut Wheat Bread as the successor to whole wheat bread. Now food experts join them. They find that Wonder-Cut Wheat Bread is far easier to digest than whole wheat bread. Tastes better, too. But you don't have to be a scientist to discover this. Just taste Wonder-Cut Wheat Bread. It actually tastes like cake—thanks to Balanced-Blend.

Balanced-Blend is the latest discovery in baking—the achievement of the Happy Wonder Bakers. It is the perfect blend, of short-patent and choice stone-ground whole wheat flours, discovered after two years of patient research. It makes Wonder-Cut Wheat Bread the finest-tasting bread anyone can serve. Fully nourishing. And, unlike whole wheat bread, utterly lacking in harshness.

Give your family a permanent vacation from tasteless whole wheat bread. Treat them to Wonder-Cut Wheat Bread—the bread they'll eat because they like it. Remember the important name—Wonder-Cut Wheat Bread!

THE HAPPY WONDER BAKERS—Continental Baking Co.

The Secret of BALANCED-BLEND

No baking discovery of recent years equals Balanced-Blend in true importance. Balanced-Blend is simple enough. Just the perfect blend of short-patent and choice stone-ground whole wheat flours. But its results are revolutionary. It has created a new kind of bread—Wonder-Cut Wheat Bread, far better than any whole wheat bread can ever be. The kind of bread anyone may be proud to serve. The kind of bread that's best for you and your family.

WONDER-CUT WHEAT BREAD

A fair question for you to ask . . .

"What assurance is there that my advertising in the New York market will bring response from women?"

IN A YEAR WHEN every advertising dollar must produce response, consider these facts:

In the first nine months of 1932

—69,391 requests for food and household information were addressed to the Herald Tribune Institute, a daily and Sunday service laboratory conducted for Herald Tribune readers interested in homemaking.

—plus 52,570 requests for advice and guidance on beauty subjects mentioned every week in the Herald Tribune.

The last nine months have put every newspaper on an advertiser's list to the acid test. Today it is a proved fact that the newspaper which performs practical daily service for its readers is the profitable one to use. Advertisers in the New York market know better than ever before that they can depend on woman-response from advertising run in the New York Herald Tribune.

If you sell to women, don't fail to investigate the Herald Tribune's power to draw response from women who live in and about New York . . . and its ability to build results for advertisers.

10 FACTS about the New York HERALD TRIBUNE

1 - Was the first newspaper in America to organize a food and housekeeping Institute.

2 - Is the only New York newspaper that publishes a daily home food marketing service in active conjunction with an Institute.

3 - Devotes more space to food and cooking in one month than four major women's magazines combined.

4 - Contains fashion news every day in the week.

5 - Enrolled over 6,000 families in its Yard and Garden Competition in 1932 —the largest enrollment in such a competition ever achieved by a newspaper.

6 - Has more circulation in New York suburbs on weekdays than any other standard-size morning newspaper.

7 - Ranks 2nd in the United States in amount of national advertising carried . . . was first in general advertising (Media Records) in September.

8 - Was awarded the Francis Wayland Ayer Cup for typographical excellence in 1931, and an honorable mention in 1932.

9 - Circulation 329,743 weekdays, 451,961 Sundays —Average for six months ended September 30, 1932.

10 - Is served by both the Associated Press and the United Press . . . maintains its own news bureaus in such cities as Washington, London, Paris, Geneva and Rome.

PITT-NOTRE DAME GAME TO SET GATE RECORD

HO, HUM! YALE SEASON HASN'T EVEN STARTED

Only Princeton and Harvard Count.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 24.—It is a fortunate thing for Yale that the football games with Bates, Chicago, Brown and Army do not count. At Yale, only the Princeton and Harvard games count, and if these are won and all the others are lost, the Yale team and the coaches are deemed to have had a successful season, nevertheless.

Harvard's schedule of games that really count is even smaller than Yale's. It consists of one game, inclusive. That one is the game with Yale.

Formerly, in the days when Harvard and Princeton maintained football relations, there were some who believed mistakenly that the Yale game and the Princeton game counted equally at Harvard. But that was not correct. Harvard recognized only one social peer in football and that one was Yale, a stipulation which contributed somewhat to the unpleasantness which finally made total strangers of Harvard and Princeton. Perhaps "social" is the wrong word to use in this connection. Mr. Will Bingham, the Harvard graduate manager of athletics, insists that it is.

A Snub for Tigers.

Harvard simply did not recognize Princeton as a rival, but in declining to do so did not mean to imply any lack of social class in the Princetons. The Harvards did not say that the Princetons were socially inferior, but neither would they go so far as to state definitely that they were not. If the Princetons wanted to interpret this as a social snub, that was very unfortunate, to be sure, but it was entirely up to Princeton.

The Princetons came of an old school, themselves, with as heavy a shawl of ivy on some of the buildings as you will find on any college walls anywhere in the United States. They had been playing the Harvards for many years and it seemed to them that after all this time they deserved to be taken up by Harvard. Perhaps, if they had not made the mistake of recognizing Harvard as a rival first there would have been no ill feeling on that score. But Princeton perceived a rivalry there and recognized it, and there was a feeling of rebuff when Harvard did not even acknowledge the compliment, much less return it.

Just an Ordinary Opponent.

So Princeton remained to the end of the relationship, or at any rate until the present long interruption, if the end is not quite yet, just an opponent and socially indistinguishable from Bowdoin, Holy Cross and New Hampshire. I will persist, it seems, in using the social word in this connection, notwithstanding Mr. Bingham's insistence that for all Harvard knows to the contrary, the Princetons may be quite absolutely top hole and jolly well pukka in the social sense.

At any rate, it irritated the Princetons to realize that even though they should lick Harvard, Harvard would still regard the season as a success if Harvard then beat Yale, whose team might previously have lost to Princeton, too. It was even more irritating, if possible, to Princeton men to be licked by Harvard, as sometimes happened, and know that the Harvards regarded this as an incident not worth counting.

Yale Season Hasn't Started.

As matters stand at New Haven just now, the Yale team has come through the four games thus far played, without prejudice. True, Bates and Chicago tied the Yales, and Brown and West Point beat them, but the season has not started yet. The undergraduates and coaches may not feel that way about it, individually, but tradition does.

The various conferences have similar traditions. A Western conference team may be defeated by a school not included in the conference and still boast rather proudly of a glorious season if the team comes through its games with the conference teams without a defeat.

The Army is in a slightly different situation, and I believe Notre Dame regards all victories and all defeats as such. At West Point, however, there is a feeling toward the Navy game which is somewhat the same as that which Harvard entertains for Yale. The Army derives more pleasure from beating the Navy than from any other victory in a hard season, but is tolerably pleased by occasional victories over Notre Dame.

It's Not a Bad Policy.

There are elements of comfort in the policy of recognizing only one or two rivals among eight or nine opponents in a season. If a man happens to be tagged on the chin in the course of a misunderstanding with a stranger somewhere at night, it is a fine thing for his pride to be able to say, "I do not consider myself to have been tagged on the chin at all because I recognize only one rival and he happens to be in Europe at the moment."

In the WAKE of the NEWS

COLLEGE PROS.

THE colleges in the Western conference, more commonly known as the Big Ten, have a rule which prevents players who play pro football after leaving college from acting as officials of Big Ten games or of securing coaching positions with Big Ten elevens.

BILL GLASSGOW.

Obviously this rule is to discourage boys from entering the pro ranks. It differentiates in a manner which the lay mind sometimes finds a bit difficult to comprehend between the professionalism of coaches paid to teach football and the vending of that knowledge for cash by the boys who have absorbed it from men paid for the purpose.

Please understand, Wakers, we are making no argument against paid coaches or the amounts paid them. If your boy plays football, you want him well coached. We think it just as logical as paid instructors in classroom work. You would not expect your son to learn Latin, mathematics, chemistry or physics from an amateur enthusiast. In fact, you'd seek another college for him.

The Wake likewise does not care to argue, at this time, whether this anti-pro rule is justified or not. Our purpose is simply to show that such an inflexible rule does work injustice and perhaps hardship in some cases. Take the case of Willis A. [Bill] Glassgow of Iowa, for instance.

Glassgow in 1929 was awarded THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE silver football for the Big Ten player of greatest value to his team during the season. That meant he not only was a great player but also that he was outstanding in leadership and sportsmanship. His contributions to Iowa gridiron success helped attract the crowds whose admission fees support intramural athletics and pay coaching staffs.

Bill worked his way, in part, through college. He wished to study law. Should he, then, accept a minor coaching position at a small salary or play pro football for a salary commensurate with his college reputation? To get the most money in the shortest time, Bill signed with Portsmouth, then played a season with the Chicago Cardinals. After the pro schedule ended, each season, he returned to his law studies at Iowa City. In two seasons he earned enough to finish law school and to acquire a wife. He had no thoughts of a pro football career.

This fall, Ossie Solem, new coach at Iowa, was willing to use Glassgow, as a former Hawkeye star, as part time member of the coaching staff. Remuneration would not be large, but still mighty helpful to a senior law student with a family. Glassgow applied for reinstatement as an amateur so as to secure the appointment. The application was denied. We are told all such applications have been denied. It was not a question of the merits of this particular case, but an inflexible rule. Under the circumstances, this seems an injustice. We leave others to form their own conclusions.

Glassgow did not care to discuss the incident when we were at Iowa City. "It's all over now," he said. "I intend to practice law when I am graduated. Of course, I'd rather be an amateur, and it would have been both fun, honor and useful compensation to have assisted, even in a minor way, the football eleven of my alma mater. I don't see the need of any publicity about it, however."

"But, no doubt, there are or will be other cases similar to yours," we remonstrated.

"Well, if you think it might help any one else, go ahead," he reluctantly assented.

Perhaps the rule deters some boys from becoming "athletic bums," although one might feel those so inclined would not care one way or another about the rule. Certainly, in some cases it works an apparent hardship. We have no remedy to offer. We simply present the facts.

FEARFUL TRIP IS DONE; HAWKS' GOALIE SAFE

Gardiner Cruises North with Hockey Authors.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Duluth, Minn., Oct. 24.—Charley Gardiner, goalie star of the Chicago Blackhawks hockey team, and an erstwhile holdout today joined the Hawks in training here despite the fact he was highly nervous following the rigors of leading overland to this arctic port a part of Chicago hothouse hockey experts.

The overland trip, which consumed 30 hours and more, left the puny experts suffering more or less from exposure. There were several collapses in equipment, the climax coming when two tires on one of the covered wagons flattened simultaneously. The same occurred in the midst of an icy deluge near Redwing, Minn. Fortunately, the hockey star was not in the distressed vehicle; thus his life was not endangered.

No Indians, Joe?

The aforementioned wet and chill little matter brought about an overnight delay, and the experts huddled in the wreck might have become a bit testy but for the exhortations of Tour Manager Joseph C. Farrell, an old trail hunter, who pleaded with the victims to "remember the fortitude of the covered wagon mothers of '49."

The boys were pretty tired but after an enthusiastic greeting of the tardy Mr. Gardiner, they consented to put on a show for the pilgrims.

There are a lot of new fellows around this training camp [which, incidentally, seems to us to be pretty far north for any kind of a training camp, although most of the hockey players feel like singing "Cabin in the Cotton" when they get as far south as Duluth].

Five Will Have to Go.

How many of these new faces still will be in the picture when the team opens its championship season on Nov. 10, Coach Iverson will not intimate. He has 21 athletes in training here, now that Gardiner has joined up. When the season opens the roster will carry the names of only 16 men—11 forwards, four defense players and one goalie.

There will be three and possibly four replacements in the forward lines and at least one on the defense, due to the passing of last year's players to other teams. There are also several here who made the team last year who may not make it this year.

Among the forwards who are getting into shape rapidly are Johnny Gottselig, Mush March, Vic Ripley, Paul Thompson, Tommy Cook, Doc Romnes and Louis Holmes of last year's team. Among the newcomers, Donnie McFadyen, with the Chicago Shamrocks during the last two seasons, is attracting the attention of observers here. Louis Trudell, heretofore an amateur, is another standout.

Bostrom New Defense Star.

There is more of an over supply among defense candidates than there is in the forward department. Helge Bostrom, the new captain, seems to be the special delight of Coach Iverson. Helge was out most of last year with an injured foot and the extent of his recovery had been uncertain until he began to cut capers on the ice here.

The colossal Taffy Abel is as big but not bigger than usual, and his admirers are predicting another good season for him. Teddy Graham also will be a regular, of course.

There is some question as to the candidate who will get the other defense job. Pudge Mackenzie, former Shamrock, is in good shape and a leading contender. Art Coulter, heretofore a winger, may be switched to a defense assignment.

No Puzzle About Goalie.

Two pickup goalies have been working with the Hawks in their scrimmages here, but it will not be necessary for Hawk leaders to puzzle their heads about the goalie job now that Gardiner has been signed.

Although Gardiner is two weeks late in reporting, he appears to be in as good physical trim as most of the athletes. Charley will don his upholstery at 9 o'clock tomorrow for the first time and has outlined a strenuous training campaign for himself.

READY FOR BUCKEYES

N. U. Passes and Punts Make Up for Weak Line

BY WILFRID SMITH.

A football team with a good kicker and a good passer and with at least two receivers who can catch the passes frequently will develop a successful offense despite inability to gain ground consistently by running or plunging. Northwestern demonstrated this last Saturday by scoring the tying touchdown against Purdue university in the last few minutes of the game.

Coach Hanley told reporters at the beginning of the season that he doubted if Northwestern possessed the blocking ability in the line to develop a strong running attack. From the first day of practice he concentrated on forward passing. Except in the Illinois game, where the Wildcats were markedly superior in the line, Northwestern has been most effective in the air.

Olson a Big Threat.

Even so, Northwestern pushed back Purdue 11 yards on three consecutive line plunges by Olson Saturday during the touchdown drive, and Olson constituted a threat which was most important in the successful execution of the scoring pass.

The 65 yard drive to Purdue's goal was accomplished in ten plays, three of them passes. Summary of the ten plays follows:

1. Ball on Northwestern 35 yard line after Moss' kick. First down, double reverse, failed to gain.
2. Second down forward pass, Rentner to Manske, gained 31 yards. Ball on Purdue's 34 yard line.
3. First down forward pass, Olson to Fencl, gained 12 yards. Ball on Purdue's 22 yard line.

Three Plunges Gain.

4. First down, Olson plunged three yards.
5. Second down, Olson plunged five yards.
6. Third down, Olson plunged three yards.
8. Second down, Olson plunged one yard.
9. Third down, Rentner repeated his previous play and failed to gain. Ball on Purdue's 5 yard line. Purdue took time out.
10. Fourth down, four yards needed for first down, five yards needed for touchdown. Rentner moved to left wing back. Olson took center's pass, gave Rentner the ball. Rentner forward passed to Potter, right wing back, for touchdown. Olson drop kicked the extra point.

Olson (No. 1) received pass from center. Rentner (No. 2) came across and took ball. As far as Purdue knew he intended to run, but Rentner dropped back a few steps and forward passed to Potter (No. 3) who had gone into the end zone and cut sharply to his right away from Purdue's secondary box defense. The Northwestern ends were decoys for the pass to Potter. Kawal (No. 4) blocked to protect Rentner and so did Northwestern's five

3 PREP PLAYERS DIE; FOOTBALL TOLL REACHES 13

Investigation Under Way in Cleveland Fatality.

Three deaths traceable to injuries suffered by players in football games were reported yesterday, bringing the season's total to 13. All were high school youths. No fatalities have occurred among members of major college teams.

Cleveland, O., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—William [Billy] Christe, 15, substitute end on the Lakewood High school varsity, was dead today as the first victim of the Cleveland football season. Officials of Lakewood and Rocky River High schools are investigating the incidents which are believed to have led up to his death.

Christe was working out with the Lakewood eleven in a practice game with Rocky River and was kicked in the head during a scrimmage. He was taken out and sent home, but that night attended a professional football game. The next day he was taken to a hospital delirious.

BRUISE CAUSES DEATH.

Scotts Bluff, Neb., Oct. 24.—(AP)—Leland McIrvin, 16 year old Mintare High school football player, died in a hospital today, the result, physicians said, of a general infection which followed a bruise received in practice more than a week ago.

The boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McIrvin, had not been feeling well for several months and was suffering from boils at the time. His left arm was bruised above the elbow.

It was the second Nebraska fatality of the season to be blamed to football. Asa J. Mohr of Central City, player on a town football team, died in an Omaha hospital after suffering a broken neck in a game.

DIES OF FRACTURED NECK.

Alhambra, Cal., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—Bob Houtz, Alhambra High school football player, who was injured last Saturday in the Alhambra-University of Southern California freshman game, died yesterday. Houtz suffered a fractured neck in the game. He was 17 years old.

UBL'S CONDITION IMPROVES.

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—Physicians today reported constant improvement in the condition of Myron Ubl, University of Minnesota's star back, who has been in the University hospital for a month. Ubl suffered a sternum fracture during practice and pneumonia and a lung abscess followed.

Ubl, near death a few weeks ago, has shown a growing appetite and improvement in his general condition. The lung abscess still is draining and Ubl has not yet left his bed, although he was removed from an oxygen tent two weeks ago.

Well, Anyway, These Football Fans Mean Well

Punt—A term used in golf.

My Greatest THRILL in FOOTBALL

BY SAM WILLAMAN.
[As told to Irving Vaughan.]

A THRILL in football is something pretty tough to describe, especially if you aren't quite sure that you ever experienced one as a player. Looking back now at the games in which I played as an Ohio State half back I don't recall that one was much different from the other. It was hard work and we were always trying to win. If we lost we naturally felt a bit depressed and if we won we were satisfied because we had accomplished our purpose. A real thrill, whether it is in football or any other competitive sport, is experienced only by players of a certain temperament. Anyway, that's the way I feel about it.

SAM WILLAMAN.

There is one game I don't have trouble recounting. Possibly I was thrilled at the time and don't realize it at this late date. The real reason I recall the battle so easily is that if I ever put in a hard day's labor that was it. The date was Nov. 2, 1913, at Columbus, when we defeated Northwestern in the season's final by 58 to 0. The score should be a pretty fair tip as to why I remember the affair.

400 Yards Seem Like So Many Miles.

Northwestern was woefully weak in those days and Ohio State was just beginning to assert itself as a Big Ten contender. The Purple could do nothing that afternoon. They fumbled continually and we turned two of these blunders into touchdowns. Hightower was the only Northwestern back able to make any progress and what he did was purely because of his own ability.

I scored one of the many touchdowns that afternoon, but that was only a small part of the work. I actually believe I must have carried the ball altogether for a total of 400 yards at least and that night I felt as if the distance must have been that many miles. That's why I always think of this game when anybody asks me about my playing past.

If you'd ask me if I have had any thrills since becoming a Big Ten coach I'd say yes and add that it came on the day Ohio State whipped Michigan, 7 to 0. That was Oct. 18, 1929. We didn't figure in advance that we could win without great help in the breaks. We didn't have much of a team, but we made use of what we had. The sight of 90,000 spectators undoubtedly inspired the Ohio boys.

Finally Get Michigan Off Its Guard.

What won the game for us, aside from our unexpected strength on defense when our goal line was endangered, was deception. Our plans had been built around a forward pass attack, which we figured would give us the best percentage. We started on this as soon as the opportunity presented itself. Holman, Ohio's quarter, threw five short passes to McConnell, one of our half backs.

The idea was to get Michigan off its guard. It finally happened. Fesler, Ohio right end, acted as a decoy on these passes. The Wolverines naturally were watching him and when he failed to take any part in the receiving of the throws they forgot about it. That was when Holman tossed a pass to him and he caught it just a few feet from the goal line after which he stepped across for the winning touchdown. Capt. Truskowski, the only Michigan man close to Fesler, tried to slap the ball down just before it reached Fesler's hands, but he missed. Then Michigan began to fight back and once was held for downs on our one foot line.

Sam Willaman now is in his fourth season as head football coach at Ohio State, having followed Dr. John Wilce, the one time Badger star. He played half back for three years on the Scarlet and Gray eleven.

Augustana Loses Star Back for Homecoming

Rock Island, Ill., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—Augustana, a strong contender for the Little Nineteen football championship, with three victories and no defeats, will have to use a new full back against Monmouth here Saturday in the annual homecoming game.

Panthers Prepare to Halt Irish March.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—When the University of Pittsburgh's football eleven tries to halt the point-a-minute march of Notre Dame next Saturday, 62,000—a record crowd for a football game in 1932—is expected to jam Pitt stadium.

The estimate on the attendance was made by officials in the university ticket office today. They said that with favorable weather, there might even be a sellout, in which case 70,000 would see the game. The season record is held by Southern California and Stanford, which last Saturday played to 60,000 spectators.

The Notre Dame game is the one big battle on Pittsburgh's schedule, and until the Panthers were tied by Ohio State Saturday there was confidence among the local citizenry that their team could stop the Irish. Now the confidence has been replaced by a question mark.

Maybe Tie Will Help.

There was a feeling in the Pittsburgh camp today when the players reported for practice that the scoreless tie might have been just what was needed to sharpen the Panthers' claws for Notre Dame. Coach Jock Sutherland spared nobody in his dressing room lecture this afternoon.

Although Notre Dame will present some of the greatest back field stars in the country in the cast which includes Jaskwhich, Koken, Lukats, Banas, Melinkovich, Brancheau, Sheeketski, and Vejar, the Panthers believe their backs can match the performances of the Irish.

Warren Heller, who passes and runs with equal skill, will lead the Pittsburgh attack. He will have the assistance of Hogan, Reider, and Weinstock.

Panthers Eye Scoreboard.

The Irish are only three points shy of a point-a-minute record for the season. They beat Haskell, 73-0; Drake, 62-0, and Carnegie Tech, 42-0; a total of 177 points in 180 minutes of play. Pittsburgh fans are quite willing to wager that Notre Dame's total next Saturday will be held below the Carnegie Tech figure, and many are backing the Panthers to score, something that no Notre Dame opponent has done this year.

Against this record Pitt can offer 138 points in 300 minutes of playing time. The Panthers beat Ohio Northern, 47-0; Duquesne, 33-0; West Virginia, 40-0, and Army, 18-13, before the scoreless tie with Ohio State.

Set Back Nine Inches.

Pittsburgh failed to gain through the line. On the next play Ohio's line charged offside to smother the Pitt ball carrier. The Buckeyes figured that the usual five yard penalty could not be invoked and there was a chance their tactics would prevent a score.

A penalty of half the distance to the goal line—18 inches—was called. Ohio State repeated on the next play and again was penalized, this time 9 inches. It was still second down.

Cutri, the Pittsburgh quarterback, knew that time was almost up, so called for a forward pass instead of an end run or another plunge. The pass was incomplete over the goal line for a touchback, and Ohio took the ball on its own 20 yard line. The game ended a few seconds later.

How Long Would It Last.

Officials and coaches here were debating whether or not Ohio State could have continued its offside play indefinitely, or until the penalties had to be measured in fractions of inches. Ohio was gaining five or six seconds on each play—the length of time elapsing between the start of the play and the blowing of the head linesman's whistle denoting a foul.

It was agreed that sooner or later Pitt would have sent a man over the goal on one of the offside plays, in which case Pitt could have declined the penalty and taken the distance gained, which would have meant a touchdown.

Saturday's game will renew a rivalry that started 23 years ago. Notre Dame has won four games of the series and one game resulted in a tie. Here are the scores:

1911—Notre Dame, 0; Pittsburgh, 0.
1912—Notre Dame, 3; Pittsburgh, 0.
1930—Notre Dame, 35; Pittsburgh, 19.

IRISH WORK ON PASSES.

The two centers, Ben Alexander of the varsity and Tom Gorman of the shock troops, were stopping everything in their territory behind the line of scrimmage.

The varsity backs, Lukats, Brancheau, and Melinkovich, also stopped the Pitt aerial attack cold, but the shock troops' backs were spotty and there was some doubt in the minds of observers whether they will start Saturday.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Miss Melody, a daughter of Prince of Wales-Mellingstar, owned by Stuyvesant Peabody, raced to victory in the Washington Park purse at Sportsman's Park yesterday.

She came galloping home over a muddy track the victor by three lengths and at about the time she dashed past the winning post tragedy entered into the battle.

Martha D., a fleet mud runner, was moving swiftly next to the rail and challenging desperately as they neared the finish line, when the incorrigible Volta Maid bore over on her and knocked her into the fence. When her head struck on one of the inner rail posts she was killed instantly.

Volta Maid Is Disqualified.

After the accident Volta Maid, which had finished second, was disqualified. The disqualification moved Miss Brilliant into second place and it placed Diaquri third.

The killing of Martha D. occurred directly in front of the packed stands and lawn where 7,000 spectators had gathered. She was owned by S. Gorbet, a far western turfman, and was a highly bred 3 year old daughter of Hourless-Highbrow. She had established quite a reputation as a mud runner. That was the reason the crowd made her the favorite in the race.

Miss Melody was easily the best in the field. When rain came up and caused the track to be muddy such flyers as Hot Shot, Karl Eitel, Malolo, and Wild Child were scratched.

Diaquri Takes Early Lead.

Diaquri, the half mile champion, was the early leader, but Miss Melody was right with her. As they flew down the back stretch Miss Melody pulled up closer, a stride at a time, and she headed the half mile track star just before they rounded the last turn.

This gave Miss Melody a clear track down the stretch. She made the best of it and was pulling away from all of them except the ill fated Martha D., which was making up much ground when Volta Maid bore over.

It was a fast run race, for Miss Melody stepped the five furlongs over a muddy track in 1:02 2-5, which was just a second off the track record. It would have taken a great horse to have beaten her in this struggle.

Miss Melody Pays $9.60.

When the plunge came on Martha D. and on Volta Maid, Very Well, and Miss Brilliant the price on Miss Melody soared. In the final wagering she paid $9.60. She has been running against the best 2 year olds in the west all season and she won like an even money shot.

The daily double found the stoutly backed Miss Sparking winning the second race and the outsider, Forget Not, capturing the third. The folks who coupled them collected $53.82 for a $2 ticket.

Numerous smart betters made a cleanup when Silver Wave won the first race. She started from an extreme outside post position. There was a plunge on her right from the time the betting started and when she came from behind to nip Morsun near the finish line she paid more than 4 to 1. Morsun saved second money and Monnie, a noted mud runner, could do no better than land in third place.

SHAMROCKS PRO FOOTBALL TEAM TO PLAY AURORA

The Chicago Shamrocks professional football team will meet the Aurora Yellow Jackets tomorrow night at the 124th Field Artillery armory, 52d street and Cottage Grove avenue, in the first home game of the season. The Shamrocks played a scoreless tie with the St. Louis Vets two weeks ago.

Among the players on the Shamrock team are Bernie Leahy, former Notre Dame half back; Bob Clark, who played at Northwestern; Ken Wendt and Joe King, Marquette; Jim Mooney, Georgetown; Joe Nash and Bucky Dahman, Notre Dame, and Chuck Braidwood, Chattanooga. The game will start at 8:30 o'clock.

Bears' Charity Game Committee Meets Tonight

The committee sponsoring the Little Company of Mary hospital benefit football game will meet tonight in the Palmer House. The game is to be played Sunday, Nov. 13, at Wrigley field by the Chicago Bears and Spartans of Portsmouth, O., and proceeds of tax free tickets sold in advance of the game will go to the charity fund of the hospital. Those expected to attend the meeting are Stuyvesant Peabody, chairman; Bishop Bernard J. Sheil, the Rev. Robert M. Kelley, president of Loyola university, and the Rev. Francis V. Corcoran, president of De Paul university.

MICHIGAN FRETS ABOUT B TEAM, NOT PRINCETON

Petoskey May Continue at Full Back Post.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—Today's work on Michigan's practice lots seemed to indicate that coaches take the game to be played between the B team and Ypsilanti Normal Saturday morning more seriously than they do the major game, which will find Michigan opposed to Princeton Saturday afternoon.

A team of reserve men, many of whom played against Illinois last week, scrimmaged the freshmen on South Ferry field, while the regulars played only touch football, but Kipke promised the first stringers that tomorrow afternoon would be something different.

Stan Fay was in uniform today, but did nothing more than toss a few passes. He will continue along the same program until shortly before the Indiana game. His return as No. 1 half back and the ability of Petoskey at full back raises the question as to what will happen when Fay goes back on full time. Petoskey may continue at end, but Kipke promised today he might be regarded as regular full back from now on. Newman is sure of his job, of course, and Regeczi is hardly likely to have to move. Everhardus, then, may have to split the half back assignments with Fay and Regeczi.

TIGERS DRILL IN CIVIES.

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—The Princeton coaching staff spent an hour and a half today instructing the Tiger varsity eleven in defense against Michigan plays in the first day of preparation for the Wolverines.

The players who saw action against the Navy Saturday were not in uniform but were on hand to receive instruction. They lined up in street clothes against the reserves and the coaches, who ran through Michigan plays for ninety minutes.

Assistant Coach Wieman, who formerly played and coached at Michigan, instructed the varsity in diagnosing the plays while passes from Martineau to Assistant Coach Dickinson showed the regulars that their pass defense must be alert if they hope to check the Wolverine aerial attack on Saturday.

Coach Crisler indicated today that strenuous drills, including scrimmage work, will be held tomorrow and Wednesday and a light workout will be held Thursday before the team leaves for Ann Arbor.

PURDUE TAKES REST CURE.

Lafayette, Ind., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—The rest cure for Purdue's regulars was prescribed this afternoon as the Boilermaker squad, battered by successive battles with Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Northwestern, looked forward to the intersectional game with New York university in the Yankee Stadium Saturday. Although there were no injuries of moment as the result of the Wildcat battle, the strain of three successive "key" games has taken its toll in cutting down the drive of the squad.

Despite the tie with Northwestern the brilliant blocking and driving of the Boilermaker backs, led by Roy Hortsmann and Fred Hecker, who piled up twenty first downs, coupled with the equally brilliant defensive work of the Purdue forwards, who held Northwestern to a gain of 64 yards on running plays, and stopped Pug Rentner, has tended to remove a part of the sting.

Horstmann's touchdown against the Wildcats enabled the Boilermakers to break the modern scoring record for successive games, formerly held by Notre Dame. Purdue has scored at least one touchdown in its last 36 games, and has been held scoreless only once in the last 46 games.

While the regulars were resting this afternoon the reserves were given an intensive dummy scrimmage drill on offense. Coach Noble Kizer announced that the regulars would be back in uniform tomorrow for a light drill, with a more intensive workout Wednesday. The squad will leave here Thursday noon for New York.

GOPHERS DRILL FOR N. U.

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—Two regular linemen—Gay, tackle, and Bruhn, guard, were unable to get into uniform today when Minnesota began a week of intensive drill for the Northwestern homecoming attraction. These two regulars suffered two badly bruised ribs in the Iowa game and while no fractures were discovered it is likely that they will see little service in practice this week.

Capt. Walt Hass also remained in the dressing room tonight for additional treatment to the charley horse that kept him out of most of Saturday's game. Griffin, quarter, and Lund, half back, had minor bruises, but donned uniforms long enough to listen to a chalk talk.

The regulars did practically no work today, being excused after a light limbering up drill, but the reserves underwent the most strenuous workout they have had in some time. Coach Bierman was well satisfied with the improvement his squad showed against Iowa, but told them that they will have to do that much better to cope with Northwestern on even terms here next Saturday.

WILDCATS TAKE REST.

Northwestern's football team was given the day off yesterday in order to rest up from the Purdue game and to contemplate the immediate future. The fact that the Wildcats meet Minnesota, Ohio, and Notre Dame on successive week-ends has caused considerable trepidation in the Purple stronghold.

Memories of last year's thrilling 32 to 14 victory over the Gophers are still fresh in the minds of the Wildcats. Badly beaten in the first quarter, which saw the powerful Minnesota team pile up two touchdowns in rapid order, the Wildcats staged a remarkable comeback to win in the final period.

Wildcat adherents have not counted the team out of the championship running, and figure that a win over Minnesota will keep Northwestern very much in the thick of things.

Northwestern's line will be bolstered by the return of Bob Gonya, star tackle, who was unable to play against Purdue because of a leg injury.

DICK TRACY—The Discovery

Light Drill Is Bruise Balm for Maroons

Chicago's surprising football team, undefeated in late October, would rather not have any surprises popping up this Saturday when Bob Zuppke brings his Illini to Stagg field. The Maroons are generally the favorite to win, but the long tradition of Chicago-Illinois games is full of upsets and hard fought contests.

Chicago's edge in the coming game has been cut down by the bruising the Maroons took in the Indiana battle last Saturday, which players say was one of the roughest they have ever encountered. Peter Zimmer, half back who scored one touchdown and passed the ball to Birney for the second, received a leg injury which may keep him out of the play this week, although his condition had improved yesterday. Vin Sahlin appeared at practice with 10 stitches in his upper lip.

ILLINI IN LONG DRILL.

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—Illinois today started preparations for the Maroon game at Chicago Saturday with a long but light practice session. Zeke Seamans, sophomore full back from Elgin, is being seriously considered as a starter for that post against the Maroons, as is Joe Vandyke at the left guard position.

Ack Bodman and Howard Johnson, guards, should be in shape for this week-end. Frank Froschauer, Pete Yanuskus, and Capt. Gil Berry were in the back field, with Seamans and Bill Hedtke, who played at guard against Michigan, was again at center, where he played last year. Three other centers, Bloom, Bennis, and Green, were absent from practice, but none is on the injured list. Casey Straw performed so well at end last Saturday that he has definitely become the first choice along with Ive Schustek. Hoeft and Born and Russell and Van Meter are other sets of wingmen who are considered.

HOOSIER SUBS GET CHANCE.

Bloomington, Ind., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—Indiana's football squad, chastened by its 13 to 7 defeat at Chicago, got down to hard work this afternoon in preparation for the intersectional game here Saturday with Mississippi State.

More substitutes will be given opportunities to replace regulars who didn't produce in the Maroon game, Coach Hayes announced as he looked forward not only to the Mississippi game, but to the Michigan clash here in a fortnight.

OHIO VARSITY IDLE.

Columbus, O., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—The first string Ohio State Buckeyes had a vacation today, not even appearing in uniform, while the reserves and substitutes battled in an offensive scrimmage session. If practice today is any criterion, Wisconsin, the Buckeyes' next foe, will be deluged under a barrage of passes for Coach Sam Willaman had his back field men hurling forwards by the score.

Several trick plays also were given to the secondary—ones which Willaman hopes will supply the needed punch in the Buckeye attack.

The Buckeyes have outgained all of their opponents this year, but have scored only one touchdown—that against Indiana, remaining scoreless against Michigan and Pittsburgh.

The Buckeyes' backfield will remain intact in the Wisconsin game, barring injuries, according to Willaman, with Carroll and Hinchman at halves, Cramer at quarter and Vuchinich at full back. The line with the exception of Salvaterra at end will remain unchanged.

NO REST FOR BADGERS.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—The Wisconsin Badgers ran through two hours of strenuous scrimmage this afternoon for Saturday's game with Ohio, a departure from the usual plan of resting the players on Monday following week-end games.

A running attack, as well as forward passes, was tried against the freshmen and second team members throughout scrimmage.

Coach Spears switched the men about rapidly in the line in an effort to find some one who would play the tackle position in place of Charles Goldenberg, who was declared ineligible.

Walker Directed to Answer Charges in Morton Ouster

Fred M. Walker last night appeared before the Cicero board of education and officially heard the charges that led to a notice removing him from the Morton High school athletic department within 30 days. The former University of Chicago athlete, who is football coach and instructor in physical education at the Cicero school, was directed to answer allegations of neglect of duty, made by Maj. W. P. McLean, director of physical education at Morton.

Walker will file his answer in writing within the next week.

Fencing Added to Women's Sports at U. of Illinois

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 24.—[Special.] Co-eds at the University of Illinois will have a new sport this winter. Fencing has been added to the list of sports in which women may compete and classes will get under way shortly. Miss Lillian Nelson, 6420 Justine avenue, Chicago, a junior in the college of liberal arts and sciences, is coach.

Cards Start Drills Today for Brooklyn

The Chicago Cardinals returned home from a two game invasion of the eastern part of the National Football league last night and today will begin preparation for the game Sunday afternoon at Wrigley field with Benny Friedman's Brooklyn Dodgers.

The Cards scored two victories, one over Boston and the other over Providence, as evidence that the system of play ordered by Coach Jack Chevigny is clicking.

The Cardinal record shows only one defeat, by Green Bay. They have played two ties, the scoreless one against the Bears in the mud and a 7 to 7 one with Portsmouth. In those five games the Cards displayed an effective defense against a forward pass attack such as Friedman and his mates favor.

Line Proves Its Worth.

Put to a severe test in Providence, the Cardinal line proved its strength, and it was this department which worried Chevigny when the season opened. "If our line holds up we'll win some games," Jack said during the second week of training. "Our backs will match any in the league."

That prediction was made before the acquisition of Lillard, a colored athlete who threatens to become the "Fritz Pollard" of the league. Local fans got a good look at this half back in the game with the Bears, for, despite the mire, Lillard showed his speed.

Cards Have Plenty of Backs.

Given a hard field, Lillard is expected to harass the Dodgers. If Brooklyn concentrates on Lillard, Malloy, Shelly, Holmer, Martin, Hill, Holm and Simas will be doing business.

Sunday's contest will be the first of a two game stand at Wrigley field. On Nov. 6 the Green Bay Packers will play here.

Ripon Meets Lawrence in Homecoming Saturday

Wesleyan Wins Victory Strike; Classes Halted

Bloomington, Ill., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—When students of Illinois Wesleyan university threatened today to "walk out" and cut classes in celebration of their first football victory over James Millikin since 1926, the university authorities dismissed classes, and permitted the students to attend free movies and other entertainment.

During practice today, Coach J. Norman Elliott of the football team, usually reticent concerning his team's chances of a championship, finally admitted that Wesleyan has an excellent opportunity for the Little 19 title this year, provided the Titans block and tackle as they did in the Millikin game.

He stressed the fact to his first squad that "Illinois Wesleyan teams, always contenders, have not won a Little 19 championship since 1910, and that the greatest opportunity in years was before the 1932 eleven."

N. U. Passes, Punts Make Up for Weak Line

Purdue Has Three Guesses.

The play is not unusual. The deception, of course, involved these possibilities (1) a plunge by Olson, (2) a run by Rentner, (3) a pass. Since it was fourth down with four yards to gain, the pass was the logical play and undoubtedly was anticipated by Purdue backs.

The play succeeded because it was timed perfectly. Potter received the ball immediately. Had there been a second delay, the defensive left half back would have blocked the throw. He was within two yards of Potter when the pass was completed.

Purdue's greatest weakness is its light line. In all its games Purdue has been forced to play seven men on the line of scrimmage. This has weakened the secondary defense on passes and both Minnesota and Northwestern took advantage. Minnesota completed 10 out of 18 forward passes against Purdue. Northwestern completed seven out of 10

FIVE CENT FARE IN N. Y. SUBWAYS ON THE WAY OUT

Politics and Economy Both Doom It.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 24.—[Special.]—The five cent subway fare, long a surefire vote getter in New York City, appears on the way out. Whether it is to die in the cause of honest economy or to appease the bankers who hold declining traction bonds is causing a lot of comment here today.

There is a belief in some quarters that Tammany has sold out to Wall street in a neat bit of political juggling whereby the straphanger has been sacrificed to insure funds for the continuation of the present scheme of bureaucratic rule.

Part Fare, Part Tax.

On the other hand, traction experts maintain that the city never has actually had a five cent fare. They point out that residents of New York pay their nickel at the turnstiles and from three to five cents more in indirect taxation. They contend that the five cent fare is the root of the city's financial troubles.

At the end of this fiscal year there was outstanding $637,670,536 in traction bonds. In addition there was $104,000,000 in bonds of the $204,000,000 issued for the new subways held by the city itself in the sinking fund.

The main trouble with these money raising efforts was that the subway investments have failed to pay for themselves. They have never returned a sufficient income to pay the interest and sinking fund charges against them. Also it is necessary to pay the companies operating them the sums to which they are contractually entitled. To meet this, from $15,000,000 to $18,000,000 has to be included in the budget each year to make up the deficit.

Bondholders Would Gain.

Who would profit by an increased fare? Not the straphangers, for their status technically would be unchanged except for methods of payment of fare. The owners of the traction bonds would reap the main profit in increased values, the city would gain, and in theory the taxpayer would have his burden lessened. Actually, he probably will not.

As an indication of what an increased fare would mean to the bankers and investment groups holding the bulk of the traction paper the recent fluctuation of city bonds offers a striking example. The halting of the economy measures of Acting Mayor McKee by a Tammany block reduced the total value of all New York City bonds about $139,027,033 in less than a month. Of this decrease about $50,000,000 was cut from traction bonds.

In Trade with Bankers.

With an actual higher fare in effect the reaction probably would carry the subway bonds up $50,000,000 to $75,000,000. Such a sum is worth fighting for and the man in the street believes the bankers made a trade with Tammany for that amount.

The conflicting statements made regarding the city's financial standing—one day they had to have a loan of $36,000,000 to meet urgent needs or face bankruptcy; a few days later, after voting 50 year bonds, Controller Charles Berry said he had found sufficient funds without aid of banks—is believed by many to have been a deal to kill the nickel fare.

SELLS PINT; LANDS IN BRIDEWELL.

Robert Williamson, 23 years old, 8218 Exchange avenue, was sent to the Bridewell yesterday by Municipal Judge Jay A. Schuler to serve out a $50 fine for selling a pint of liquor for 50 cents to Charles Hayworth, 26 years old, 7731 East End avenue.

DR. I. S. LEAVITT DIES AT AGE 89; NOTED EDUCATOR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 24.—[Special.]—Dr. Isaac S. Leavitt, 89, Methodist divine who was the oldest living graduate of the University of Wisconsin, and was noted as an educator and philanthropist, died last night.

He was a native of Eaton, Que., who went to Wisconsin as a boy, worked on his father's farm and worked his way through the university in Madison.

Following his graduation in 1868 he went to Louisiana and became first president of New Orleans university, from which he retired to become a Methodist minister, serving charges in Janesville, Edgerton, and Fort Atkinson, and Oshkosh, Wis.

At one time he was presiding elder of the Milwaukee district. He left the active ministry in 1893 and went to Omaha, where he spent five years as assistant superintendent of the Child Saving institute, and where he saw fortunate investments in real estate grow into wealth which later made possible his large donations to institutions of learning and to individuals.

Nelson De Golyer, Retired Grain Broker, Dies at 85

Nelson De Golyer, retired Board of Trade member, died yesterday at his home, 1100 Hinman avenue, Evanston. He was 85 years old. About 1870 Mr. De Golyer went into the street paving business in Chicago. Five years later he became a grain broker and kept his membership until about twenty years ago. He had resided in Evanston for more than fifty years. Surviving Mr. De Golyer are a daughter, Marjorie, and three sons, Donald, Laurence, and Robert.

MRS. GOODSPEED LEAVES $750,000 TO SON AND FRIENDS

The will of Mrs. Harriett Howe Goodspeed, who died on Oct. 6 in Columbus, O., at the age of 72, was filed for probate yesterday before Oscar S. Caplan, assistant to Probate Judge Horner. The bulk of the estate, the total value of which is estimated at $750,000, is left to her son, Charles B. Goodspeed, 2430 Lake View avenue.

Mrs. Goodspeed provided annuities of $1,200 each for ten women friends living in the east, and made outright bequests totaling $45,000 to six other friends. She left $5,000 to Conrad Stengel, 913 North St. Louis avenue, her chauffeur, and $10,000 to the community church at Osterville, Mass., where she had a summer home.

In case her son fails to survive her by six months, the will provides that $100,000 shall be given to the Fourth Presbyterian church and the rest of the residual estate to the Presbyterian hospital.

Mrs. Edward J. McCarthy Dies Suddenly in Wilmette

Mrs. Mina McCarthy, 72 years old, 843 Sheridan road, Wilmette, died suddenly of heart disease yesterday in her home. She was the wife of Edward J. McCarthy, treasurer of the John V. McCarthy company, Chicago paving contractors. Her husband and five children, Mrs. John A. Kolb of Wilmette, John V. McCarthy of Chicago, Edward J. McCarthy Jr. of Chicago, and Edith and Gerald McCarthy of Wilmette, survive.

Estate of Carleton Vail Is Valued at $100,000

The estate of Carleton M. Vail, Chicago insurance broker who was killed Oct. 15 in an automobile accident at Sturgeon Bay, Wis., amounts to $100,000, all in personal property, it was stated yesterday in a petition for probate of his will, filed at Waukegan. The bulk of the estate goes to Mrs. Winifred Vail, his widow, 950 Lincoln avenue, Highland Park.

FOOT IRRITATION HEALED AS IF BY MAGIC

"I suffered for a long time with perspiring and cracked feet—often called "athlete's foot"—and all the treatments I tried brought no relief. We keep Resinol on hand, having used it with wonderful results for boils, burns, etc., and one night I decided to try it for my feet. The next morning, as if by magic, the cracks seemed to be healing. For a week I continued the treatment and the cracks completely healed and there was no sign of perspiration." (Signed)—Ray E. Lopes, 2245 Cloverfield Bird., Santa Monica, Cal.

CHAS. THORNTON, LAWYER, EX-CITY OFFICIAL, IS DEAD

Charles S. Thornton, 81 years old, former corporation counsel and member of the board of education, died yesterday in his home at 7600 Stewart avenue.

Mr. Thornton was born in Boston of revolutionary stock. He was admitted to the Illinois bar in 1873. He was a friend of the elder Carter H. Harrison, and managed one of his campaigns for mayor. He was appointed corporation counsel by the younger Harrison, serving from 1897 to 1899.

In 1914 Mr. Thornton was counsel for a group of English and New York investors who offered to construct a subway in Chicago. He was also the author of the state teachers' pension act. He retired two years ago from the practice of law.

His widow, Mrs. Jessie Fremont Benton Thornton, and four children, Chancellor B. Thornton, Mrs. Mabel T. Walbridge, Mrs. Pearl T. Knoettge and Mrs. Hattie T. Douglass, all of Chicago, survive.

Funeral services for Joseph Barclay Fleming Jr., 19 years old, who was killed last Friday in an automobile collision at Cambridge, Mass., were held yesterday in the Holy Nativity church, 95th street and Longwood drive. Burial was in Mount Hope cemetery. He was the son of Attorney Joseph B. Fleming, 907 North Sheridan road, Lake Forest. Young Fleming, a junior at Williams college, was driving with two friends when another automobile crashed into them.

David M. Flynn, Geneva Banker, Dead at Age of 64

David M. Flynn, banker, died yesterday of heart disease at his home at 102 South 5th street, Geneva. Mr. Flynn, who was 64 years old, was vice president of the Geneva State bank and secretary of the Geneva Building and Loan association. He was born in Elburn, Ill., but had lived in Geneva for forty-five years. Under President Wilson he served as Geneva's postmaster. He is survived by his widow and two sons.

BANKERS URGE LEGAL BEER TO CUT U. S. DEFICIT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Oct. 24.—Uncle Sam could wipe out at least $754,000,000 of that treasury deficit of his by legalizing the manufacture of beer and imposing a tax on the beverage, the Investment Bankers' association was told at the opening session of its convention here today.

COL. ALLAN M. POPE.

The estimate was made by the federal taxation committee of the organization. In a report submitted following the opening preliminaries of the convention the committee estimated that a tax up to 40 cents a gallon on beer would bring in the equivalent of three-fourths of the federal income tax collected in the last fiscal year.

The comittee submitted that "the assistance of such additional revenue in the present emergency, representing a voluntary payment, cannot be disregarded.

No Additional Spending.

"On the present estimated consumption of illegal beer a very substantial portion of this tax revenue would not represent additional expenditure on the part of the public but a diversion of funds now going into bootlegging channels."

Edward Hopkinson of J. P. Morgan & Co. heads the committee submitting the report.

Col. Allan M. Pope, president of the association, in his opening address told the convention that the bond defaults of the depression had cost bond investors surprisingly little. He interpreted this disclosure, which he said was brought out through research, as evidence of the "comparative safety of bonds."

Cites Default Figures.

Col. Pope read figures to show that of $7,500,000,000 of foreign dollar bonds outstanding, 19.4 per cent are in default; of $10,584,000,000 of industrial bonds outstanding, 7.2 per cent, and of $16,590,000,000 of public utility bonds, 5.4 per cent; of $12,021,000,000 of railroad bonds, 3.5 per cent.

"Had not American bankers reexported capital during the post-war years through the flotation of foreign loans the internal overexpansion in this country would have gone far beyound the point that it did," Col. Pope said. "If this flow of excess funds had not gone abroad, from whence millions of it were at once returned through increased trade and other repayments, conditions in Europe would have been so disastrously affected to our own economic detriment that our present condition, bad as it has been, would have been far worse today."

Bankers Urge Tax Cut.

Real estate taxes must be substantially reduced, taxing powers of local and state governments be restricted and in addition a barrier erected to prevent taxes soaring again with the return of prosperity, the bankers were cautioned in the report of the real estate securities committee. Louis K. Boysen, vice president of the First Union Trust and Savings bank of Chicago, is chairman.

An active market in real estate at fair prices cannot be expected, the report declares, until there's something that looks like normal prosperity, accompanied with a substantial reduction in realty taxes. It adds that it's extremely important to every one that the value of real estate be reëstablished on a better basis.

Most of the report was taken up with a comprehensive outline of the present real estate mortgage situation and its remedies through various types of reorganizations. It also urged a uniform foreclosure law throughout the United States.

Raps Home Loan Bank Act.

Mr. Boysen's committee told the American bankers that from a practical standpoint there's but one logical way to handle a foreclosed property for the best interests of the bondholders and that is by a voting trust. He then outlined the scope and development of the liquidating land trust originated by the Chicago Title and Trust company.

The committee took a rap at the home loan bank act, which it characterized as "hardly broad enough to be able to handle loans direct to home owners and for that reason will hardly accomplish the desired relief during the present period of distress."

"The breakdown of real estate bond issues referred to in the 1930 and 1931 annual reports of your committee has continued during 1932 in an ever-increasing volume," the report states. "Unemployment and the consequent inability to pay rent, together with excessive taxation, have forced many real estate bond issues into foreclosure that otherwise would have weathered the storm.

Must Have Tax Reduction.

"It is said that the average real estate tax paid by the railroads in this country and covering all types of real estate, both agricultural and urban, is over 2 per cent of its estimated value. If this is a fair average of the taxes collected on real estate throughout the United States, it means that the equivalent of 2 per cent interest is paid by the owners of real estate into the tax coffers of local and state governments.

"Present taxes may be reduced but the return of prosperity will see them mount again unless restricted by a barrier beyond which they cannot go. Such restrictions should exclude from their application levies for the payment of municipal and state obligations lawfully incurred."

Anti-Trust Laws Force Trade Waste

BY SCRUTATOR.

One of the grave problems of trade and industry is to eliminate the economic waste of cutthroat competition and yet not violate the anti-trust laws. In fact, it is likely that a campaign for modification of these laws will be undertaken during the next congress.

One of the stories told of the late E. H. Gary, who for many years was head of the United States Steel corporation, was his method of enlisting coöperation. It is sai that when he presided at meetings of the American Iron and Steel Institute he would indicate to executives of other steel companies certain base prices that United States Steel intended to make and add: "The rest of you can do as you please." More often than not the other companies followed the United States Steel price schedules.

Oil Industry Similar.

Methods somewhat similar have been rather common in the petroleum industry. It has been noticeable that on occasions when the dominating oil company in a given territory has announced price changes on either crude oil or gasoline other companies have been quick to "meet" the advance or decline.

However, such informal ways of coöperating are not satisfactory, although they have been about the best industry can do. Originally the anti-trust laws were formulated to safeguard consumers against extortionate prices, although in recent years they have resulted in many economic wastes. However, whenever industries have suggested ways of securing legal coöperation the federal authorities have taken the attitude that the laws must be enforced strictly as long as they are statutes.

Ban Selling Agency.

This attitude is evident in the most recent attempt of coal operators of Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee to coöperate in marketing their product. They formed Appalachian Coals, Inc., as a regional sales agency to act for all of the companies, but a special federal court in Virginia pronounced the project in violation of the anti-trust laws and the case now has been appealed to the United States Supreme court.

The coal selling agency was formed by 137 companies which produce about 70 per cent of bituminous coal in the southern field. Its plan was to apportion orders to the member producers on the basis of their average individual output over a period prior to formation of the selling agency, which is owned by the various companies.

Assert It's No Monopoly.

The coal companies contended that their plan is designed to effect "coöperative competition." They argued that it is not in restraint of trade because the selling agency has to compete with other producers in the southern field and elsewhere who are not members of the selling agency. Therefore, it was said that all the elements of competition are maintained.

But the principal plea of the companies was that the selling agency would greatly reduce economic wastes. Selling expenses would be reduced by elimination of a large number of salesmen maintained by the different companies. At the same time it was claimed that this method of coöperative selling would provide a more regular running time for the mines and would result in more stabilized employment and better conditions for the miners employed.

The ultimate action of the Supreme court is of interest, as a favorable decision probably would lead both the coal and other industries to form similar agencies. An unfavorable decision is likely to bring renewed pressure for changes in the anti-trust laws to render them more lenient to business.

N. Y. PASSENGER TRAFFIC FALLS UNDER 3 BILLION

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 24.—The combined traffic for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1932, on rapid transit lines, street railways, the Hudson tubes and the bus lines amounted to 2,960,800,000 passengers, the transit commission reported today.

The report noted that the traffic total had dropped for the first time below the 3,000,000,000 mark established in 1927. The traffic decrease was 171,000,000 passengers, or a drop of 5.5 per cent below the total for 1931. This represented an average daily decrease of 503,000 passengers.

Compared with 1930 the total traffic decrease amounted to 282,800,000 passengers, or 8.7 per cent.

British Pound Drops 7 5/8 Cts. to Year's Low

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 24.—While the Bank of England stood aside making no effort to check the movement the pound sterling today plunged nearly 8 cents to $3.31¾, the lowest price since last December.

The exchange, shaken by last week's sudden withdrawal of support opened 5¾ cents below Saturday's final price at $3.33⅜, dipped to $3.32¾, rallied on short covering to $3.34½ and then slowly but persistently weakened until the low for the day, $3.31¾, was reached near the close of trading. The final price, $3.31¾, represented a net loss on the day of 7⅝ cents.

Break Widest Since Dec. 18.

The break in sterling was the widest since Dec. 18, when the pound fell 10 cents. Trading was in fair volume and fluctuations of ¼ to ½ cent between transactions were common.

As was the case last week when sterling was "stepped down" from the support level in the neighborhood of $3.45 maintained for over two months, today's sharp fall in the pound was looked upon by banking authorities here as a manifestation of British fiscal policy rather than an indication that the Bank of England had exhausted its means of supporting the exchange.

Pressure too Great.

It is apparent, local bankers said, that the Bank of England found it inexpedient to continue to maintain a stable sterling rate at the levels adhered to between the beginning of August and two weeks ago, in view of the pressure upon the exchange from seasonal and other factors. The autumn is traditionally a period of weakness for sterling due to British purchases of cotton and other raw material in this market.

In addition the London market is faced with withdrawals by foreign holders of unassented 5 per cent war loan bonds which fall due on Dec. 1. The final results of the 2,086,000,000 pounds war loan conversion operation just completed by Britain showed 165,000,000 pounds [about $597,800,000 at current rates of exchange] had not been converted but remained to be redeemed in cash. Virtually all of these unassented bonds, it is believed, are held by foreigners who will want to repatriate their money.

Dollar Strong in Paris.

PARIS, Oct. 24.—(AP)—The American dollar rose two centimes on the exchange today. It was attributed partly to steady purchase of American securities by financial interests in France, convinced that the United States is definitely on the road to economic recovery.

Wall St. Hears American Zinc Enters Profit Group

New York, Oct. 24.—(AP)—Wall street hears that the American Zinc, Lead, and Smelting company entered the profit column in the third quarter and stands a good chance of winding up the year in a more favorable position than a year ago. In the final quarter last year the company took heavy inventory losses, an experience which is not likely to be repeated this year.

Federal Bank Extend Big Loan to Rice Growers Co-op

Lake Charles, La., Oct. 24.—(AP)—A $2,000,000 loan by the Federal Intermediate Credit bank of New Orleans to the American Rice Growers' Cooperative association for commodity loans to its members in Louisiana, Arkansas, and Texas was announced today by Homer L. Brinkley of Lake Charles, general manager of the association.

LONDON DOESN'T HEAR STERLING IS DOWN, BUT 'GOLD LEAPS UP AGAIN'

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Oct. 24.—The break in sterling which took the pound to the lowest level since Dec. 2, shook almost every department of the stock exchange. Financial writers professed to be undisturbed, however, and the outside public was kept calm by newspaper tactics recalling the classic headline one London paper once used: "Great Channel Storm—Continent Isolated." The example was Rothermere's Evening News, the most widely circulated afternoon paper, which warded off possible fears today by the following headline "Gold Leaps Up Again. Sovereign Worth 28 Shillings, Eight Pence Today the Highest This Year." Readers were then told the fluctuation was due to a "sharp jump in the price of gold." And not until the end of the story was the fall of sterling mentioned.

Anticipation is that sterling will fall still lower before the end of the year, but as the London Times financial editor points out "as long as the budget remains balanced and there is no inflation there must be definite limits to the fall of the pound."

Washington, Oct. 24.—(AP)—Nearly 5,000 banks with 14,340,000 depositors have been told by the Reconstruction Finance corporation they may borrow $853,496,289 from the government.

The corporation's report today said total loans authorized up to Sept. 30 to banks and trust companies, insurance companies and building and loan associations were $1,016,328,228. Among the depositors of the 4,973 banks, the announcement estimated, about 900,000 had their funds in closed institutions.

In addition to the loans to banks and trust companies, the corporation said $75,193,200 had been authorized for 88 insurance companies with 14,898,000 policy holders and $87,638,738 to 736 building and loan associations with 1,544,000 members.

Loans of $44,178,509 were authorized to the receivers, or liquidating agents, of closed banks to enable them to make an early distribution of funds to the depositors, the corporation said, or to affect reorganization which would allow the banks to reopen.

COPPER PRICE CUT TO 5¾ CENTS TO MOVE STOCKS

Custom smelters had lowered the quotation from 6¼ to 6 cents last week in an effort, they explained, to move stocks a little more rapidly. They reported that they had tired of holding the price above 6 cents as stocks were beginning to accumulate The market today was reported quiet.

Foreign copper prices declined in sympathy with domestic prices. In forenoon dealings, some transactions were reported abroad at 5.50 cents a pound, but after the reduction here a figure of 5.40 cents was posted.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 24.—Wall street awaits the action of United Steel directors at their meeting tomorrow on the final quarterly dividend on the preferred stock, with a fair degree of confidence that the regular rate of $7 annually will be maintained.

At the same time there are those in authoritative quarters who take the opposite view, largely because it has cost big steel some $73,000,000 in the last two years to pay cash dividends on the preferred and the common stocks, and the board at its meeting when the third quarter preferred dividend was declared, intimated that the resources could not be drained much longer unless there was a definite improvement in business.

From the viewpoint of those who hope the regular payment will be made the fair improvement in production in the last few weeks plus the recent cut in the price of steel rails, which they feel will stimulate the placing of heavy orders by the carriers, are considered as the best reasons why the preferred dividend will be continued.

On the other hand, those who feel the dividend may be deferred tomorrow point to the fact that the increased operations of the industry have not boosted earnings, while the gain in unfilled tonnage has not been large enough to make any material difference.

BANK DEPOSITS UP 153 MILLION IN LAST WEEK

But Loans Show No Increases.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Leading commercial banks throughout the United States gained 153 million dollars in deposits in the week ended Oct. 19, according to the federal reserve statement on member bank position released yesterday afternoon.

Excluding the 48 million increase in government deposits the gain in time and demand deposits was 105 millions, divided as follows: Time deposits, 32 millions; demand deposits, 73 millions.

This further increases the liquid condition of banks, and it illustrates the steady return of public confidence in banks. Depositors' money began to pour back into the banks in July and it has continued to flow back ever since.

The banker's present problem is where to find good borrowers. Despite the gain of 153 millions in deposits last week there was no increase in commercial loans. In fact, total loans and discounts of reporting member banks actually decreased 2 millions.

These banks partially solved their problem by investing 131 additional millions in United States government securities and 11 more millions in other securities. They also reduced their total borrowings from the federal reserve banks 13 millions.

U. S. LOANS AT LOW RATE

Meanwhile, the United States treasury continues to take advantage of the fact that the banks have hundreds of millions of dollars of excess cash for which they have no satisfactory loan or investment demand.

Acting Secretary of the Treasury Ballantine last night announced that the offering of 80 millions or thereabouts of 91-day treasury bills which were offered last Thursday had been met with applications totaling 227 millions.

The highest bid made was 99.97, which is equivalent to an interest rate of about 0.12 per cent on an annual basis. The average rate for bids accepted was about 0.20 per cent.

Sues to Name New Receiver for Land Bank

The right of the federal farm loan board to maintain the receivership over a joint stock land bank is being questioned by one of the bondholders of the Chicago Joint Stock land bank, whose suit to protect a bondholder's interests was being heard in the federal District court of Judge James H. Wilkerson here today.

The petitioner, W. E. Brusselbock of St. Louis, owner of a $4,000 bond of the defunct land bank, contends not only that a federal court receiver in equity should be named for the bondholders, but that assets not included by the bank's officers in the bondholders' trust fund should be turned over to the credit of the bonds outstanding.

Sues Receiver and Board.

His petition, filed by Townley, Campbell, Wild & Clarke, charges that the bank's total liabilities are 45 million dollars and its total assets are $27,000,000. Defendants in the action are John B. Gallagher, named as receiver by the loan board and formerly president of the bank, and the federal farm loan board, represented by Clayton R. Evans, general counsel.

Opposing the petition, hearings on which will be continued today by Judge Wilkerson, is a bondholders' protective committee which was formed in New York Oct. 10, represented by Wilson & McIlvane. The firm of Pam & Hurd are representing the present receiver, Mr. Gallagher.

Yesterday's Testimony.

Testimony yesterday dealt with the claims of the petition that a federal receiver should be appointed in order that all assets of the bank might be credited to bondholders. It is also maintained that the farm loan board has not power to collect from stockholders under the double liability provisions of joint stock land bank ownership.

Similar actions to this taken by creditors of other land banks have sometimes resulted in operation of the institutions by two receivers, a statutory receiver appointed by the loan board and an equity receiver appointed by the federal court. It was stated yesterday the two might operate without conflicting, each exercising a different function.

Katy Road President Sees Trade Gain Unmistakable

Kansas City, Oct. 24.—(AP)—Michael H. Cahill, president of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas railroad, said today an upward trend in business in the southwest is unmistakable. "For the second consecutive week," the rail official said, "our carloadings have shown an increase over the corresponding week last year."

MIDDLE WEST LOANS VALUED AT 14 CENTS A $1

Audit Report Today; 25 Cents Possible.

The first comprehensive report on The current condition of the Middle West Utilities company will be made tomorrow when members of the Charles S. Dewey committee, representing holders of $40,000,000 in debentures of the big Insull holding company, will meet in the offices of their attorneys to learn how much their claims are worth in cash today.

CHAS. G. DEWEY.

The report, as drawn by Attorney Robert N. Golding and audited by the firm of Peat, Marmick, Mitchell & Co., will show that the current position of Middle West is at least twice as strong as the market price of the debentures indicates, according to Mr. Golding. The debentures have been selling from 6½ to 7 on the New York curb.

Worth 14 to 25 Cents on Dollar.

"Paring the assets to the bone and expanding the liabilities to the ultimate point, we find that Middle West is still worth 14 cents on the dollar to the creditors," Mr. Golding said. "Allowing for the recapture from the banks of assets which we maintain were illegally pledged, the debentures are worth as high as 25 cents on the dollar. The condition of Middle West is far less desperate than the market on the debentures would indicate."

Insull accounting methods were tossed in the junk pile in making the Dewey committee's appraisal, Mr. Golding said. Under Insull management the Middle West directors, who have since been replaced, had declared a dividend four months before receivership occurred, which dividend the receivers, E. N. Hurley and Charles A. McCulloch, canceled as soon as they took charge.

New York, Oct. 24.—Unsteadiness marked the opening of the new week in the bond market, prices easing with few exceptions on a small volume of trading. Speculative issues, notably the railroads, were most sensitive to the prevailing lack of investment interest.

Obligations of such roads as Chicago and North Western, New York Central, Baltimore and Ohio and others dropped from 1 to 3 points at their worst levels. Losses of lesser degree ruled the rest of the list.

Moves Against Trend.

Moving against the trend, however, was the 6 per cent note issue of the New York, Chicago and St. Louis railroad.

Principal losses in secondary rail bonds, besides those of Chicago and North Western, New York Central and the Baltimore and Ohio, were in Southern Pacific refunding 4s, Southern railway general 4s, Pennsylvania 5s and many others.

Recessions in prime rail issues included such bonds as Atchison general 4s, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis and Cleveland 4s, Norfolk and Western consolidated 4s and others. A point of strength in high grade rails was the issue of consolidated 4 per cent bonds due 1933 of the Soo Line.

U. S. Issues Easy.

United States government issues were uniformly easy, with interest on the part of banks, either from an investment or trading angle, at a minimum. One fear, typical of that which is at present deterring investors from new commitments, is that the present easy money policy of the federal reserve system might conceivably be altered with a change of administration, thus injuring the foundation of the present level of high-grade bond prices.

Foreign buying of American securities, most apparent in foreign dollar bonds, also showed a waning tendency today.

Bohn Aluminum and Brass.

Please furnish me with your latest report on Bohn Aluminum and Brass. —R. C. R.

Bohn Aluminum and Brass corporation is one of the largest producers of aluminum and brass castings. The automobile trade normally takes about 40 per cent of output. Its principal customers are Studebaker, Ford, Hudson, Chrysler, Nash and Packard.

The remainder of its business is with vacuum cleaner, refrigerator, radio, washing machine and aircraft companies, and companies engaged in the building trade.

Current income reflects the low rate of activity in the automobile industry. Net income of $271 in the third quarter and net loss of $763 in the second quarter of 1932 brought net loss for the first nine months of 1932 to $74,000, against net income of $913,000, or $2.59 per share, for the first nine months of 1931.

Year-end writedown of inventories to market prices as of Dec. 31, 1931, reduced net for the full 1931 year to $295,000, or 84 cents per share. Net income in 1930 was $726,000, or $2.06 per share. In 1929 net was $2,620,000, against $3,185,000 in 1928.

Sales for 1931 were not reported. Sales in 1930 were $14,082,000, against $33,244,000 in 1929.

On Dec. 31, 1931, current assets were $4,987,000, and current liabilities were $325,000. Cash assets were $461,000 and inventories [at market] were $3,785,000. Working capital was $4,662,000, against $5,029,000 the year before.

Funded debt totals $1,875,000. There are outstanding 352,418 shares of no par capital stock. No dividend has been paid since the 37½ cent disbursement on Jan. 2, 1932.

An upturn in metal prices would be beneficial. Copper, aluminum, tin, and lead are the chief inventory items. Any substantial improvement apparently must await increased automobile output and generally increased consumer buying.

Islands Gas and Electric.

Please give me the standing of Manila Gas 5½s.—G. K.

Islands Gas an Electric company, formerly Manila Gas company, furnishes utility services in Haiti, Dominican Republic, Philippines, Canary Islands and Mallorca. It is part of the Central Public Utility system.

Income available for interest and depreciation in 1931 was $1,299,000, against $1,288,000 in 1930. Bond interest in 1931 was $818,000, and in 1930 $320,000. On Dec. 31, 1931, current assets were $1,833,000 and current liabilities were $915,000. Cash was $49,000.

Pit Ignores Removal of U. S. Restrictions.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Persistent selling of wheat futures in small lots carried all deliveries into new low ground for the season yesterday with December touching 47¼c on the break. The latter was only 2⅝c above the extreme inside figure at which any future ever sold on the Chicago Board of Trade, a price of 44¼c being recorded in October, 1931.

Stop loss orders were uncovered on the way down, while buying by holders of bids and by commission houses furnished the bulk of the support. The close was at net losses of ½@⅝c. December finished at 47⅝@47¾; May, 52@52¼, and July 54⅝@54¾c.

A sharp break in sterling exchange had some effect on sentiment. The pit element ignored the removal of the so-called restrictions on trading in grain futures and it was not regarded as a factor in the situation at the present time owing to the limited speculative interest.

Saturday's sales of wheat were officially reported at 5,375,000 bu in all futures, the smallest with three exceptions since Jan. 8, 1921 when the grain futures administration started to make daily reports. On Jan. 26, 1924 the aggregate was only 4,031,000 bu.

Winnipeg Wheat Unchanged.

Winnipeg wheat again received good support at 50c for December and 54⅛c for the May, and closed at these figures or the same as on Saturday while the October was ⅛c higher at 49⅝c. There was buying of futures here against sales at Winnipeg by spreaders. Liverpool closed ⅝@1⅛c lower, with December at 53⅞c, figured on the basis of $3.34 for sterling.

Scattered lots of Manitoba wheat were reported as being sold for export and the total was finally estimated at 500,000 bu in all positions. Further beneficial rains fell in the southern part of Argentina, and Broomhall expressed the belief that it would be necessary to raise his estimate of 214,000,000 bu for the crop if weather remained favorable.

Freight rates on Canadian wheat from the head of the lakes to Montreal have been reduced ½c to 6¼c per bu in Canadian funds which are around 7⅜ per cent discount from par.

A decrease of 768,000 bu in the domestic visible supply brought the total down to 186,147,000 bu, compared with 225,078,000 bu last year. Movement of wheat in all sections of the winter and spring wheat belt is now lighter than last year, reflecting the holding tendency on the part of the farmer.

As the trade sees it, wheat prices will have to decline to a point where American grain can be sold abroad, and when this occurs the acreage in other exporting countries will probably have to be reduced in order to bring about a better balance between supply and demand. It is claimed that the withholding of American wheat from the world's market has permitted other countries to increase their acreage.

Corn Sells at New Low.

December and May corn dropped fractionally to new low levels for the season to date with December touching 25c, at which figure it equalled the low established in December, 1896, and was only 4¼c above the inside price at which that delivery sold in December, 1896, the lowest known. Weakness in wheat had some effect. On the break there was good buying headed by a house with seaboard connections, and the close was on a small rally with net losses of ¼c. December was 25¼; May, 30⅛@30¼c, and July, 31⅜c at the last.

According to trade gossip 100,000 bu or more cash corn was sold to exporters during the day, while the domestic trade took 120,000 bu and charters were made for 100,000 bu to Buffalo. Country offerings to arrive were limited with 50,000 bu booked by local handlers. The visible supply was swelled 3,008,000 bu during the last week to 26,196,000 bu, the largest known at this season in over 52 years, with the exception of 1897. A year ago the total was 7,268,000 bu.

Oats were dull but failed to get into new low ground. The close was about steady with December, 15⅞@16c, and May, 18¾@18¾c. May rye sold at a new low in sympathy with wheat. Net losses for the day were ⅝c with December, 31½c, and May, 34⅜c.

EGG FUTURES EASIER

Butter and egg futures showed but slight changes at the close on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday, butter being unchanged to ⅛c higher and eggs off 1@1½c. Trading was quiet. Selling started fairly active in egg futures but died out later and the market held to the close with but slight change. The statistical report were bearish last week's movement out of the ten markets being over 60,000 cases under last year and the daily movement 15,000 less. December eggs opened trading for the year with first sales at 23½c. Butter news was bullish and brought out fair support early but it died out and selling came slightly at the close. Movement of butter last week was heavier than last year and the daily four market report showed a cut of 200,000 lbs in the surplus. Sale: Butter, 70 cars; eggs, 91 cars. Deliveries: Eggs, 3 cars. Estimated receipts at Chicago today: Cattle, 8,000; hogs, 20,000; sheep, 14,000.

Hogs attempted a weak rally at the opening yesterday, but it was not long before buyers started to work on quotations again and had costs back in line with the low spot of last week. The creeping early advance put prices up 5@10c in places. The higher level did not stick long, however. The market has been "on the run" so long it has become a habit in the trade to regard all recoveries with a certain amount of skepticism. Yesterday was no exception.

The advance, though slight, lacked supporters and weakness was in evidence even while the selling side held quotations tilted upward for a short time at the opening. The bear market was again in progress late at the lowest prices in four months. Peak prices reached $3.70 on the early bulge, showing 10c gain over Saturday. The general average at $3.45 equaled Saturday and stood 5c under last Friday's average.

Receipts of hogs at all leading markets have been exceptionally light for some time, but the inspected slaughter for the United States, including country points, is above average. Yesterday's receipts at the eleven markets at only $7,000 compared with 170,000 a year ago. October receipts are smallest in several years. The total at Chicago for the first 24 days of the month at 337,100 compared with 497,034 in 1931.

Two Way Battle Trend.

A two-way trend developed in the cattle alleys yesterday. Prime weighty beef steers were exceptionally scarce and these were favored with a better eastern call at strong to unevenly higher prices. Others ruled weaker and trading in all but the topnotchers turned rather sticky before the session ended. Only a half dozen loads of "stick-outs" got by the $9.00 line which was last week's practical top.

One string of 36 Iowa steers averaging 1,354 lbs, sold to order buyers at $9.65, making the highest cattle sale in 12 days. Bulk of beef steers sold at $5.75@8.00 and poorest grades ranged down to $4.00. Occasional lots of ill-bred grassy cattle sold lower.

Butcher stock sold slowly at about steady prices. Most cows were of the class listed at $2.75@3.25. A few choice kinds reached $3.50@4.00. Bulls ruled weak to 10c lower. Calves lost 25@50c more. A larger number of stockers and feeders were available at steady prices yesterday.

Best Lambs Steady.

Top lambs held firm, while others ruled weak to 25c lower, the market for replacement stock sharing in the downturn. Range lambs sold for slaughter up to $5.75, with top natives to city butchers at $5.65 and to packers at $5.50. Movement in all classes dragged, and the close was lowest of the day.

Country buyers found a generous supply of medium to good feeding lambs available at $4.25@4.50, but they had to pay upwards to $5.00@5.25 for their own selection of the black face feeders. Receipts continue light at most markets. The combined total at the 7 points yesterday at 89,000 compared with 132,000 a year ago. The run at Chicago for the first 24 days of this month at 319,000 compares with 402,229 a year ago.

Receipts at Chicago for today are estimated at 8,000 cattle, 20,000 hogs, and 14,000 sheep, against 7,572 cattle, 21,673 hogs, and 13,737 sheep the previous Tuesday and 7,567 cattle, 32,956 hogs, and 18,967 sheep a year ago.

GRAHAM-PAIGE CUTS CAPITAL; APPLY ON LOSS

Graham-Paige Motors corporation stockholders yesterday voted to reduce the authorized capital from $7,000,000 to $5,516,000. The higher capitalization was represented by 30,000 shares of first preferred stock of $100 par value, 40,000 shares of second preferred of $100 par value and 2,500,000 shares of no-par common stock.

This is reduced to 30,000 shares of first preferred, 165 shares of second preferred, and 2,500,000 shares of $1 par value common stock. The amount of the reduction resulting from the exchange to $1 par value from the no-par common stock is to be transferred to capital surplus, against which will be applied the deficit from operations accumulated to Dec. 31, 1932, and such write-downs on properties as may be determined upon during the current year.

SOLUTION TO THE MIGHTY ARE FALLEN.
Barrow had not been out of his room for twenty-four hours. The PENNED postcript to his confession was dated the day of his death. Yet there was no fountain pen or ink found in the room!
